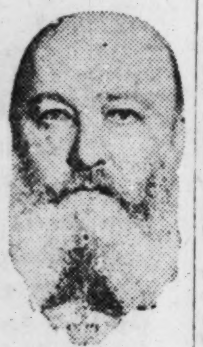
BRITISH LABOR PEACE DAWNS

IN WAR WITH JAPAN, WHAT OF ENGLAND?

Enemy of America, Von Tirpitz's View.

Admiral von Tirpitz writes from the viewpoint of a German militarist and a propagandist who bears no love toward the allies, but his ability as a commentator on international relations is admitted and his discussions thus have value to American students of U. S. relations to other powers.

BY ALFRED VON TIRPITZ.
[Former grand admiral of the German navy.]



ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ.

As a result of the world war the United States has become the greatest competitor of Great Britain and will have to bear the consequences inevitably arising from this conflict. There may still be persons in America who believe in the axiom "blood is thicker than water" and who believe that industrial and trade competition need not affect national friendship, but they should realize that this saying was originated by an American, not an Englishman.

Should the conflict between the United States and England become more pronounced at some future time, America will recall the days when the Alabama was fitted out in England and when Great Britain was distinctly unfriendly toward the union.

With the growing development of the industry of the United States the desire and need for a great independent merchant marine will of necessity become more urgent because trade and a merchant marine are so closely related to each other. In Germany also there was a rapid development of the merchant marine when at the end of the last century her industry was in full bloom.

Distrusts Brotherly Feeling.

America's common sense will never permit her to intrust the life and development of her industry to the "brotherly" feeling of Great Britain. It is all very well that people should regard a brotherhood of nations as a goal which, although still far away, it is very desirable to attain. But up to the present the "divine will" has provided competition between nations as the greatest medium to keep alive the spirit of development and culture. This is clearly indicated by the history of mankind for many thousands of years. No thinking man can doubt that these forces will still be operative throughout the next generation.

In view of these unalterable facts the United States will find itself forced, whether it desires or not, to protect its trade by very material means. These means must ever be found in America's own strength or in the acquisition of political friends.

Now that Germany has been crushed, the United States stands alone in world politics, without friendship of any consequence, and it must rely upon itself.

Conflict in Pacific.

For the present England is chiefly interested in a rigorous trade competition with the United States. But there exists for America an undeniable conflict in the Pacific—an economic military and political conflict with Japan, which is the result of natural causes still awaiting a final settlement.

France, still a factor in world politics, although of second rank, is so entirely dependent upon Great Britain that for a long time to come it cannot be considered a valuable political asset for the United States. At the time of Washington France actually constituted such an asset because she was independent and a competitor of England on the seas.

Americans have still to learn whether, more than a century later, Wilson acted with wisdom and political foresight when he helped to crush the only independent maritime nation which, because of her position and prevailing conditions, neither desired nor would have been able to oppose the interests and aims of the United States.

Sees Growing Opposition.

At what time and in what manner the natural conflict between the United States and Japan will come to a final settlement cannot be foretold today. In the interest of the entire world, I hope that it will be possible to avoid war.

In the background of such a conflict, however, the growing opposition between England and America always

STILLMAN STILL PINS HOPES ON 7 'INDIAN' LETTERS

Reputed Excerpts Tell of Undying Ardor.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Attorneys for James A. Stillman, president of the National City bank, still place great reliance upon the "confession" letter of Mrs. Anne Urquhart Stillman to her husband and the seven letters alleged to have been written to her by Fred K. Beauvais, the half-breed Indian guide named as corespondent, to prove the charge made by the banker in his suit for divorce, it was learned today.

These letters have been excluded from evidence by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser, but are included with the other sealed evidence in the case on file with the Putnam county clerk at Carmel. It was said that Mr. Stillman's attorneys still hope to get at least the alleged Beauvais letters in evidence by having them attested by some one else than Mr. Stillman.

Indian's Primal Love.

Further excerpts from some of the Beauvais letters were obtained today from a person with knowledge of the case. According to this information, one of these letters contained a threat by Beauvais to kill any one who came between him and Mrs. Stillman.

"I will kill any one who attempts to come between us," was the phraseology said to have been used.

As previously printed, one of the letters was said to have been addressed to "My Dearest Honey," and was signed "Fred." Some of the letters were said to have expressed the loneliness of the writer and his longing to see the recipient again. Reference to Guy, youngest son of Mrs. Stillman, was also asserted to have been made in some of the letters.

The letters are said to contain intimate details of the writer's daily doings, breathing throughout an affectionate spirit.

"I looked around in town here," one of the letters is reported to say, "for a robe, the kind you would like for baby, and the only thing I found was made out of goatskin and was not clear white, and was not good enough for baby. So I did not take it."

"Skin for Baby Bunting" Idea.

This reported message is taken to refer to Baby Guy:

"I am going to hurry, dearest, and get things going right again, so I may come to you and baby soon, dearest."

It is alleged that some such statement as the foregoing is included in the letters, the child referred to being, presumably, Baby Guy.

It is stated also that one later letter is not addressed to "Honey," but to "Mrs. James A. Stillman," and that its tone indicates there had been a rift in the lute—that the woman addressed had become offended at something said or done by "Fred." This letter is said to refer to "you and Guy" as the only real loved ones the writer ever had.

Talk of Incompatibility.

Mrs. Stillman was said to have informed her husband she considered them "ill-suited" and "not mated" in the so-called "hysterical" letter which Justice Morschauser excluded on the ground that a letter from a wife to husband was not admissible. Further details of this letter could not be obtained.

Nothing definite was accomplished today toward fixing a date for resumption of the divorce hearings before Referee Daniel J. Gleason of Poughkeepsie. In their letter to Mrs. Stillman's attorneys, lawyers for the banker asked that the hearings be resumed on April 20.

A conference of Mrs. Stillman's counsel probably will be held Monday, at which a reply to this request is expected to be framed.

HERE'S THE WAY EXPERTS DRAIN CITY COFFERS

Millions Paid Out on Percentage Basis.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The city of Chicago is in the process of paying Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch $2,876,062 for their services as building experts on six street improvements. They have

Collected for 1920	$1,004,586
Earned in addition	1,207,786
And have yet to earn	663,790
Total	$2,876,062

That total is official. It is the figure given the public by the board of local improvements in a paid advertisement. It is the figure presented to the city council by President Faherty of that board in a formal communication. The sum is so enormous that the inquiry has been frequent: "How do they do it?"

Going Back to Beginning.

Start back at Nov. 4, 1919. On that day the voters approved of five bond issues totaling $26,600,000 for the widening, extension, or other improvement of Ogden, Western, and Ashland avenues, Robey and South Water streets. To make these improvements it is necessary to acquire more land. On the land needed are 5,216 buildings, which the city will condemn or purchase in whole or in part.

To appraise these buildings Mesce and Lynch were employed under an order passed by the city council Feb. 5, 1920.

For a valuation of the buildings each expert was to receive "1 per cent of the value of the property," at the rate of 1¼ per cent of the value of the building for detailed, itemized estimate of cost of building without plans, and at the rate of 2 per cent of the value of building when plans are furnished."

Aldermen Enter Protest.

After four or five months it was discovered that Mesce and Lynch had collected $100,000 for work. Some aldermen protested so vigorously that the finance committee investigated the subject and recommended an ordinance putting the experts on a per diem basis.

It was passed at the last meeting before the vacation, which gave Mayor Thompson until the next "regular" session of the council in which to veto it. When the council reconvened in the autumn he transmitted a veto. His message related that the Feb. 5 order had in effect been incorporated into the annual appropriation bill and said that that bill could not be amended in the method taken by the council.

Wallace Reports Figure.

Mesce and Lynch went along on the percentage basis until January 29 last, when Ald. Wallace charged in a meeting of the finance committee that Mesce and Lynch had collected more than $1,000,000.

President Faherty two days later said the charge was true and added that Mesce and Lynch would collect another million before they finished. Controller Harding the next day verified the charge with official vouchers.

The finance committee started an inquiry and found that the city council had appropriated only $200,000 specifically for "the services of building experts," despite the payment of $1,004,586. It was then discovered that Mesce and Lynch payments came from an appropriation for expert services other than those specifically listed.

Engineers Rate Pay Too High.

For two months the matter has been pending before the committee. In that period the committee has been advised by representatives of the American Institute of Architects, Illinois Society of Architects, and the Western Society of Engineers that the city should hire these experts on a per diem basis and that the expense therefor should have been less than one-half of that being paid by the city.

After the committee had finished collecting information last Friday President Faherty appeared and represented that the two experts have already earned $2,212,372 of the total $2,876,063 they are to collect.

But Mesce and Lynch are not the only players in the game. They appraise only buildings. The land is being appraised. That is being done by three other experts at 1 per cent each of the value of the land. The estimated total value of the land involved in the improvements is $67,184,083. Three per cent of that means $2,015,522 divided among the other three experts, who are Edward C. Waller Jr., Ernest H. Lyons and Arthur S. Merigold.

Therefore the five experts, two building and three ground, are expected to collect $4,892,845. That eats a big hole into the bond issue of $26,600,000 for the improvements.

MAN SLAIN IN STREET; LINK TO ROKOSZ SOUGHT

THE MURDER VICTIM.

A continuation of labor trouble among the stock yards workers was seen last night in the slaying of a man at Forty-second and Mozart streets.

The body was found in the same district where Stanley Rokosz, former president of the Stock Yards Labor council, was probably fatally slugged several days ago. Police are endeavoring to trace a connection between the sluggers and the dead man's slayers.

The man is believed to be M. Darinaias, known in the district by the sobriquet, "Fatty Arbuckle." In his pocket was a card bearing the name of Darinaias, which had been issued on Easter Sunday by the Immaculate Conception church at Forty-fourth street and Fairfield avenue. His hat bore the initials, "M.D."

Witnesses said that he was walking along Mozart street when two men ran up behind him. One of them carried a revolver. The man was shot twice in the back. His assailants fled, one through a nearby alley and the other across a prairie.

GRIEVING WIDOW GOES TO JOIN HER MATE OF 50 YEARS

For more than fifty years Mrs. Betty R. Smith had lived with her husband, Skilton S. Smith, and shared his good luck and his bad, his secrets, his plans, and his ideas. So when he died last Monday there was nothing left in life for her. She died Friday night. The funeral will be held today from her late residence, 4955 West End avenue.

Skilton Smith was 76 years old and a civil war veteran. He vanished on Good Friday, and nineteen hours later, his sons, Clarence E. and Fletcher G. Smith, found him in the psychopathic hospital. He had suffered an apoplectic stroke and had lost his mind. Her sons say the shock of his death killed Mrs. Smith.

NATIONAL BANK OF CUBA CLOSED

$26,000,000 Is Involved in Collapse.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

HAVANA, April 9.—The Banco Nacional De Cuba suspended business this morning. National police surrounded the bank at an early hour and others were stationed within the structure, one of the busiest corners in Havana. There was no disorder, as the news had not spread far among the depositors when banking hours ended at 11 o'clock

Confer All Night.

An all night conference of the directors had followed the receipt of news of the definite failure of the mission of Dr. Ramon Mendosa, president of the Rotary club, which was to raise in the United States $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in ready money to tide the bank over April 15.

April 15 is the date upon which the bank, having taken advantage of the law for liquidation of the moratorium, would be compelled to make another installment payment of 20 per cent to its depositors.

Position of Depositors.

The unfortunate ones whose $26,000,000 deposits are held by the bank are those who had their funds there prior to last Oct. 9. A move was made to protect those who had placed faith in the bank by depositing with it since Oct. 9, when the moratorium was decreed. The sum of $2,500,000 was deposited with the Royal Bank of Canada early today and checks issued against it to those who were fortunate enough to hear of the crash and come rushing to the bank, but the official application will be made at an early hour on Monday for the protection of the law for the liquidation of banks. It is conceded that the moment the national banking liquidation commission takes control of the bank's affairs its assets will not remain segregated but will be held intact and pooled for the common benefit of all.

Husband, Detectives Raid Evelyn Nesbit's Apartment

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Evelyn Nesbit's apartment was invaded by detectives of a private agency and Jack Clifford, her husband, early this morning. They broke through a door, pushing aside a buffet that had been placed against it. When they entered they found "Jimmy" Johnson, who, Miss Nesbit said, was in her employ.

VANDALS RENEW ATTACK ON HOME IN LAKE FOREST

In January the S. Marshall Evans household in Lake Forest was terrorized by the receipt of poison pen letters, death threats, and the hurling of stones through the windows. Mr. Evans, vice president of the Eagle Picher Lead company, hired private detectives and watchmen and the letters and stone throwing ceased.

But yesterday a brick was thrown through the window of Miss Eleanor Evans, a daughter. Mr. Evans again has hired detectives and is determined to get to the bottom of the affair this time.

Mr. Evans is an eastern man. He came here a year ago and rented the Mark Morton homestead on Sheridan road at $1,000 a week. He says he has had no trouble with servants, nor any labor troubles.

ONE-WAY TRAFFIC A FLIVVER; CHIEF WILL DROP PLAN

One way traffic in Randolph, La Salle, Clark and Dearborn streets during the theater rush hour period probably will be abandoned in the near future. Chief of Police Fitzmorris announced yesterday.

"I find it is driving traffic to other streets, congesting them and leaving the four one-way streets comparatively free from traffic," the chief said.

The order to abandon the plan is expected early this week. It is probable Chief Fitzmorris will await recommendations of the council local transportation committee, which recently made a trip through the west studying traffic conditions, before making further efforts to unsnarl the loop traffic tangle.

Landis Reported About to Quit Bench; He Denies It

A report which came from Washington last night was to the effect that Judge K. M. Landis had decided to resign from his seat on the federal bench and devote himself exclusively to his duties as mentor for the baseball leagues. The report was branded by Judge Landis as untrue.

"Nothing in the story," said the judge, when THE TRIBUNE asked him about it.

Meat Market Owner Killed in Fight with Holdup Men

Joseph Vito, 857 North Western avenue, was shot and killed last night when he resisted the efforts of bandits to rob him in his meat market at that address. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital by the West Chicago avenue police. The robbers escaped.

Hays' Bullets to Stop Mail Robberies

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Mail robbers are to be dealt with from now on as summarily as in the good old days of the pony express and the Wells-Fargo messenger by postal employés armed and ready to shoot at sight, it was announced at the postoffice department today. Not only will the postal men be given arms and told to use them on occasion, but a reward of $5,000 will be paid to any postal employé or other person bringing in a mail robber.

Determination to take immediately whatever steps are necessary to stop the mail robberies was expressed by Postmaster General Hays after a long conference today with a number of postoffice inspectors.

"In the Good Old Days."

"These robberies must stop now," said Postmaster General Hays. "We are going to use every power available to do this, no matter how drastic. The west knows how to handle these criminals; it used to do it in the old Wells-Fargo days.

"The following order goes out today: "To any postal employé or other person who brings in a mail robber the postoffice department will pay a reward of not exceeding $5,000. All essential postal employés will be fully armed and every man is expected to uphold the honor of the service."

Petticoat Methods Have Ruled.

Railway mail clerks have carried arms, but employés engaged in delivering mail, even when registered and known to be valuable, have hitherto been without means to protect themselves from attack. Most of the robberies have occurred during the transportation of mail from station to station and during deliveries.

The immediate instigation for the department's action was the registered mail robbery of $390,000 which occurred at the Polk street station in Chicago Wednesday afternoon, followed by the one at Sullivan, Ind., the home of Postmaster General Hays.

CHICAGO POSTAL MEN MEET.

Superintendents and assistant superintendents of the Chicago postoffice, affiliated with the Postoffice Supervisors' association, met in the Hotel Sherman last night for the purpose of coöperating with Postmaster General Will H. Hays for the improvement of the postal service.

Recommendations by the national association that deserving postmasters be retained, and promotions to postmasters be made from men in the service, were approved by the Chicago branch, as was the recommendation that a bonding bureau be established by the government to provide for the bonding of employés at minimum cost.

GERMANY SOON TO PAY WAR BILL, DR. SIMONS SAYS

BERNE, Switzerland, April 9.—The German foreign minister, Dr. Walter Simons, declared here today that Germany would make provision for the reparations due the allies, adding that the German government would soon take occasion to prove its good will.

Dr. Simons made this declaration in a conversation with Dr. Motta, chief of the Swiss political department. He also conferred with President Schultz and Vice President Haab.

STRIKERS AND MINE OWNERS TO ARBITRATE

Will Try to Settle the Strike Tomorrow.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 9.—As a result of tonight's conference between the government and the triple alliance early settlement of the coal miners' strike and, consequently, averting of the threatened industrial catastrophe seemed certain.

It was officially announced after the conference that the government will attend a meeting between the striking miners' executives and the mine owners' representatives at 10 o'clock Monday morning at which the contending factions will attempt to settle all differences.

Stipulates No Conditions.

No conditions preliminary to the negotiations were interposed by either side and the government will attend as an interested but neutral party.

Shortly before midnight the miners' federation telegraphed orders to all its branches instructing all members to abstain from any action which would interfere with the safety of the mines or make necessary the use of force by the government.

Harry Gosling, leader of the transport workers, privately informed a prominent British ship owner tonight that both sides in the controversy were bluffing and that there would be no strike either of the transport workers or the railwaymen.

Text of Agreement.

The exact terms of agreement follow:

"1. The government shall summon a conference of representatives of miners' federation and coal owners to meet at the board of trade on Monday, April 11, at 11 a. m., to discuss all questions in dispute between the parties.

"2. The miners' federation shall tonight issue notices to branches of the federation urging their members to abstain from all action which will interfere with measures necessary for securing safety of mines or will necessitate the use of force by the government."

Britain on War Basis.

Reports from all the military depots throughout England indicate that scenes like those witnessed in the first days of the war are being reënacted. From all directions reservists are flocking to the colors in response to the king's proclamation. They are being outfitted with uniforms, arms, and other equipment and then are dispatched to join various units.

The military authorities also report there has been a satisfactory response to the call for volunteers for a special defense force, which the radicals already have christened "white guards."

Youths Rush to Colors.

The plan of defense provides for twenty-four battalions in London, and all the armories are crowded today with young men, mostly of the middle class, who are anxious to enroll. The conditions of enlistment call for ninety day service at ordinary army pay. Former servicemen and territorials are given the preference.

Lieut. Gen. the Earl of Cavan, a distinguished officer in the great war, has been appointed commander in chief of troops in the metropolitan area of London.

In the meantime the prospects for averting industrial disaster look brighter. Both sides have been sobered by the gravity of the crisis and this morning a delegation of railwaymen and transport workers met Prime Minister Lloyd George at 10 Downing street for a two hour conference.

Premier Backing Down?

At this conference, it is declared, the premier suggested the possibility of a settlement of the miners' strike on the basis of a national wage.

If this is so, it means that a great concession has been made to the miners for it was the owners' demands for the adoption of a regional wage system that caused the strike in the first place.

On the labor side there is grave apprehension of defeat if the struggle is continued. A railroad leader said this morning that he did not believe more than half his men would obey a strike order.

Many of the transport workers also are said to oppose a strike, and in all classes of labor there is an expression of opposition to the policy of allowing the mines to be flooded. Even among the miners there have been several breakaways of men who oppose the destruction of their means of livelihood.

After meeting the labor men, the premier called a cabinet meeting at which Lord Stamfordham, the king's private secretary, was present. It is reported the king is greatly concerned and sent an urgent message insisting on the necessity of avoiding bloodshed.

A meting of the triple alliance was held after the conference, but it adjourned until tonight. There are still three days before the national strike threat takes effect, but all indications point to a compromise before then.

Strive to Save the Mines.

It is understood that at the Downing street meeting today the premier asked the railwaymen and transport workers to use their influence with the miners to prevent violence against the men sent by the government to man the coal mine pumps and his conferees agreed to do all in their power in this direction.

The authorities sent 250 naval stokers from Portsmouth to South Wales today for pumping service.

Members of the merchant sailors' union decided today to take a ballot before obeying any strike order from the triple alliance and demands are pouring in on the leaders of the railwaymen for ballots to be taken before the sympathetic strike is put into effect.

Railmen Demand Ballot.

The railwaymen at Liverpool, Glasgow and Edinburgh informed their leaders that they would refuse to strike unless a ballot of the whole membership is taken, and they expressed the opinion that it is too much to be expected to help the miners, thus imperilling their own wages.

REPORT MORE DISORDERS.

LONDON, April 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—Further disorders were reported to the authorities today from districts where the coal miners are on strike.

In Wales, there were many cases of looting. In one instance a coal train was held up and a large quantity of the fuel taken. Raiders also are killing sheep pasturing in the hilly regions.

Billboards, trees, fences, and other fixtures of wood have been taken for fuel. In the Newcastle district there have been numerous fires and many telephone and telegraph poles have been destroyed.

Acute distress is already being felt in several districts and the Salvation Army is distributing food.

Wales Mines Imperiled.

The menace to the coal mines from the stoppage of pumping was explained by mining authorities today as being most serious.

The greatest damage is threatened in south Wales, where the mines average a thousand feet in depth and where the hilly topography of the country is favorable to the collection of water in the valleys where the coal pits are located.

The extent of the danger is suggested by reports that water is rushing into the Glamorgan collieries at the rate of 3,000 gallons a minute and into the naval colliery at the rate of 15,000 gallons an hour.

Director Llewellyn of the Glamorgan collieries declared today that because of the flooding it was likely that the pits, which have the most modern equipment in Great Britain, would forever be closed.

Britain Prepares for Worst.

Preparations for the impending emergency were still going on apace this evening. The prime minister telegraphed to the lord lieutenants of England, Scotland, and Wales impressing upon them the urgency of encouraging recruiting of the emergency force and requesting them to persuade employers of labor to release men for this purpose and keep their places open.

The department of mines of the board of trade has sent circulars to all the lighting and water supply organizations, and to local authorities, urging the utmost economy in the use of coal.

From the board of trade also came an order prohibiting any household purchasing more than one week's supply of food at a time and forbidding food hoarding.

AGE EINSTEIN FOR THIS COST OF LIVING FALL

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—The of living dropped 35.9 points, or 6 per cent, between July of last year, when prices reached their peak, and March 1, 1921, according to figures given out today by the national industrial conference board.

The board found that the decrease for February had fallen 4.4 per cent compared with the previous month. On March 1 the cost of living was 68.6 per cent higher than in July, 1914, against 76.3 per cent higher on Feb. 1 last than the 1914 basis.

"It should be noted," a statement from the conference board said, "that the percentage of decrease from a high to a lower base is always less than the percentage of increase from the same lower base to the same higher, although the change in index points is the same in both cases.

"Thus, while a drop of 35.9 points from an index of 204.5 to an index of 168.6 represents a decrease of 17.6, a rise of 35.9 points from 168.8 to 204.5 represents an increase of 21.3. In the same way the drop of 4.4 per cent from February to March represents a corresponding increase of 4.6 per cent."

Reds Preparing Army for New World Battle

RIGA, Letvia, April 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—A new "international army," expected to be the basis of a huge force to be available ultimately to enforce the dictates of the third internationale, is rapidly being organized in Russia, replacing the old Red army, according to information received here from authentic sources. It already numbers more than 100,000 carefully selected Communists, who participated in the first actions at Kronstadt.

DOMINION RULE BEST IRISH PLAN, VIEW OF BOURNE

British Cardinal Eager for Peace.

Cardinal Bourne, head of the Roman Catholic church in England, has been bitterly attacked by Irish Catholics for his recent denunciation of crimes done in the name of Sinn Fein. The Chicago Tribune obtained his point of view on the Irish question in the following interview—one of the very few he has ever given—which was obtained by a leading Irish Catholic.

BY AN IRISHMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 9.—Stalking a cardinal through an English countryside in spring is not an unpleasant experience, albeit it is not sport, although there were times in history when cardinals were considered fair game. In these days all men, including cardinals, are fair game to journalists.

That is why I was after the cardinal archbishop of Westminster. The hope of catching him away from his fortress in London sent me on this stalking expedition to a country village in Hertfordshire. I was glad I went. England in spring is a garden. English roads are a delight. Hunting for cardinals in Hertfordshire has only one disadvantage—scarcity of cardinals.

Meets Cardinal on Road.

Knowing where Francis, Cardinal Bourne, was likely to be found, I didn't keep my hunter's eye open, so almost passed for a country squire out on a parish visit a dusty looking cleric who stopped to let the car go by and waved a stout stick at us in friendly greeting. But there was no mistaking the face in spite of a soft hat without an alarming width of brim, and the fine white hair and features beneath it. Not a speck of red was visible, but this was the cardinal. He had just finished a chat with a road mender, who had reached the age of 83 and still was working with pick and ax.

I was asked to stay all night in Hare street and, in spite of the dark panels, the tapestries, the skull in a niche in front of my bed and possible ghosts, I did stay. It was at dinner that I approached the real object of my visit.

Views on Sinn Fein.

"Your eminence," I ventured, "I have decided leanings to the Sinn Fein, which, I have been told, your eminence likes not at all."

Then I waited for an explosion of cardinatial wrath. But none came. The cardinal is quite good natured.

"They are all interested in the Irish question in America, aren't they?" he asked.

I admitted that they all were.

"And I am supposed, perhaps, to be quite unsympathetic."

I also admitted that.

"Would they wish me to be so?"

I thought that Americans would wish the opposite and said so.

"Perhaps." "Perhaps," remarked the cardinal, and I thought a bit sadly, "perhaps we are all too much inclined to come to judgment without weighing things from every side. I am an archbishop in England and in London, at that.

Interest of Own Flock.

"I have the interests of my own archdiocese to think of first and the interest of the church in England second. I cannot afford to forget that in any public statement I make. In Ireland it is Ireland that counts. In England it is not only Ireland but also England and the whole empire. I would be a very unprofitable servant of God if I forgot that part of the vineyard which he gave me to work because another part, not mine, was much more interesting, which, I freely confess, Ireland is at present. You have to expect a slightly different point of view on the Irish question from one whose duty it is to be English as well as a Catholic and an archbishop."

"Yet it is only sympathy that Ireland wants from one so placed as is your eminence," I suggested.

"That," he said with decision, "Ireland has always had and always will have. It would be hard to go farther than I did in a recent pastoral when, in reference to the present Irish agitation, I used the words 'legitimate aspirations!' Only two words, but they freely reveal my thoughts."

"Does that mean your eminence did not intend to condemn the Sinn Fein?"

"Let me make this plain," and the cardinal became very earnest. "I did not condemn the political movement called the Sinn Fein as I understand it. Those who think I did, forgot my former pastorals and letters. I am quite in accord on the subject with most, if not all, of the Irish bishops who, I think, are in the best position to judge what is best for their country. I did condemn certain acts of violence and bloodshed. But, referring to both sides, I used the words 'in aggression and repression!' It is therefore, not true to say that I failed to condemn reprisals. Breaches of moral law cannot be condoned and the end does not justify the means.

"Ireland demands self-government. Its chief weakness now is in these acts of violence just as the chief weakness on the other side is in reprisals. I distinguish between the adopted policy of a body of persons and the acts of individuals. I am trying to clear the issue for such Englishmen as are sympathetic, as I am, to Ireland's legitimate aspirations."

Cardinal on Separation.

"Would your eminence kindly tell me the exact meaning you place on the words 'legitimate aspirations' in this connection?" I asked.

The cardinal was ready with an answer.

"I understand them as meaning what in the judgment of the Irish people is best for the interests of Ireland."

"But if the Irish people think separation is best for her interests?" I suggested.

"As a British subject," replied the cardinal, "I am not for separation from the empire in matters such as defense and foreign policy. I do not think the heart of Ireland is for it any more than I am. But in all things that concern Ireland alone I am for that solution commonly known as dominion home rule."

"With fiscal autonomy?" I asked.

"I know little about the financial part of the question," said his eminence.

"Then your eminence thinks that it is lack of good will that prevents a settlement."

"I think," he answered quickly, "that you had better say presence of suspicion. For that I do not believe the Irish are as much responsible as ourselves as far as the historic grounds for it are concerned.

"The protection of the empire," said the cardinal, "is as important for Ireland as for us and as important for civilization, I think, as for both of us. With that in mind I am for Irish self-government as far as the Irish people themselves desire it. I want England to trust Ireland and Ireland to trust England, for I love them both as I love justice and peace."

"And what does your eminence think about an Irish republic?"

"A republic," and he smiled as if he saw where I was leading. "Why discuss names? It is not the name that Ireland wants, but the substance.

Canada Self-Governing.

"Canada calls herself a dominion, but Canada is self-governing. Ireland's historic name is a kingdom. I like the name commonwealth pretty well, but let us first stop killing one another. Let us then try to be less suspicious of one another. Let us get round a table with a prayer for peace in all our hearts and talk to one another. Let us resolve that we both shall err, if err we must, in generosity to one another. Then there will be no complete separation, not because England does not want it, but because both of us will accept what best preserves the freedom and prosperity of both. Frankly, I am discontented that Ireland is not of value to the empire and the empire wihout justice is of no value to civilization."

VARIETY IS THE SPICE OF LIFE

From winter to spring and back again to winter—the weather, in a sprightly week, kept the male population busy adjusting its apparel to the temperature. "But," said one of four young women whom a photographer encountered last evening in Michigan avenue, "it's quite all right with us. Now that we're wearing furs winter and summer it doesn't matter what the weather happens to be. It's much better to be a girl than a man, anyway."

'TWAS SPRING, AND THEN BING! CAME THE SNOW

City Caught Napping and Fruit Crop Is Damaged.

'Twas April, and Chicago smiled
And clapped her hands like any child.
"Ah, spring, sweet spring has come!"
she crowed.
And then it snowed, and snowed, and snowed.

The Press club's good gray poet had a lot of fun—inside near a steam radiator—writing those lines yesterday. He was looking out the window watching the crowds so ill prepared for the chill wind and the swirling white flurries.

The city was caught napping, though cold and snow in April are not unusual in Chicago. There was six inches of snow all over the country last year on April 4, according to Prof. Henry J. Cox, weather forecaster; and there was snow in April, 1919, too.

The storm, which turned into a young blizzard toward midnight, with a mixture of snow and sleet, caused several automobile accidents and made the asphalt dangerous for skidding. The wind blew out many unfinished windows in the Sheridan Plaza hotel building—one every fifteen minutes, it is said.

Down to 30 Degrees Today.

The prediction was that Chicago would have a temperature of perhaps 30 degrees this morning, and that in parts of Illinois the mercury might go even lower.

The storm blew in from the Rockies, where there has been some severe weather during the last few days, and extends over a considerable area in the east and south.

TRIBUNE readers with orchards in blossom were warned yesterday to protect them from frost by making smudge fires, but it is believed the present "freeze" will do great damage to the budding fruit.

Up Go Fruit Prices.

A big Chicago canning house states that frosts and snow have damaged 75 per cent of the apricots, and caused an undetermined damage to peaches, pears, and plums—consequently fruits are selling and prices stiffening.

Electric light feed wires blew down in Niles Center last night, extinguishing the lights in Morton Grove, eight miles west of Evanston. The live wires came into contact with some inflammable materials in the road and caused several small fires.

It looks like an open winter.

RIALTO FOLK ARE REMARRYING OLD PARTNERS NOW

Remarrying "li'l old last year's husband" is the latest fad along Chicago's Rialto. Flo Jacobson, singer and song booster, started it Friday when she was remarried to her employer, Frank Clark. They were married first on New Year's eve, 1914, getting the last marriage license issued that year. They parted at another New Year's eve party two years later.

"Yes," giggled Flo, "I married him then and I've married him now.' So you see, I marry him now and then."

Now comes Ernie, Young, ticket broker, booking agent, and close friend of Clark, announces he is to remarry his former wife, Mrs. Pearl Young, formerly Miss Pearl Mandel, member of a wealthy family of Memphis, Tenn. Mrs. Young is now in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Young filed divorce suits four minutes apart on July 16, 1918.

BARE ODOR BOMB GRAFT ON MOVIES AT BUILDING QUIZ

'Remedy' for Stench Sold at $22.50 a Quart.

How men, supposedly employed by the electrical workers' union to place stench bombs in movie theaters for the purpose of coercing proprietors into signing the "electrical maintenance shakedown" contracts, returned later to sell the "only effectual deodorizer" at $22.50 a quart was revealed to the joint legislative investigating committee yesterday by a former theater owner.

The witness, who outlined this ingenious scheme, owned a theater which was one of those subjected to the stench bomb attacks last January. He declared he had been practically forced out of the business by the demands of union agents.

"We tried everything to eradicate the odor after these attacks," he said. "We tried perfumes, deodorizers, and disinfectants. None seemed to work. Some theaters had to shut down for two nights. We had to rip the carpets off the floors. In some instances we were unable to get rid of the odors for three or four weeks.

$22.50 for 70 Cent Deodorizer.

"Then men came around and sold us this stuff for $22.50 a quart. It probably cost only about 70 cents. They said it was the only thing on the market that would do the work. I bought half a pint for $5.75, but I sold the theater before any more bombs were thrown and I never had a chance to see whether it worked or not."

The witness also testified that the tax of 5 cents a seat per month for the alleged "maintenance" service was raised in the cases of some theaters to as much as 15 cents a seat. He said that he and other owners of the smaller movie houses became suspicious that certain men identified with the Allied Amusements association were in "cahoots" with the labor men and that they resigned from the association and formed another organization with a membership of about 125.

$10,000 Graft on Station.

Other evidence presented dealt with $10,000 in "cold graft" paid in the Union depot building project, the "fixing" of lumber prices and the revelation of a system which prevents the employment of an out-of-town union man although he is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. One instance was related in which a hoisting engineer had to be discharged on the Union station job because he was not affiliated with a Chicago local.

Several witnesses who appeared had to be asked to go out into the ante room and consult with their "consciences" before the legislators were able to obtain names, addresses and dates. Several proprietors of large movie houses told of $40,000 damage inflicted supposedly by union agents on a pipe organ in one of their theaters.

In reference to the lumber prices the commission learned they were kept up on the plea that "reductions will wipe out the little fellow." Lumber said to have sold in the south at $8 to $10 per thousand feet wes quoted in Chicago, according to a witness, at $40 per thousand.

Ordered to "Kick In"; Gives $10,000.

In regard to the Union station "shakedown," one walking delegate is declared to have approached a railroad representative with the request for a "contribution." He is alleged to have said that this money was needed to help the unemployed. Another, however, approached with the words, "Kick in!" It was then that the $10,000 was paid, it is said, so that labor trouble would be avoided.

How one workman who was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was responsible for the complete tie-up of work on one big building was also told. The work was stopped until the man's initiation fees and his dues to a local union were handed over to the business agent.

Witnesses testified that it was next to impossible to get men to work on materials purchased outside of Chicago, and that it was difficult for members of out of town unions to get work here.

Mill Man Testifies.

B. G. Anderson of the Anderson & Lind Mill company, an open shop, was one of the main witnesses before the commission yesterday. He told of submitting a bid for $70,000 for mill work on a building and of the contract later being given to a union mill which had bid $100,000. The difference of $30,000, he said, which was paid by the building owner, was given because of the existence of article 3 of the agreement between the contractors and carpenters providing for no restriction in the use of any manufactured article except nonunion and prison made.

H. T. Douglas, chief engineer of the Chicago and Alton railroad, was also a witness. His testimony dealt with a roundhouse which the railroad built last summer after a number of strikes had held up the work at various points. The work could not proceed, the witness said, until the "ring" received its "insurance fee."

"Go to the Bottom."—Daugherty.

Meantime deputy marshals were busy serving 300 subpœnas for witnesses who will appear before the federal grand jury Monday. More than a score of indictments are expected from the federal grand jury as the result of the evidence obtained by the committee. United States District Attorney Robert A. Milroy has been detailed to coöperate with the Dailey commission in the obtaining of evidence.

The nation wide drive on building conspiracies ordered by Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty got under way in Chicago during the day.

"Go to the bottom of the building combine," was the command received from Washington.

"Investigation shows that at the present time the United States is short 20,000 schoolhouses as one of the results of the building tieup," District Attorney Charles F. Clyne said. "In every part of the country business is hampered and a return to economic normalcy impeded by a combination of building interests."

SPELLING

The county school kids held their annual spelling bee in the county building yesterday.

The pupils will tell you it was no cinch. Seventy-five tongue twisters were picked by Thomas W. Hart, assistant county school superintendent, for them to wrestle with.

The word that snagged most of them was "sepulcher." Other teasers were "apostrophe," "chandelier," and "exaggerate."

More than 400 children participated. One hundred and seventy-five turned in perfect papers, but the Montrose school, with ten perfect scores, won first prize.

BUILDING GAME IS SPEEDING UP, FIGURES REVEAL

February Beaten by March Progress.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Figures for building activity in March, as published by the F. W. Dodge company, indicate widespread progress toward resumption of normal activity.

Contracts awarded during March in the twenty-five northeastern states amounted to $164,194,000 an increase of 63 per cent over the February figure.

The increase is largely due to a greatly increased number of small projects. The total number of contracts awarded in March was 78 per cent greater than in the preceding month.

Resembles 1919 Situation.

A comparison of this year's activity with that of last year is not to the point. At this time last year building activity was approaching the crest of a wave; now it is emerging from the trough.

The conditions of this year are that nearly like those of 1919. Contracts awarded during the first quarter of this year numbered 12,180, and have amounted to $376,631,000. During the first quarter of 1919 contracts numbered 10,724, amounting to $274,562,000.

Among the contracts let in March, 1921, residential projects took the lead amounting to $60,693,000, or 37 per cent of the total.

On Public Buildings.

Public works and utilities amounted to $34,068,000 or 21 per cent; business buildings, $22,776,000 or 14 per cent; educational buildings $19,030,000, or 11 per cent.

Industrial buildings $10,640,000 or 7 per cent. Contemplated new projects were reported in March to the number of 10,184 at an estimated cost of $398,071,000. The very considerable increase in contemplated new work is largely made up of small projects.

THIS IS ANTI-'FAG' DAY FOR W.C.T.U.; DENY 'BLUE' PLAN

Today is anti-cigaret Sunday for the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. Is it the start of a campaign against the weed such as the W. C. T. U. started years ago against old John Barleycorn? The members of the W. C. T. U. say it is not. But the literature of the organization appears to point the other way.

Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, national treasurer of the W. C. T. U., said the organization has not started a specific campaign to wipe out the cigaret.

"It is merely a coincidence that the end of our anti-tobacco week and our anti-cigaret Sunday come on the same day," she states. "We are simply striving to convince persons under 21 years of age of the deleterious effects of tobacco and cigarets. This movement is forty-three years old and has nothing to do with the so called blue laws."

SLEEP SICKNESS AND FLU SIMILAR, BUT NOT ALIKE!

New York, April 9.—Germs of the disease commonly known as "sleeping sickness" have been transmitted from man to animal and from one animal to another, it was announced here today by Dr. B. Sachs, chief of the medical staff of the Mount Sinai hospital who added an effort was now being made to find a curative serum.

Neurologists and pathologists of the hospitals, Dr. Sachs explained, have established the fact that, while sleeping sickness in many cases follows influenza, the two germs are distinct. He declared great strides had been made in determining the nature of the germ and hopes were held that before long it would be possible to produce a serum that would effectively combat the diseases.

Elkhart, Ind., April 9.—Elkhart police uncovered a murder mystery today when they recovered from the St. Joseph river the body of John Carbelli, Italian, 35, who had been shot four times and thrown into the stream.

DIVORCE SEALS DETAILS OF THE 'ICEBOX ROMANCE'

Professor Is Silent for Alma Mater's Sake.

The final chapter of the "ice box romance" divorce case was written by Judge Sabath yesterday when he signed the decree freeing Mrs. Sylvia C. Palmer from Cyrus E. Palmer, a professor at the University of Illinois

Mrs. Palmer started divorce proceedings last summer. Her husband retaliated with a cross bill in which he accused his wife of carrying on an affair with Carl A. Carlson, a Champaign butcher. The professor mentioned gay parties which took place in his home while he was away, and accused his wife of taking midnight automobile rides with Carlson.

The university colony at Urbana looked forward to the trial with interest, but was disappointed. When the case came up three weeks ago the husband announced that for the sake of his university he would not contest his wife's action.

Mrs. Palmer accused her husband of cruelty. She denied the charges made in his cross bill.

Mrs. Thomas Will Give Large Sum to Mrs. Shonts

New York, April 9.—Another report dealing with the settlement of the court battle over the estate of T. P. Shonts reached the public today.

This report said the entire residuary estate left by Mr. Shonts to his "friend," Amanda Caskie Thomas, former chorus girl and his companion during the closing years of his life, has been released by Mrs. Thomas to Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, the widow.

An additional settlement includes the payment of Mrs. Shonts' attorneys' fees in consideration of withdrawal by her of her contest of her husband's will and her alienation suit against Mrs. Thomas.

FEUD KILLING IN DETROIT.

EX-MESSENGER BOY IS PICKED TO END POSTAL ILLS

Col. Shaughnessy Chosen for Important Task.

Col. Edward H. Shaughnessy, once a messenger boy in Chicago and more recently a lieutenant colonel in the A. E. F., has been given the job of taking the kinks out of the railway and air mail service.

In a few days Postmaster General Will Hays will announce the selection of Col. Shaughnessy as second assistant postmaster general. As soon as the senate confirms the nomination the former messenger boy will begin getting mail in and out of postoffices all over the country on a "business man's schedule."

Col. Shaughnessy is assistant director of the American Petroleum institute, New York city. He was born in 1883 in Chicago. He went to grammar school at Green Bay, Wis., and graduated there. That's all the schooling he had. He started to work when he returned to Chicago.

Reads as He Delivers Messages.

He read Horatio Alger while he delivered messages, and learned how boys become rich and famous and marry the boss's daughter. He learned telegraphy.

When he was 15 years old he became ticket agent at the Elgin station of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad and a year later a telegraph operator. Successively he was chief operator, assistant train dispatcher, train dispatcher, assistant train master, and train master. When the superintendent of the road was ill he took charge.

Col. Shaughnessy joined the 13th engineers as first lieutenant when the war broke out. He studied French until he spoke it fluently, and worked up a book of rules, adapting American methods to French practice. So they promoted him fast. He was praised by Brig. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, assistant chief of staff, for his work as superintendent of the transportation corps in the Chateau Thierry region, and as general superintendent at Is-sur-Tille during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, and as general manager in the zone of advance.

Given D. S. M. by Pershing.

He was given the distinguished service medal by Gen. Pershing "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services."

"In the performance of his manifold duties he constantly displayed marked enthusiasm, originality, and sound judgment," the note of award read. Last year he was made a colonel in the reserve.

So you see the Horatio Alger stories sometimes do come true. Did he marry the boss' daughter? He did the next thing to it. He married Miss Myrtle Scanlon, daughter of the chief auditor for the C. & N. W. They have a daughter 10 years old.

Col. Shaughnessy didn't seek the mail job. He was sought. He was getting $25,000 a year, but he accepted the government's offer.

"I understand you've taken a $5,000 a year job," said THE TRIBNUE correspondent who interviewed him.

Forgets to Ask About Pay.

"Does it pay that?" he asked. "I'd forgotten to ask about the salary."

He was reluctant to discuss the details of the appointment. Last Thursday, though, he was invited to Washington by Mr. Hays and told of the need of a real man in a real job. Then they went to the White House, and the matter was settled.

"I never was in politics," said the Alger hero come true. "I never want to be. But there is a big chance here to make a reputation, do the country some good, and put the experience to advantage in the business world later on. I've told Mrs. Shaughnessy and her nibs; and now I've got to find a place in Washington to live."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 9.

Postmaster General Hayes, aroused by numerous recent mail robberies, issued an order offering a reward of $5,000 to any person who brings in a mail robber and declaring all essential postal employés should be armed.

Secretary Mullen reappointed Col. Cholmley-Jones as head of the war risk insurance bureau, to carry out the recommendations of the Dawes commission.

Another row has developed over budget legislation, house leaders who saw the president today insisting that the original house bill should be enacted instead of the McCormick bill.

The Chicago Board of Trade was characterized by Senator Capper of Kansas as "the greatest gambling house in the world."

Secretary of War Weeks has asked congress to lift the ban on disposal of surplus army food to Europe.

Democrats and Republicans of the house held cucuses today, the latter approving committee assignments.

The senate interstate commerce committee will meet next week and endeavor to devise some scheme for abolishing the railroad administration.

U. S. BARES AUTO THEFT CLIQUE OF 500; JAILS SIX

Roundup of 'Trust' Opens in Many States.

A nationally organized band of auto thieves, consisting of more than 500 theft experts, dealers in used cars, and a few manufacturers was uncovered yesterday by the federal authorities.

Two Chicago branches of the government, the department of justice and the district attorney's office, have joined forces for a concerted drive on the ring. Evidence already obtained shows the band has stolen automobiles valued at nearly $1,000,000 in the larger cities of the middle west during the last year.

Grand Jury to Act.

Assistant District Attorney Edwin Weisl will appear before the federal grand jury tomorrow to present evidence against six alleged members of the gang who were arrested Saturday. He will ask that a special investigation be ordered for violations of the Dyer act, which provides a ten year imprisonment for persons arrested while driving stolen cars.

Those under arrest are "Dingbat" Rapp, 9129 Exchange avenue; "Red" Saback, 8808 Exchange avenue; Fred Snyder, 7816 Burnham avenue, and William Beville, 3045 East Ninety-second street, Chicago, and Seth Beville and William Price of Dayton.

Make Target of Rich.

The Chicago branch of the thieves' organization is said to have operated exclusively in the exclusive residential districts, reaping a rich harvest along Lake Shore drive, in Rogers Park, and Hyde Park, and on the South Shore.

The four Chicago men, arrested by W. G. Walker of the department of justice, are said to have been employed in the "South Shore" office of the gang. The two taken in custody in Dayton were called "traveling salesmen." It was their business to locate possible buyers for the stolen cars and make reports on likely places for "trades."

Council to Act Tomorrow on $7,000,000 Tax Boost

Whether Chicago is to ask the legislature for a tax boost to bring $7,000,000 additional into the municipal coffers from taxes will be decided tomorrow. The council finance committee will meet at 10:30 a. m. and in the afternoon the council will meet to consider the committee's report on the tax increase question.

ENGINEERING "AD" MEN TO MEET.

The first meeting of the Engineering Advertisers' Association of Chicago under the presidency of Keith J. Evans, advertising manager of Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, will be held Tuesday at the Engineers' club.

IN WAR WITH JAPAN, WHAT OF ENGLAND?

Unfriendly to America, Is Von Tirpitz's View.

looms. In the knowledge of her own youthful strength, America often underrates the power of England.

Not America but England, with her military bases established for centuries and with her "bridgeheads" advanced against other countries, including the United States, today dominates the sea and the world. And this will remain the same, although in a lesser degree, when America has a strong fleet of her own.

England Supreme in Europe.

In a certain sense, although under different conditions, the United States is now in the same position occupied by Germany before the war. Added to this is the fact that England has achieved undeniable supremacy over Europe and that her domination extends further over entire Africa, India, Mesopotamia, and that she has in her hands the key positions to the Mediterranean—Constantinople and Gibraltar. In the absolute domination of these vast lands there rests a counter-balance against the compactness of the territory of the United States.

There is still a widespread belief that Englishmen and Americans will always remain friends because of mutual language and customs, which constitute a good medium for mutual understanding.

The importance of pro-British sentiment created by this mutuality of language and customs in America should not be undervalued, and it was with the help of these sentiments that Wilson actually made it possible to draw the Americans into the world war. On the other hand, however, the history of the last century has proved that the United States is a nation with a psychology entirely its own.

Reckons with Realities.

Intellectual development in America has reached a high level and has become more and more independent of English intellectual development. There will come a time when even the mutual language can no longer counteract opposing interests, and the fast pace of world development during the last decade may bring about this culmination much sooner than many believe today.

However this may be, wide political vision, which has always been a remarkable feature of England's policies, will not reckon with sentiments, but with realities alone.

England, therefore, in consideration of her interests in opposition to America, will make adequate preparations, camouflaging such, of course, with the most "sincere and honest to goodness" John Bull face and the most beautiful humanitarian phrases.

Mediator in Case of Break.

It cannot be disputed that England is today allied with Japan, while still remaining friendly towards America. When the break comes between the United States and Japan, England will play the part of a mediator, proclaiming to be anxious to preserve peace and affect conciliation.

England will, in fact, play the same part that she has successfully played for centuries when conflicts existed between European peoples, with the result that the European continent is ruined today and England has emerged, as always, tertius gaudens.

Should it come to an open quarrel between the United States and Japan, the English will at first stand aloof, watching with a smile on their lips. Such a position England has cleverly reserved for herself in her latest treaty with Japan.

Would Hold Balance.

Should developments rompel England to take part, or should there arise the danger that one of the two combatants should win too much and become too powerful, England will throw her lot with that side from which she can expect the greatest gain.

Many people will say England cannot afford to be antagonistic towards the United States because of Canada. But those people forget that Canada is a growing and already very independent state and would also have a word to say, and, furthermore, that England has perhaps much more to lose in the far east—including Australia and India—than in Canada.

England estimates very highly the inner strength and power of expansion of Japan.

Resented American Sea Power.

The rumor that England intends to use her now disengaged European fleet to make a demonstration before the Japanese has not been confirmed and is apparently false. But should it actually come to such a demonstration of British sea power, it certainly could not be construed as a friendly greeting to Japan, but its sole aim would be to bind the Japanese ally more closely to England, or it might be caused by the desire to counteract the impression which was caused in Japan and Australia by the American fleet demonstration at the instance of Roosevelt. At that time nothing had stirred British feeling more deeply than Roosevelt's demonstration of American sea power.

But here again the great training of the British people and the British press was in evidence, because their chagrin did not find expression anywhere. On the contrary, their spleen was vented upon Germany, which, in the eyes of Englishmen, prevented them at that time from answering the American action immediately with a great counter demonstration by the British grand fleet. This influence of world political importance seems never to have been fully understood in North America.

The military balance of power between Japan and America is today absolutely in favor of the United States. But so militaristic a people as the Japanese cannot be frightened and prevented from maintaining their supremacy in the far east after having finally attained it through the world war.

Factors Favoring Japanese.

Added to this is the fact that the Japanese because of race, religion, customs, frugality, and their sincere love for their fatherland, have factors on their side with which other peoples have hardly anything to compare.

In the further development of the world it may even develop that smaller states, at present hardly of any account, will not bestow their sympathies on the side of America, and during a fight for supremacy over the Pacific would help to weaken the position of America.

America's greatest apparent weakness is the vast size of the Pacific ocean, and in connection therewith the inevitable fact that the United States must take the offensive if it intends to force its will upon Japan, while Japan can afford to wait.

And this Japan could do so much more safely if at the outbreak of a conflict she could seize the Hawaiian islands. An attack upon this exceedingly important strategical base appears comparatively easier than a defense of the same from America; but even if America should succeed in holding it or seizing it back, the advantages of such a base would still be poor at the best in the face of the support the mother country could extend to the Japanese.

Should the situation, under which Germany can only die but never live, exist for any length of time, the destruction of all Europe will become inevitable. Far seeing Americans and Englishmen have already realized these consequences.

The United States has, contrary to the wise policy of Washington and the teachings of Monroe, entangled itself in European conditions without realizing their magnitude. Only through America's great power and the broken word of Wilson was the decision on the battlefield made so onesided and a peace of conciliation become possible.

The United States has retained the power to prevent a further destruction of the European continent and it must consider very seriously whether such a course would not be in line with its own interests. The outcome of the war has made it impossible for the United States simply to stand aside and leave Europe to herself.

America's Moral Duty.

As far as I have been able to understand the morality and psychology of the American people I cannot conceive that they will abandon our civilization.

The redemption of civilization has nothing to do with sympathies for one people or another; it has become a moral duty of the entire American nation.

Be this as it may, Germany has been obliterated as a competitor in world politics for a long time, if not forever. What it needs is internal recuperation, economic and intellectual.

If Europe brought culture to American countries 500 years ago, it should now be a very proud task for America today to save European culture from inevitable destruction.

It is only by pursuing such a course that she can hope to have with her the sympathies of the world in the inevitable competition with the Japanese.

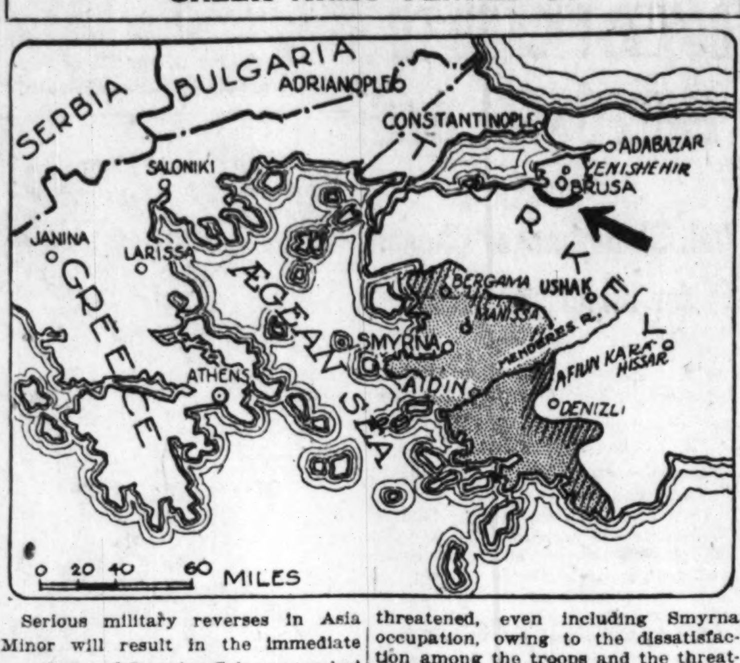
GREEK ARMY PENNED UP



Serious military reverses in Asia Minor will result in the immediate overthrow of Premier Calogeropomlos' cabinet, a report from Athens says. Gen. Gounaris is mentioned as the next premier. The rank and file of the army are expressing dissatisfaction with Gen. Gounaris owing to his flamboyant promises to capture Angora in a month, and the entire government may fall, including King Constantine.

The French officials learn the entire hold of the Greeks in Asia Minor is threatened, even including Smyrna occupation, owing to the dissatisfaction among the troops and the threatening attitude of the Turkish population at Littoral, which greatly outnumbers the Greeks.

It is believed if the nationalist leader Kemal is able to exploit Smyrna he can drive the Greeks to the sea. Cavalry officers and noncommissioned officers between 1901 and 1913 have been called to the colors by the Greeks.

The map shows the Greek army penned up at Brusa, and the Smyrna zone, which is imperiled.

TEN YEARS' WAR WITH UNCLE SAM, JAP PREDICTION

Will End in a Draw, Says Nippon Writer.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKIN, April 9.—Propaganda regarding a probable American-Japanese war is being spread in North China by the Tsinan Jih Jao, a powerful Japanese organ printed in Chinese at Tsinan-fu, the capital of Shantung. The writer of a series of articles on the subject quotes Bernhardi as saying the war would end in a draw but adds that "the Philippines and other American possessions in the Pacific could be occupied by the Japanese army, but this would probably not be wise as great sacrifices would be necessary."

The writer says the war would very likely last ten years and he recommends economy and conservation in the use of Japan's resources, power, and energy in preparation for a bitter conflict.

"We should do ou utmost to preserve peace in China and Siberia so that we can fulfill our mission in this world and establish the foundations of an everlasting empire," he said. "The people should be united in working for the development of war industries and daily necessities so that in case of an emergency there would be no shortage. Should these conditions be fulfilled we would have nothing to fear from a war with America which must be limited to the waters of the Pacific."

War in China Seems Near.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 9.—A civil war in China, such as brought the downfall of the pro-Japanese Anfu party last spring, seems again imminent. Reports from Kansu province indicate that a strong military combination is being formed in northwest China, and that it is making plans for a campaign. From the information received it appears that Chang Tsoling, China's present war lord, and who was the victor in last spring's coup, is back of the move.

PEASANT REVOLT LAID TO SEIZURE OF FOOD BY REDS

RIGA, Letvia, April 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—Peasant riots in western Siberia are reported in Moscow advices today. The peasants have revived the so-called Green army and have occupied Tobolsk, cutting off the town from the trans-Siberian railroad, the advices say.

The insurrection came as a protest against the occupation of the railroad from Cheliabinsk to Omsk by the soviet army and the exportation of foodstuffs over it to Moscow. The Green army recently destroyed nearly 100,000 kilograms of grain requisitioned by soviet agents and destined for cities in central Russia, the advices say, and as a consequence there is nothing left to requisition. The Green army is continuing its attacks on the railroad.

JAPS NOT NAVAL RIVALS OF U. S., IS OFFICIAL'S CLAIM

TOKIO, April 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—Renewed interest in naval curtailment has been aroused by official publication by the navy of the recent statement of Vice Admiral Kato, minister of marine, to the Associated Press, in which he declared Japan was not endeavoring to compete with the American navy and that her project for a fleet of eight battleships and eight battle cruisers not more than eight years old, was not necessarily irreducible.

The comments of newspapers in America on the statement was cabled to Japan and the newspapers here asked the navy department to publish the statement so that they could intelligently discuss it.

WAR SPIRIT OF GERMANS ASTIR, HINDENBURG SAYS

Birthday Note Seen as Threat by France.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921 By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 9.—On the occasion of Gen. Ludendorff's fifty-seventh birthday, Gen. Hindenburg sent to him the following telegram:

"Today, April 9, my thoughts go to my faithful companion in arms who is animated solely by fervent love for the throne and the country.

"Audacious, sure and always ready to assume responsibilities, possessing clear judgment and untiring energy, he was a master at preparing operations and utilizing all means available.

Slides Over "Hurricanes."

"He thus proved himself beside me during the hurricanes of our formidable struggle against a world of enemies.

"I never know how to thank him enough.

"Each day as the regrettable attacks against us become clearer and more precise, we realize the importance and value to Germany of such a grand personage.

Others Like Ludendorff.

"During these grave moments there still live in Germany other men who, like Gen. Ludendorff, think and act for just one aim—victory for our arms and salvation for our country."

Gen. Hindenburg's declaration is interpreted here as a threat against increased French occupation after May 1, if at that time German reparations remain unpaid.

Paris Has Had "Healthy Growth" Despite War

PARIS, April 9.—Corrected figures for the census taken in this city recently, showing the population of four-fifths of the French capital, show there has been a healthy growth since 1911, in spite of the loss of life during the war. The wards for which the figures have been published have increased in population by 22,000, and it is estimated that complete figures for the city will show the population has grown at least 40,000.

TURKO-RUSSIAN TREATY SIGNED; CARVE ARMENIA

Soviets to Aid in War on the Greeks.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 9.—The French foreign office this afternoon gave out the details of a treaty signed in Moscow on March 16 by the Bolshevists and Turks. Both parties to the treaty make remarkable concessions. The document comprises four principal points, which follow:

1. The Russians recognize Constantinople as the capital of Turkey.

2. The Russians and Turks both demand an international agreement wherein all states bordering the areas in question will be represented at a conference for organizing the regime of the Dardanelles and the Black Sea.

Turks to Abandon Batum.

3. The Turks will abandon Batum, giving the port to Georgia, and they will recognize the autonomy of Georgia.

4. Armenia finally disappears, it being divided up among Georgia, Azerbeidjan, and Turkey.

The audacious attitude of the soviets in abandoning the Muscovite claims to Constantinople, it is believed, may shake Lenin's and Trotsky's hold on the bolshevists, as Russia was promised Constantinople in a secret treaty, signed by France and Japan, which brought the czar into the war and kept the Russians fighting when it was announced to the troops after their initial defeats when the Russian people and army were clamoring for peace.

Oppose Sevres Treaty.

The bolshevists joined the Turks in refusing to recognize the Sevres treaty and in demanding a new adjustment of the control of the Dardanelles, the fate of which was decided at the supreme council's conference at San Remo. International jurists always admitted, however, that the Dardanelles question could not be settled without consulting Russia and it has always been tacitly understood that the matter would be reopened when a Russian government was recognized. Certain elements believed that the control of the Dardanelles and Constantinople might have been awarded to Russia some time in the future, but the new alliance wtih Turkey effectually bars this.

The Turkish relinquishment of Batum, the oil port controlling the Baku output, to Georgia and the Ottomans' promise to recognize the autonomy of the Georgian republic is a trump card for the bolshevists who thus control sovietized Georgia and also Azerbeidjan, which includes a slice of Armenia.

Turks Keep Kars Region.

The Kars region is recognized as being under the Turks' sovereignty by the bolshevists, but the reds made the Turks agree not to maintain troops or forts within a twenty mile strip along the Alexandrapol-Erivan railway.

Bolshevist aid for the Turks against the Greeks is reported to be the price for Turkish concessions in the treaty bargaining.

Diplomatic experts believe that the Russo-Turkish accord regarding Constantinople and the Dardanelles will do much to insure future world peace as that important gateway has for centuries been a bone of contention between the Muscovites and the Ottomans.

The Armenian delegation at Paris is already preparing a violent protest against the obliteration of Armenia.

PLANTER GETS LIFE TERM FOR NEGRO MURDER

Covington, Ga., April 9.—Following the arrival tonight of John S. Williams, planter, at the penitentiary at Atlanta, to which he was sentenced for life, the prosecutor here declared he would seek indictments against six or seven others and charge them with participation in the lynching of Eugene Hamilton, a Negro.

Williams was convicted today of the murder of one of the eleven Negroes whose bodies were found on or near his Jasper county farm.

In returning the verdict, the jury urged mercy. That gave Williams the life sentence from which he will appeal.

The prosecutor said tonight he would seek further indictments against Williams and his three sons. Williams was calm when he heard the verdict, but his wife and daughters wept. It is believed that there were fourteen Negroes killed on or near his place and the other bodies are being sought.

"We have the lynchers on the run and intend to clean up the county," the prosecutor said tonight referring to his further activities.

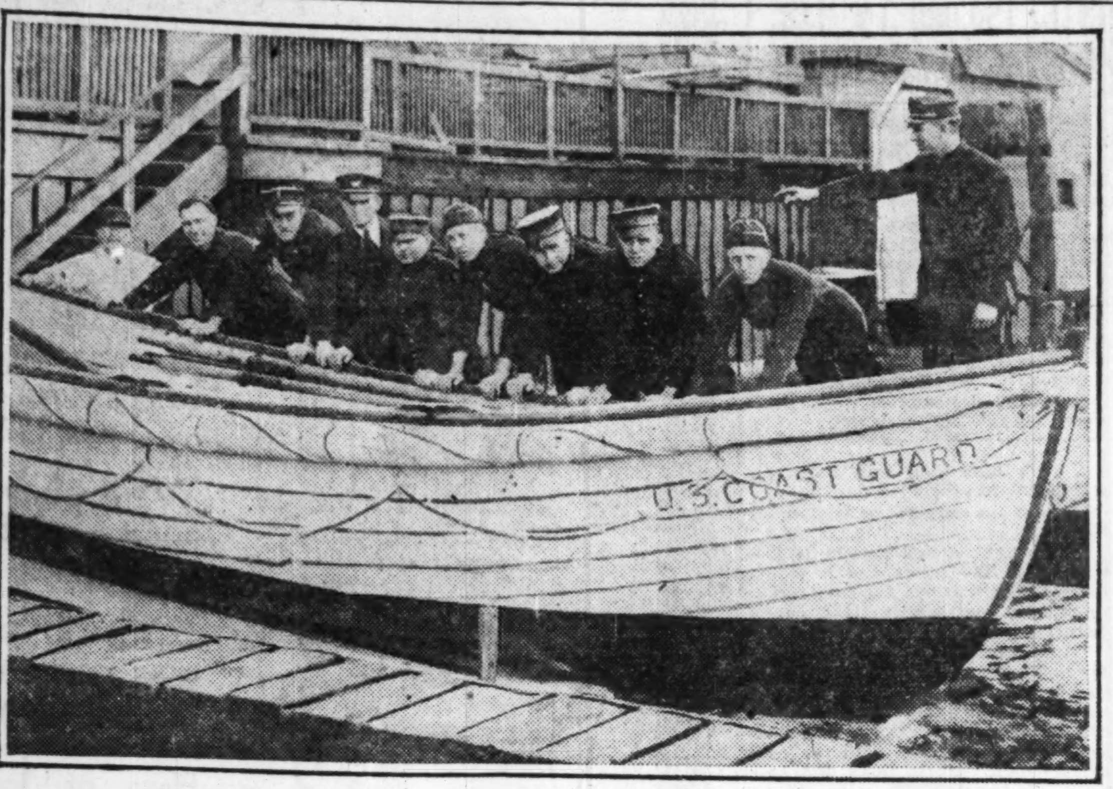
COAST GUARDS SAVE A LIFE



Capt. J. O. Anderson, commanding the coast guard at the mouth of the river, put his crew through their paces yesterday. "Nothing like keeping fit and ready," he said. "We rescued 700 people last year—and we expect to equal that record this year." In a few moments the lookout atop the station saw commotion at the Chicago Yacht club. He notified Capt. Anderson and the latter, through a glass, discovered a man struggling in the water. The gasoline launch went to the rescue. The man, Paul Weber, part owner of the Weber Battery company, 3306-8 Jackson boulevard, was taken on board the naval training ship Commodore, and after forty-five minutes' work was resuscitated. "I just happened to fall into the water," said Weber. "It was so cold that I couldn't swim." The picture shows the guards practicing the launching of their craft.

WATCHMEN LAID OFF; $8 FOREMEN GIVEN THEIR JOBS

'Funny Economy,' Say Bridge Men.

The city, forced to stop all work on the Twelfth street viaduct because of lack of funds, has laid off twelve watchmen, who were paid $110 a month each, and replaced them with foremen and skilled mechanics drawing down $8 a day each.

The watchmen declare that the jobs were given to the foremen and mechanics because "they have a stronger drag than a poor watchman."

"We were receiving just enough to live on," one of them wrote to THE TRIBUNE. "We have been unable to save anything on $110 a month. Now our jobs are given to the foremen who formerly drew down $1.25 an hour and have been able to save money all through the war period."

Explains "Economy" System.

J. J. Versluis, engineer in charge of construction work on the Twelfth street job, explained the unusual "economy" order as follows:

"The city has $300,000 worth of equipment at the Twelfth street viaduct. I consider it dangerous to permit a few $110 a month watchmen to look after that large an investment.

"Before the lay off order there were always mechanics around the job who could care for expensive machinery in case of an accident, but since all work has stopped there would be no skilled help there to take charge of the situation if the watchmen were retained in full charge.

Cites One Instance.

"A few days ago an engine jumped the track and tore away the supports of a $10,000 cement distributing tower. Had there been no mechanics on the job the tower would have toppled over inside of an hour, costing the city $10,000."

But the watchmen declare that hiring $8 a day men to take the places of $110 a month watchmen is "funny economy."

TEN YEARS TO BANK CASHIER.

Medford, Ore., April 9.—William H. Johnson, former cashier of the Bank of Jacksonville, pleaded guilty in Circuit court today to four of the thirty indictments against him for wrecking that institution, and was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence of ten years.

1 PERSON IN EVERY 27 IN OLD FRANCE GUARDS THE OTHER 26

PARIS, April 9.—One person in twenty-seven in France is either guarding or governing the other twenty-six men, women and children, according to parliamentary figures.

The military force of about 770,000 that protects is reinforced on the government's pay roll by a civil army of 700,000 functionaries. These civil rulers and their office forces have been so multiplied during and since the war and their salaries have been so increased that the public payroll for 1921 is fixed at 4,329,000,000 francs. If one adds the wages of the 500,000 railroad employés on the state lines, the payroll now is about 5,000,000,000 francs, or the equivalent, roughly, of the entire pre-war budget.

AMBITION SPURS FORMER CO-ED TO JOB IN NEW YORK

"An eager or inordinate desire to gain power or distinction." So the dictionary says regarding ambition. And that's the definition of the feeling which urged Miss Margaret Macy, her friends say. While a student at Northwestern university she wanted to be an editor. So she became woman editor of the Daily Northwestern. After college she held a job with the fashion journal, Fashions of the Hour. Then she became editor. Tomorrow Miss Macy, who is still in her early twenties, will take another step on ambition's ladder. She will leave for New York City to join the advertising staff of Lord & Taylor.

DIES UNDER ANESTHETIC.

Sioux City, Ia., April 9.—George M. Kellogg Jr., 8, while playing about the lawn got something in one of his eyes. He was taken to a hospital. An anesthetic was given. The child died.

INSANE, SON SAYS, BUT COURT FREES RICH MOTHER, 71

Mrs. Delia Cribben, 71 years old, who was committed to the Chicago State Hospital for the Insane two weeks ago on a petition signed by her son, George Muldoon, 1021 North Kedvale avenue, was released yesterday. She had been detained in the Psychopathic hospital here.

Judge Charles McKinley signed a writ of habeas corpus granting her freedom. During the hearing he questioned Muldoon closely in regard to Mrs. Cribben's $25,000 estate. Mrs. Cribben had previously accused her son of "tucking her away" in order to obtain possession of the estate.

"Why didn't you care for your mother?" Judge McKinley asked.

"She refused to give me $1,000 so I could fix a room for her in my home," replied Muldoon.

"Then you knew she had money?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't she able to take care of it?"

"No," Muldoon said with emphasis. "She continually loaned money which she never got back. It was this that made me think she was a little deranged. I am convinced she should be sent to an insane asylum."

Several times Muldoon broke down and cried. He declared he did not know his mother would be ordered to Dunning when he signed the petition.

Mrs. Cribben is the widow of Richard Cribben, who, prior to his death seven years ago, was general manager of Cribben & Sexton Co., stove manufacturers.

MIXUP LEADS TO MURDER CHARGE AGAINST HARRIS

Elwell Mystery Grows as It Is Withdrawn.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 9.—Roy Harris, whose confession of complicity in the murder of Joseph B. Elwell, New York sportman and card expert, has puzzled the Buffalo and New York police for two days, had a first degree murder charge placed against him for four hours tonight.

The charge was placed opposite his name on the police blotter of the Niagara street station at 6 o'clock. At 10 o'clock Police Chief Higgins announced the charge would be withdrawn and the man would be held on an open charge.

Late this afternoon Dr. James W. Putnam, the alienist who examined Harris on Friday, went to police headquarters and talked for some time with Detective Harry P. Oswald of New York. Dr. Putnam prepared a written statement of his examination of Harris for the New York authorities.

Whitman to Go to Buffalo.

New York, April 9.—Former Gov. Charles S. Whitman announced tonight that he will go to Buffalo tomorrow to interrogate Roy Harris, who "confessed" to Buffalo police that he and an accomplice were hired by a woman to murder Joseph B. Elwell last June. Mr. Whitman will be accompanied by Police Capt. Arthur Carey of the homicide squad.

Whether Harris will be brought to New York and detained in connection with the Elwell case will depend largely, it was said today, on the result of their interrogation.

NO BRIDGE, AUTO GOES THROUGH FENCE; 2 ESCAPE

An automobile containing two men almost went into the river last night at Sunnyside avenue. There is no bridge there, merely a plank fence. The machine went through the fence and landed on the river bank. A concrete sewer saved it from plunging into the water. Thomas J. Walsh, 4701 North Western avenue, was slightly cut. William Tell, 1642 Winnemac avenue, was unhurt. There were no red lights to advertise the danger.

G. E. Strasser, 4137 Indiana avenue, a restaurant man, and George Fritz, 3603 Indiana avenue, a superintendent for Swift & Co., were injured when their automobile collided with a street car at Sixty-first street and Drexel boulevard. Both were taken to Washington Park hospital.

Fireman Frank Novonty, 2332 South Trumbull avenue, died yesterday of injuries received when an automobile struck his fire cart Friday night. Robert Klestineo, 1915 Shelby court, died after being run over by a truck while he was skating in the street.

PLAYS IN CANOE; DROWNS.

Adrian, Mich., April 9.—Wyland Berry, 15, of this city, was drowned this afternoon in Red pond, north of Tecumseh, where he and two boy friends stopped to ride in a canoe while on the way to visit one of the boys' mother, who lives north of Tecumseh. The other boys reached shore.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN GERMANY IS GROWING ACUTE

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 9.—The number of German workers who are out of employment has rapidly increased this week. Reports show a decreased output in practically every industry, with the consequent laying off of help. Certain building construction has improved slightly, but not enough to be of great help. The textile industry has suffered severely, and more and more people employed in that line of business are being let go.

The service of the nation's transportation systems, especially the railroads, has noticeably improved. This is explained by the fact that at present only 28,000 tons of coal is being transported daily, whereas the normal amount is 32,000 tons.

Lloyd George's economic sanctions are declared to be mainly responsible for the serious situation of the textile companies. There have been numerous cancellations of orders. The factories in the occupied zones are said to be suffering worse than those in the unoccupied regions.

The entente reprisals have ruined the china porcelain trade, which expected great business to result from the Leipzic fair, but not only has it failed to get business but orders have been canceled.

DRINKS OBTAINED BY APPOINTMENT ONLY IN GOTHAM

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Drinks could be obtained by appointment only in New York City today by persons who had no home stocks, according to reports from all the boroughs.

Many saloons and restaurants were transferred into booking agencies, where the thirsty could make their appointments. Only drinkers of standing could procure passports to the grottos.

Commissioner Enright issued special instructions to the police today to capture "walking cellars." One of the first effects of the seizure of liquor in saloons has been to bring out the perambulating saloon—the man with flasks or bottles in "sideboard" pockets, who seeks customers and sells liquor by the "swig" in secluded spots.

Consequently police are listening for coats which gurgle or clink.

OLD CREED WINS OUT IN CAUCUS OF DEMOCRATS

Tague Chosen Ways and Means Member.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—A test of strength between the tariff for revenue only Democrats and those favoring protection for certain commodities took place in the Democratic house caucus today. The former won by a small margin.

The issue was brought up in connection with the selection of a member of the ways and means committee. Candidates for the vacancy were Representative Tague of Massachusetts and Representative Hayden of Arizona. Representative Tague won out by a vote of 59 to 54. Representative Tague voted against the emergency agricultural tariff bill in the last session, while Representative Hayden supported it.

The caucus nominated Representative Kitchin of North Carolina for speaker. This nomination carries with it the minorty leadership of the house.

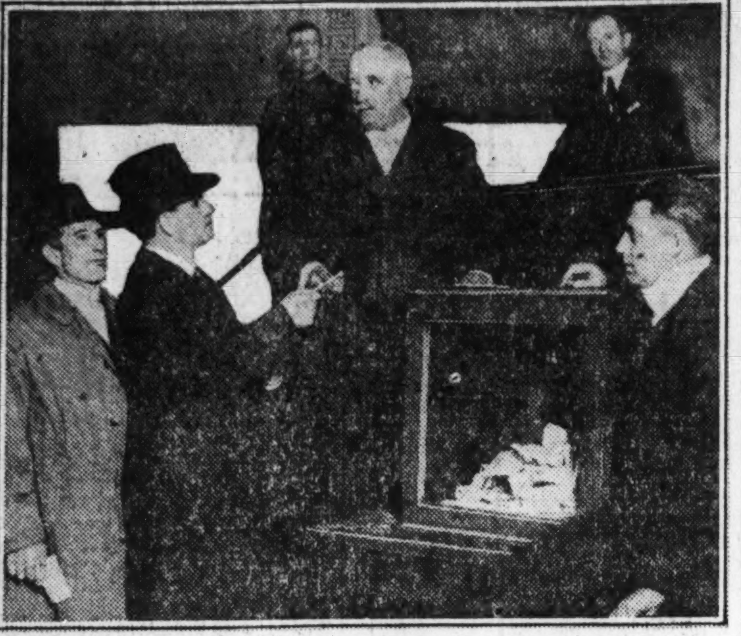
AGAINST A WAGE CUT



A heavy vote against the proposed 20 per cent reduction in wages of building trades workmen was cast yesterday by members of the bricklayers' union in their headquarters at Monroe and Peoria streets. Delegates to the carpenters' district council, who voted earlier in the week to accept no reduction, voted last night to submit the question to a referendum of all the members, to be taken not later than April 23. The bricklayers' polls will be open again today. Peter Shaughnessy, president, said he expected 4,000 ballots to be cast. The vote will be counted tonight. The picture shows (from left to right) Harry Sparto, George London, Jerry Cooney, and Charles McNicholas.

BEG YOUR PARDON

THE TRIBUNE's report of the number of voters qualified for the election of April 5 gave "553,718 men and 535,257 women, a total of 888,975." The error is obviously typographical. The correct number of women was 335,257. Later revisions make the totals now 552,101 men and 334,834 women, or 886,935 in all.

In a recent issue THE TRIBUNE gave credit for the arrest and conviction of James Kennedy, Jack Craft and Elmer Baily to Lieut. John Naughton. The trio were arrested and sentenced to prison from ten years to life, through the efforts of Detective Sergts. Cusack, Gratton, Knowles, O'Neill, and Ryan. Lieut. Naughton was not connected with the case.

On April 3, in an article reporting the death of John Z. Vogelsang, THE TRIBUNE stated that the restaurant owner entered into a partnership with William Mangler in 1883. Mr. Vogelsang took a small interest in the Mangler restaurant in that year and a year and a half later increased his share to a half interest. The article also stated that the elder Carter H. Harrison was a frequenter of Vogelsang's Madison street restaurant. The younger Carter H. Harrison was meant.

DOROTHY ARNOLD CASE A SECRET, NOT A MYSTERY

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—An effort was made today to induce Richard E. Enright, police commissioner, to deny or confirm the statement made last night by Capt. John H. Ayers, head of the bureau of missing persons, that the police had solved the mystery of Dorothy Arnold's disappearance on Dec. 12, 1910.

Commissioner Enright was inaccessible at police headquarters. Members of his staff could not say whether or not the mystery had been solved. Capt. Ayers is on five days' leave and was not to be found at his home in Brooklyn.

Charles S. Whitman, who was district attorney at the time Miss Arnold disappeared, declined to discuss the case, saying he had not seen the published reports, but the assertion of Capt. Ayers was denied vigorously by John S. Keith, attorney for Miss Arnold's father.

Capt. Ayers referred to the Arnold case while answering questions after he had made an address on the police department at the High School of Commerce last night. After the lecture he refused to amplify his original statement that "the case has been solved by the department, and Dorothy Arnold is no longer listed as a missing person." To indicate whether she was alive or dead, he said, would be "violating a confidence."

TRAVELING MEN MUST RETRENCH; BALM IN GIDEON

Bad Business Brings Cut Expenses Order.

Traveling salesmen—this story is for you. If you are so fortunate as to be home with your family this Sunday morning, you will have friends who will listen to your outburst. Alas, if you are marooned today in some unfriendly rural hotel as you read this you will be lonesome and downcast. Proceed then, sir, to your room, pick up the Gideon Bible, and open the cover.

You will find there the advice: "If you are losing confidence in men read I. Cor., 13." Read it.

Watch Your Expense Account.

For yesterday the following letter was sent to its hundreds of traveling salesmen, spread over the entire United States, by the largest corporation of its kind in the world, a corporation whose capital runs into millions:

"Diminishing margins of profit, plus the materially reduced volume of business, has created a very acute situation, which necessitates a substantial curtailment in our overhead, and we must ask you to make an immediate reduction of not less than 20 per cent in your expenses. This means a careful scrutiny of your expense account every day and even more careful planning so that you will get a maximum return at a minimum expense.

"This program calls for sacrifices on the part of each and every one of us and unless we can show a material reduction in our overhead through reduced expenses it may be necessary for our officials to go even further and reduce salaries."

Again Refer to the Gideon.

Take up the Gideon once more. Under the cover you will read: "If you can't have your own way, read James 3." Read it.

More of the corporation's letter follows:

"Reductions of salaries will be done only as a last resort and it is our earnest hope that our expenses can be so reduced that salaries need not be disturbed.

"Retrenchment is the order of the day and every one must fall in line or step aside."

Supplementing the letter one of the officials of the company added, "We are hard hit and find with the enormously high railroad fares and hotel rates it is impossible to go on without some curtailment. Hotels that formerly charged $1 and $1.50 now get $1.50 and $3, and meals in proportion. All this despite drops in everything that enters into their upkeep."

Similar letters are being sent to salesmen by other companies.

Ask for Reduced Fares.

Resolutions asking that passenger fares for traveling men be reduced to two cents a mile and that a reduction be made in general passenger rates were adopted at a meeting last night in the Auditorium hotel of post C of the Travelers' Protective association. National President R. J. White was present.

The resolutions will have the indorsement of 1,200 Chicago traveling men and 9,000 in Illinois. They will be sent to the interstate commerce commission.

UNCLE SAM HOLDING $161,150,000 IN HIS POSTAL SAVINGS BANK

Washington, D. C., April 9.—Deposits in the United States postal saving system were approximately $161,150,000 on April 1, the postoffice department announced today.

Phoenix, Ariz., with deposits for March totaling $158,064, led in the gains for the month and jumped from 139th to 58th rank in the total amount on deposit.

Boston came second in the monthly gain, with $146,892; New York, third, with $84,491, and Globe, Ariz., fourth, with $21,700. One hundred and forty-three postal depositories now have more than $100,000 on deposit.

RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM BEFORE NEW CONGRESS

President to Outline His Peace Plans.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—With the Republicans controlling both the executive and legislative branches of the government for the first time in a decade, the sixty-seventh congress will meet in extraordinary session Monday to embark upon a program of reconstruction involving problems greater than those of the war.

Following the organization of the house and reëlection of Speaker Gillett on Monday President Harding will appear before a joint session of the two houses on Tuesday to outline his plan for reëstablishing peace with Germany and stabilizing world peace and to present recommendations of tariff, tax, and other domestic legislation.

Agricultural Bill Up.

The program of legislation to be considered includes the following:

1. An agricultural emergency tariff bill practically identical with that vetoed by President Wilson.
2. An anti-dumping bill to prevent foreign manufacturers from flooding American markets with goods at prices below fair value in the exporting country.
3. A bill basing duties on the American instead of the foreign valuation of imports, designed to eliminate exchange difficulties and afford increased protection under present rates.
4. A permanent tariff bill for protection of American producers as well as for increased revenue.
5. Revision of direct taxation and repeal of the excess profits.
6. Army and navy appropriation bills, which failed in the last congress, involving national defense policies and the question of reduction of naval armament.
7. The soldiers' bonus and soldiers' relief generally, including adequate hospitalization for disabled service men.

Bills Vetoed by Wilson.

8. Repassage of the bill for percentage restriction of immigration, pocket vetoed by President Wilson.
9. Establishment of the budget system proposed in the bill vetoed by President Wilson.
10. Action on the president's proposals for termination of the state of war with Germany, Austria, and Hungary.
11. The Colombia treaty, on which the senate is to vote on its eighth legislative day.
12. Reapportionment of congressional representation.
13. Further railroad investigation and possibly legislation.
14. Reorganization of the government departments and reclassification of government employés.
15. Americanization and federal aid to education.
16. Maternity and infancy bill providing federal nursing aid to the states.

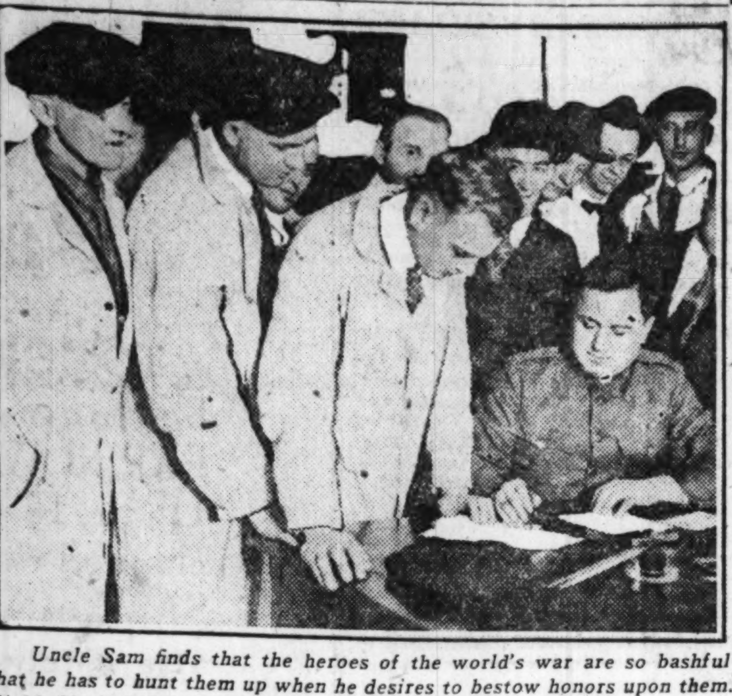
The measures for the regulation of cold storage will be revived as well as those for government supervision of packing establishments and for prohibition of grain speculation. Senator Calder will push his bill for government regulation of coal production and for legislation dealing with the housing shortage.

Early Action on Tariff.

The emergency tariff bill is ready for introduction on Monday and will be passed by the house on Tuesday or Wednesday. The anti-dumping bill also will be introduced early in the week and will be passed without delay. The American valuation bill is causing more difficulty, but according to the plans of the leaders, also will be put through the house during the first week of the session.

The house ways and means committee has been at work for the last month in the drafting of the permanent tariff bill. The committee will continue at this without interruption except during the time necessary for consideration of the three emergency measures on the floor. While Chairman Fordney hopes to report the permanent tariff bill from committee about May 1, most of the members of the committee believe it is likely to be May 15 or possibly June 1 or later.

Rewarded Despite Themselves



Uncle Sam finds that the heroes of the world's war are so bashful that he has to hunt them up when he desires to bestow honors upon them. Field Clerk Richard Wagner is shown listing ex-service men at Swift & Co.'s stockyards plant who are entitled to Victory medals.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Chicago's war heroes are shy and retiring—at least when it comes to accepting Uncle Sam's official recognition of their glorious deeds. So coy are the majority of ex-service men that the Victory medal section of the United States army has found difficulty in getting the veterans to apply for the medals due them.

Last week the army adopted new tactics, and sent Richard Wagner, a field clerk, on a tour of the city's factories and big industrial establishments, to seek out the former fighters in their places of employment. The government's representative began his endeavors in Packingtown, where heads of packing plants bulletined his visit to their employés and gave him all possible assistance.

NAVY BALLOON IS FOUND; NO TRACE OF 5 OCCUPANTS

Panama City, Fla., April 9.—The naval balloon which has been missing with five men since March 22 was picked up in the gulf late yesterday by a fishing boat and brought here today. No trace of the crew was found.

The balloon was commanded by Pilot G. K. Wilkinson of Houston, Tex., when it took the air. With him in the basket were four student pilots, R. E. Eland, Bellville, Ill.; E. L. Kersnaw, Payne, Ia.; J. E. Elder, Lebanon, N. Y., and W. H. Trefrey, Salem, Mass.

Navy Believes Men Dead.

Washington, D. C., April 9.—The navy department late today received confirmation of the finding of the missing navy balloon last night. The general supposition is that the balloon had been in the water for two weeks and that the five men were drowned.

HOOSIERS HERE TO ENTERTAIN INDUSTRY HEADS

Industrial leaders of Indiana will be the guests of the Indiana Society of Chciago at a dinner and meeting at the Drake hotel, April 16. Every Hoosier who has given something to the industrial world is expected to be present.

The guest of the evening will be Elwood Haynes, pioneer in the automobile industry. The story of the industrial development of Indiana will be told by men and women who know. The rise of the canning industry, the truck business, the building of sewing machines, windmills, gasoline pumps, sockknitting mills, doll factories, and watch companies will be related.

"Indiana is fortunate in possessing the leaders of this nation in many of our greatest industrial achievements," says an announcement.

DEMOCRATS TO HELP REBUILD U.S., WHITE DECLARES

Washington, D. C., April 9.—George White, chairman, Democratic national committee, who is conferring with the Democratic senate and house leaders on the eve of the meeting of the new congress, announced today that aside from purely organization activity, the efforts of the national committee would "be intended to be helpful to" President Harding. He added that the administration, "with its manifold and conflicting obligations" would need the help of all.

Leonard, president of the Chicago Story Tellers' league, will conduct a story telling hour at the recreational leaders' training course now being conducted. Mrs. Leonard will speak on the theory of story telling and how stories may be adapted to different ages and types of people. The class meets from 2 to 4 o'clock and is open to all women and girls.

Paper, Pulp Mill Union Chiefs Reject Wage Cut

New York, April 9.—Union representatives of the workers in the paper and pulp mills of the United States and Canada at a conference here today rejected a proposal by the mill owners calling for a 30 per cent wage reduction and increasing the working day from eight to nine hours. The action now goes to a referendum, probably Sunday, April 17, with the understanding that if a new pact is not reached by the expiration of existing contracts, "work will automatically cease in the mills of the companies."

Shooting Victim Dies; Cafe Man Faces Murder Charge

Camillo Marcuccilli, who was shot last Monday while is a restaurant on West Harrison street, died yesterday in the North Chicago hospital. Michael De Millio, restaurant owner, against whom a formal charge of murder will be entered, police say, is under arrest. Two others are held.

Former Michael Cudahy Home Partly Burned

A three story brick building at 3136 South Michigan boulevard, the former home of Michael Cudahy, the packer, was partly burned last night. The building had been vacant for twelve years until it was rented two years ago as a repair shop for the Dodge Motor company.

"GRIDIRON CLUB" PUTS DEMOCRATS TO WORK AT LAST

Annual Spring Frolic Held by Correspondents.

Washington, D. C., April 9.—The Gridiron club of Washington correspondents, at its spring dinner tonight, had as guests President Harding and Vice President Coolidge, all members of the cabinet, members of both houses of congress, the diplomatic corps, officers of the army and navy, and many national figures from civil life.

The evening's fun, as usual, centered about politics, and the departure of the old administration and the inauguration of the new furnished the material.

The guests entered the room through an antechamber which had been converted into a scene reminiscent of the Florida tri pto the president.

Democrats Go to Work.

Disturbances started with the beginning of the dinner. No sooner were the guests seated than the tramping of heavy feet and the rattling of dinner pails was heard outside the room. The presiding officer demanded an explanation.

"That dismal sound, Mr. President," came the answer, "is the Democrats going to work."

An early feature was the inauguration, with "simplicity and economy," of N. O. Messenger of the Washington Star as president of the Gridiron club.

"How much did that inauguration cost?" was demanded.

"S-s-s-h-h-h!" was the reply. "Thirty cents, but don't tell Senator Borah."

Dawes Cusses a Little.

A party, including Skipper Frelinghuysen, Secretary George Christian, William Jennings Bryan, and Gen. Dawes, came in.

The general explained he had just left "those blithering idiots investigating war expenditures."

"They say you swore something awful," somebody remarked.

"Not a damn bit of it," the general said. "I might have cussed a little, but I held my temper. A man's got to cuss or cry, and I didn't cry."

At one stage of the dinner, a number of distinguished guests were called to their feet as comprising the country's "best minds," while human "amplifiers" standing behind them projected their "real thoughts" to the audience.

Hoover's Revenue Tag Day.

The program included several constitutional amendments, the last being one "abolishing all taxation and providing for the collection of revenue to carry on the government by means of national tag day, under the direction of Herbert Hoover."

A silk hatted gentleman carrying a portfolio of papers was discovered rushing violently across the dining room, only to retrace his steps in the same hurried fashion. After several trips he turned out to be Vice President Coolidge.

"He says," reported a club officer, "that he is doing his best to keep his engagements between the cabinet room and the senate."

POOLE FINDS FOUR RESTAURANTS STILL CHARGE WAR PRICES

FOUR Chicago restaurants are charging prices which would have made their proprietors "good money" when food prices were at their war time peak, Russell J. Poole, city Hi Cost expert, declared yesterday in a report to Ald. Max Adamowski.

"There is no excuse for such prices in view of a decline of approximately 50 per cent in the cost of the commodities," Mr. Poole said.

The restaurants cited in the report are:

Joy Yen Lo restaurant, 18 North Clark street—Steak sandwich containing 2¼ ounces of bread, 4 ounces of beef tenderloin, costing 42 cents a pound, and one olive, 50 cents.

New Annex restaurant, West Sixty-third and Ashland avenue—Two fried eggs, 35 cents; eggs cost less than 2½ cents each. One egg sandwich, containing 2 ounces of bread and one egg, 20 cents; cost of sandwich less than 4 cents. Two three ounce pork chops, 60 cents.

Grant Park Inn restaurant, 306 South Wabash avenue—Special sandwich, consisting of 1 ounce of cheese, 1 ounce of chicken, ½ ounce of tomatoes, 1 ounce of egg salad, and one piece of pickle, 60 cents. One-sixth cut of apple pie, 20 cents.

Opera Coffee shop, 433 South Wabash avenue—2½ ounces of pot roast, 3 ounces of mashed potatoes, 1 leaf of lettuce, and 2½ ounces of rolls, 70 cents.

Dry Agents Raid Gardens Where Mullen Was Killed

For the third time in three months the Lincoln gardens at 1820 North Wells street, where Policeman John Mullen was killed by Edward Morris, now under life sentence, were raided yesterday.

BUTCHER'S WIDOW AND SON HELD AS HIS MURDERERS

MRS. DORA WATERMAN.

Mrs. Dora Waterman, 2536 West Division street, and her 17 year old son, Russell, were held to the grand jury yesterday for the slaying of the husband and father on March 27 with a meat cleaver at the inquest in West Chicago avenue station. Detective Sergeant William T. Russell was the only witness examined. Mrs. Waterman and Russell showed no interest in the proceedings and refused to testify on advice of an attorney.

RUSSELL WATERMAN.

The coroner's jury recommended Jacob Waterman, a 10 year old son, be put in the custoday of juvenile authorities pending the settlement of the case. The boy was a witness to the tragedy.

Detective Sergeant Russell testified he found a large capacity whisky still in the basement.

Louis Waterman was proprietor of a butcher shop at the Division street address.

EVEN THE CIRCUS P. A. FOUND THIS YARN 100 PROOF

A Few Adjectives About the Opening Show.

At midnight last night Frank Braden, press agent, was discovered cavorting about the lobby of the Palmer house. He was hatless. His hair was disheveled. His collar was unfastened. From his lips came the strains of the "Spring Song." While he whistled he danced. As they led him off to bed he became quiet and drew from his pocket a newspaper clipping describing the opening of the circus yesterday. The story:

The most stupendous spectacle ever presented before Chicago audiences stupefied the enormous crowd that filled the Coliseum yesterday to attend the opening performance of the Sells-Floto circus.

After the three hour performance the thousands of Chicagoans sat in their seats unable to move, unable to realize that the most gigantic circus performance in the history of the world had finally come to a close. It was twilight before the matinée crowd had finally left the building.

Glorious, Luxurious, Etc., Etc.

The doors of the Coliseum were thrown open at noon yesterday for the opening matinée of Chicago's first 1921 circus. The huge amphitheater was jammed long before the ring master's whistle started the glorious, luxurious, super-extravagant, silvered-golden-gilded opening procession around the monstrous arena.

The procession, romantic in its depicted scenes, brilliant in its colors, and beautiful beyond comprehension—you must see it to believe—caught the breath and interest of the throng. Women laughed and cried. Boys sat open mouthed in wonder. Old men doubted the testimony of their eyes.

Then came the hundreds of acts. The breath taking trapeze performers brought the crowd to its feet time and again. The clowns—fifty-seven of them, each funnier than the one preceding—rocked the stands in mirth.

Elephants—Thunder; Good Line, No?

The trained elephants won thunderous applause. The dancing girls, the beautiful high school horses, the sublime statues, the Japanese tumblers, the wood choppers, the wire dancers—and a thousand other features, drew such a banging of hand clapping as never was heard in the Coliseum since the Roosevelt rallies in the convention of 1912.

The Riding Hannefords, the Flying Wards, the Flying Nelsons, the Otawages Japs, the Madri Arabs, Berta Beeson, the star wire dancer; Beatrice, the human top; Nadje, the physical culture girl; the Luckeys, the Hamiltons, the Sweeneys, the Newtons, and others—yes, hundreds of others, too numerous to mention here.

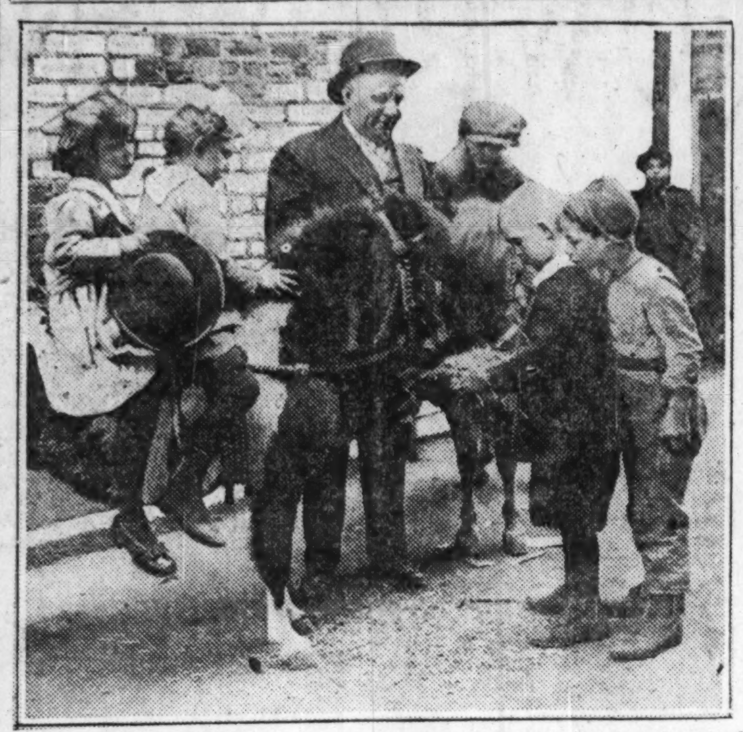
Two Weeks of It.

The circus will give this same entertainment at the same place every day for two weeks.

It is the greatest circus Chicago has seen—this year.

The reporter who wrote the foregoing article, which the press agent found in an early edition, did not attend the circus. Another did and pronounced the story correct, though insufficient and a bit modest.

HE DOES IT WITHOUT A MAKEUP



Jack Albion, one of the clowns in the Sells-Floto circus, demonstrated yesterday that it was not entirely the costume which attracts the children to those of his profession. Henrietta Parker, Dorothy Hill, Edward Hoover, and John Golfo appear to be as interested in him and his pet as if he wore the garments in which he appears in the ring.

D'Andrea, Taken in Raid, Denies Gambling Charge

Lieut. William Schoemaker and Detectives Murphy, Fraser, and Wachholz raided the Italian-American Educational club, at Miller and Taylor streets, last night and arrested seventeen men. They declared eight were playing poker and that some of the cards were marked. Tony D'Andrea and Michael Iarussi, political leaders, arrested with the others, declare nobody was playing poker, that four were playing rhummy for fun, one was playing piano, and the rest were playing pool.

TWO BLAMED FOR TORPEDO BLAST LOCATED, REPORT

Fire Attorney Demands Manslaughter Bill.

Reports were circulated yesterday that William Singer and Nathan Schaffer, sought by the police, the state's attorney's aids, and the state fire marshal's men in connection with the recent South Halsted street fireworks explosion, had been located. The blast took six lives and caused much property damage. The men, it is said, have been in hiding, even from their families, since the day of the explosion.

"Bordering on Breakdown."

The rumors were to the effect that Singer and Schaffer, stricken by remorse bordering on nervous breakdown, long to give themselves up, but are afraid to do so; until formal charges are placed against them, so they may give bonds and return to their families.

Attachés of the state's attorney's office were not excited.

"O, we have known right along where they were hiding," said Chief Investigator Benjamin J. Newmark. "The only reason we didn't have them picked up was that we hadn't come to their case in the regular order of business."

Meantime City Fire Attorney Shirley T. High, in a report to Fire Chief O'Connor, placed the blame for the explosion on Singer and Schaffer. A copy of his report was sent to State's Attorney Crowe, with the recommendation that Singer and Shaffer be indicted on charges of manslaughter.

"Broke Laws Wantonly."

Mr. High's report stated:

"There was not a single circumstance connected with the business of Singer & Schaffer, in so far as it related to fireworks, that was not in utter disregard of existing ordinances. A more flagrant, wanton, and persistent violation of the laws enacted for the protection of human life and property it is difficult to imagine."

The report reviews the closing of the Singer & Schaffer place of business by the police on orders of Fire Chief McDonnell on May 29, 1920, and continues:

"About the middle of February, 1921, which is the beginning of the fireworks season, Singer & Schaffer, ignoring the warning given them by Chief McDonnell, again resumed the business of dealing in fireworks. From then until the explosion they received large quantities of all kinds, including hundreds of boxes of torpedoes—which were the specific cause of the explosion."

She Saves Him from Court Just to Slam Him Herself

Half a minute after her plea had freed Steven Orbich, 5001 Berkeley avenue, up for disorderly conduct in South Chicago court, Addie Patterson, colored, 9040 Buffalo avenue, punched him in the eye and jabbed him in the abdomen, sending him hurrying thence. "I'll take care of him myself. I guess he won't bother me any more," she laughed. He had been arrested for annoying her.

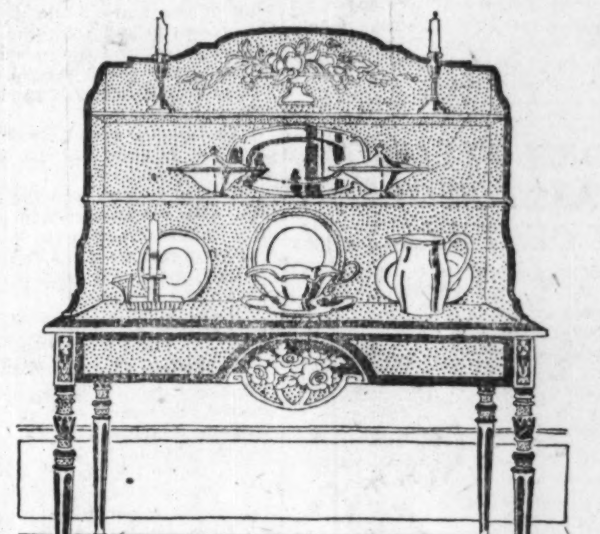
TOBEY

ESTABLISHED IN 1856

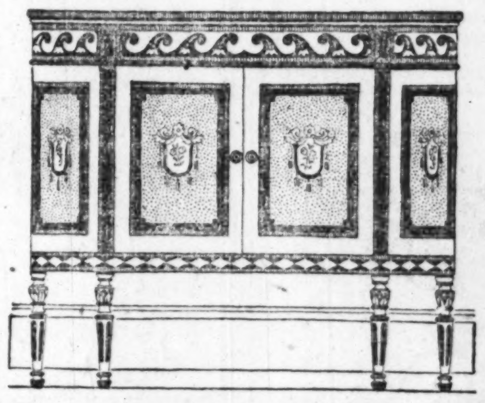


Our Exclusive Exhibit of Batik Furniture

WE invite a visit to our specially decorated Batik Room on our first floor. The furniture there has just returned from the Applied Arts Exhibition at the Art Institute.

The most intricate and dainty furniture we have had was that produced in Italy after the discovery of Pompeii in 1758. The beautiful effects then achieved with ivory and colored wood inlays are difficult to secure in these days because of the scarcity of skilled marquetry workers.

Batik wax-dyeing of cloth was brought to Holland from Java some three hundred years ago. Twenty-five years ago it was revived and in 1914 was first applied to wood.



As with the cloth the design is painted on with wax, the whole piece dyed and the wax rubbed off leaving the beautiful combination of the involved Italian designs on the unchanged figure of the wood.

The suave lines, molded after the Italian classical rebirth furniture, are enhanced by deliciously soft color combinations.

In addition to bedrooms, living rooms or breakfast rooms furnished in the Batik, a piece here and there will always be used to impart a clear and quiet tone to a room.

INVENTION GIVES BUILDERS EASY PATH TO BEDROCK

City Engineer Approves Excavating Mechanism.

Blueprints of an invention which, its maker declares, will permit skyscraper foundations to reach bed rock —90 to 100 feet below Chicago street levels — was approved yesterday by City Engineer Alexander Murdoch.

The owner of the patents, W. T. McCarthy of 400 North Wells street, asserts the invention will reduce the cost of river and lake pier construction 50 per cent, and will make it possible to construct as many as eight basement stories, for storage or other uses, beneath downtown buildings.

"Where the engineer must deal with quicksand and water, McCarthy's scheme has great possibilities," Mr. Murdoch said. "Its use under those conditions would mean a big saving in construction costs."

Idea of Invention.

McCarthy's plan consists of driving pointed five inch steel tubes into the ground to the depth to which the foundations are to be laid. Steel cables would run over pullies at the tops of the tubes and extend to other pullies at the tubes' lower ends, passing out through slots and returning to the surface, where the cables are attached to a steel cutting edge five feet wide and twenty-five feet long.

Steam winches and "chain blocks" to which the cables are attached would furnish the power to pull the heavy cutting edge into the ground to the desired depth. Pile drivers would also be used when necessary to force down the heavy "shoe."

As the "shoe" is pulled into the ground, sheets of boiler plate, riveted to it, follow, creating a steel wall against quicksand and water. In this way the sand and water may be walled off on all sides, creating a waterproof "box" in which excavation would be easy, according to the inventor.

Eliminates Costly Piling.

After concrete foundations had been laid in the protection of the boiler plate, which may be sunk in twenty-five foot sections, the cutting edge and the boiler plate wall would be withdrawn.

"Use of costly sheet piling, which invariably leaks, hampering work, is not necessary with this device," McCarthy said.

"At a demonstration for the city engineer of Minneapolis I pulled the steel shield 110 feet into the ground through forty-seven feet of clay and sixty-three feet of quicksand. When rocks are encountered they are broken up by churn drills."

The device will be tried out in the near future.

WOMEN VOTERS, CLUBS IN HAND, MEET THIS WEEK

Cleveland, O., April 9.—The National League of Woman Voters, with approximately 2,000,000 members in the forty-eight states, will open its second annual convention here Monday with about 1,000 delegates and alternates representing the membership in its first convention since the women were given the right to vote. The convention will last through the week.

One of the most important things the convention is expected to seek is a law to protect the mothers of the country and their babies.

The board of directors, the chairmen of standing committee and the regional directors have been in preconvention session and it is expected that recommendations in favor of the passage of the Sheppard-Towner bill, providing federal aid for maternity and infant care, will be presented.

Bank Teller Arrested on Embezzlement Charge

Edward Gulliken, 24 years old, receiving teller for the West Side National bank at 1600 West Roosevelt road, was arrested last night by Detective Sergts. O'Neill, Cusack, Gratton, and Knowles, on a charge of embezzlement. The complaint signed by Benjamin L. Zinder, one of the bank officials, charges the tearing up of a $300 deposit slip and the taking of the money. A check of the man's books is being made.

"JOIN A-PARTY" IS PLEA TO WOMEN VOTE DELEGATES

Leave Today for Big Cleveland Rally.

"Enroll in Political Parties" is the slogan that will be plastered all over the New York Central coaches which leave the La Salle station at 11:30 o'clock this morning to carry Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa delegates to the second annual convention of the League of Women Voters, which opens tomorrow at the Hotel Statler, Cleveland.

League Not Partisan.

"The league is not a woman's party or a separate political organization," said Mrs. Henry W. Cheney of 6041 Kenwood avenue, Illinois chairman. "It is organized to do legislative work in order to promote its program. It is not partisan. It will not support or attack national candidates or national parties."

Mrs. Cheney, accompanied by Mrs Catharine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston and Mrs. James W. Morrisson of Wilmette, left last night to be present at a preliminary executive meeting of the convention this morning.

Delegates from Illinois.

MANY can sing this wonderful old song, but few can sing it with the heart searching pathos that made the reputation of the great Patti.

And so it is with any of the old time melodies—songs that will live forever. Simple though they are, it takes a great artist to sing or play them so that their fragrance and beauty is truly revealed.

It is such artists who play music of this kind for

LANDLORDS HOPE TO PIT TENANT AGAINST TENANT

League Laughs at New Idea of Court Fights.

Announcement yesterday by realtors and landlords engaged in rent conflicts with their present tenants that they will solve their difficulties on May 1 by sitting aside and letting tenant fight tenant, brought caustic replies from officials of the Chicago Tenants' Protective league.

The landlords' plan is to rent the apartments of tenants who are fighting rent increases to others, and turn over to the new tenants leases and keys, with "permission" to enter on May 1. The new tenant, under the law, will then have to take the initiative against the old in a suit to secure possession.

"Tenant against tenant, eh?" exclaimed A. E. Jessurun, secretary of the Tenants' Protective league. "If they think that plan will work they are mistaken. Very few apartments in which our "unfair" signs are posted have been rented to new tenants. The people do not wish to become involved in long drawn out law suits while camping in a hotel or elsewhere waiting for a tenant to be dispossessed.

Signs Worry Landlords.

"In many cases where the signs were displayed the landlords compromised. In other cases landlords have sought every court action to force "striking" tenants to take down the signs. They admitted in their own applications for injunctions that they were licked by the sign.

"The statement that the landlords will leave it to new tenants to get the old ones out is a direct confession that the landlords haven't a chance to rent their apartments under the conditions. In the meantime prospective new tenants reading such a statement will surely refuse to sign up for a place into which they may be unable to move on May 1."

Plans of the league for a continued campaign in behalf of the Kessinger rent bills before the house at Springfield were again taken up yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee.

Here's the Ideal Landlord.

"We must all live and let live," is the motto of John H. Curtis, a Chicago reality dealer for thirty-five years, with offices at 4966 Irving Park boulevard. In a communication to THE TRIBUNE he qualifies for enrollment on the landlords' honor roll for never having raised the rent of a tenant.

"For the last thirty-five years I have handled more than 10,000 tenants, and I have never raised the rents of any of them, nor do I propose to," writes Mr. Curtis. "If all real estate men and landlords use my methods there would not be so much talk about rent hogs and profiteering in the renting business."

CAMPAIGN OPENS FOR $20,000,000 TO AID SCHOOLS

Change Taxing Laws, Lawmaker's Plea.

Agitation for passage by the legislature of a bill providing for an appropriation of $20,000,000 for the schools of Illinois was started last night at a mass meeting in the John Marshall High school, 3250 West Adams street. The campaign will continue for a week.

Among the speakers at the first rally was Senator Harold C. Kessinger, who said the schools will not be able to get sufficient funds from the state until a complete revision of the tax laws is made. He urged the adoption of a resolution now before the legislature which will permit a state vote on a revision of the tax laws in 1922.

"School teachers know that enough money can never be raised under the present tax system," he said. "We wish to get at the root of the matter, the fundamentals, the basic law. It is uncertain whether the constitutional convention will offer the necessary remedy. Every other great northern state has revised its tax laws except Illinois. Why not Illinois?

"We have a stage coach tax law for an automobile age. The present system of taxation is unscientific and unjust, a crazy quilt patchwork. A man's income is practically confiscated. The present law makes every man either a liar or a fool. And we have few fools in Chicago.

"Any man's property which the assessor can see is penalized. Real estate pays 80 per cent of the taxes in Chicago. Tax dodging is a disease that will remain incurable as long as the tax laws are unamended. One of the constructive things needed in the housing problem is to make it so every man who owns something isn't penalized."

Peter Mortenson and Edward J. Tobin, superintendents respectively of the city and county schools, also spoke. Both told their hearers that unless financial succor is given the schools one-third will either have to be closed or the salaries of teachers reduced.

DRILLS OF WAR AT GRANT PARK ATHLETIC MEET

Military League to Hold Games on May 20.

Individual and group competitions in full field equipment will be one of the features of the military athletic carnival to be held by the Military Athletic Association of Illinois in Grant park on May 20.

Wall scaling contests for platoons of fifty men and for crews of Stokes mortar and 1.55 mm. gun batteries are on the list of events. The gun crews will race fifty yards to a wall, dissemble the gun, scale the wall, assemble the piece, race fifty yards more, and fire one shot. The squad firing the first shot will be declared winner.

Hand grenade throwing under service conditions will be on the basis of accuracy and distance.

Races under full equipment, starting and finishing in trenches, will be held at 100, 220, and 440 yards, and there will be 120 and 220 yard events over two and a half foot hurdles, and half miles, mile, and two mile relays.

A "silent drill" by a battalion from Fort Leavenworth, which will go through infantry drill with no direction except music, is also planned.

Information about entries and entry blanks may be obtained from Frank T. Caspers, 527 Marquette building. Every entry must be made through some military or veteran organization.

BOY DISAPPEARS AFTER BEATING; FEARS FOR LIFE?

JOE HOYDTS.

Joe Hodyts, 15, has been missing since March 28 from his home at 1958 West Emerson avenue. Joe had been working and going to night school. "He never kept bad company," said Vincent Krantz, a neighbor at 2118 Emerson. "I don't know why he left, unless he was scared; there was a man living in the same house who beat Joe one day, and the neighbors heard him say he'd kill Joe if he caught him again. His mother is sick with worrying over him."

PRAYER PREVENTS FIGHT IN WAR AT VALPARAISO U.

Rebels Seeking to Oust President.

Valparaiso university, divided into two camps as a result of a resolution passed by the students' council several days ago asking for the resignation of Dr. Daniel Russell Hodgdon, the president, is awaiting a crisis. Apparently neither side cares to make the next move, but each is prepared to meet any action by the opposition.

Jack Pierce, a law student is president of the council. Dr. Hodgdon, it appears, was retained by the university about a year ago in an effort to put it back on its feet, and some of his innovations displeased some of the older students.

"The action of the council was prompted by the reports that a large number of students had signified their intentions of leaving the university unless there was a change in the administration," Pierce said. "The resolution was to have been presented to the board of trustees, but it became known before this could be done, and the president's cabinet dissolved the council."

Prayer Averts Clash.

The trouble came to a head last Tuesday, when a body of students who are supporting the president and his administration surrounded one of the "agitators" who was making a speech and for a moment a fight seemed imminent. Dean of Men W. O. Winkler, however, called the students to attention, and prayed for five minutes. After that the students dispersed.

Later, however, several members of the football team who are backing the president caught George Stimpson, a law student and an "agitator," and he was roughly handled.

Dr. Hodgdon is in New York in the interests of the school's endowment fund. Members of the faculty characterized the uprising as a "tempest in a teapot."

"Subscriptions have not been coming in as rapidly as it was expected, and there has been a feeling of unrest," one of them said. "When some of the innovations of Dr. Hodgdon did not meet with the approval of some of the students, they went beyond their authority in asking for his removal, and as a result the council was dissolved and several of the students dismissed, and others may go. The great majority of the faculty and the student body are behind the president, and the uprising will soon die down."

Rivals Ready for Action.

But preparations being made by numerous organizations indicate it hasn't died down entirely. Rumors of retaliation by the agitators for the attack on Stimpson were current yesterday, and preparedness seemed to be the watchword in the "frat" houses and student halls. No one seemed willing to start anything, but all were prepared to protect their members if anything happened.

Lined up behind Pierce, who is a former soldier, are more than 100 federal board men. It is said a threat by these men to walk out with him saved him from expulsion.

WORLD LABOR TO MEET.

GENEVA, April 9.—A meeting of the labor branch of the league of nations will be held here Tuesday. Among other questions is the relations between the international labor organization and countries under the administration of mandates. The commission considering the question of world unemployment will report.

Chicago Nash Company Shows Increase of 30% in First Three Months of This Year

This increase of 30% in actual deliveries of the Nash Six in January, February and March of this year is a real achievement, as the corresponding months of last year were three of the biggest months in the history of the Chicago Nash Company.

This sales record is interesting to business men who are watching the signs of business improvement, and to motor car buyers as a further indication of Nash Six leadership.

It is evident that the really exceptional worth of the Nash Six is now a matter of general knowledge.

Motor car buyers who scrutinize values today find the Nash Six more beautiful, more powerful and more comfortable than any other car near it in price.

To approximate the qualities of the Nash Six, they must look to cars costing hundreds of dollars more.

That is the explanation of Nash Six sales.

NASH SIX PRICES

NO-PARTY PLAN TO NAME JUDGES READY THIS WEEK

Leaders Deny City Hall Report of "Blowup."

BY PARKE BROWN.

Amos C. Miller, chairman of the Chicago Bar association committee that is trying to bring a nonpartisan ticket into the field for the Circuit court election on June 6, said yesterday that the completed plan probably will be ready for announcement this week.

"Our next meeting with representatives of the Brundage-Deneen Republicans and the Democratic county committee will be held about the middle of the week," he said, "and I hope that we shall have a definite announcement of success at that time.

"The most hopeful sign I have seen—an indication of the importance of the effort is the attack being made upon it from hostile forces trying to create the impression that the plan has failed, or is about to fail."

Egan Denies Story.

A newspaper story from city hall sources that the plan had "blown up" and that the Democrats would nominate their own ticket brought a denial from Dennis J. Egan, one of the Democratic conferees.

"There's absolutely nothing to that," he said. "The county committee met and authorized us to proceed in co-operation with the Bar association and we are continuing to do that. We expect to see a nonpartisan ticket in the race that will contain the names of almost all the sitting judges."

"The Bar association plan has not 'blown up.' We all realized that we faced a complicated problem when we began but we've already progressed enough so that we think success is in sight."

Prefer Coalition Ticket.

It was pointed out that even if the Bar association plan were to fail the Democratic leaders hope to include in their own slate some of the strongest sitting Republican judges. But they realize that if it comes to a plain contest between the Thompson ticket and a Democratic ticket the latter would be much weaker than a coalition ticket backed by the Btr association. There are two reasons for this.

First, sitting Republican judges, given their choice between the Thompson ticket and the Democratic ticket, would choose the Republican column, although they might be more than willing to run on a nonpartisan ticket backed by the Bar association. There if printed in the Democratic column.

Second, if the nonpartisan plan were dropped the Bar association probably would hold its usual primary, with the result that its indorsement would go to some sitting Republican judges who chose to run on the Thompson ticket. In other words, the chance of concentrating the lawyers of Cook county, civic organizations, and most of the press against the anti-Thompson ticket would be lost.

BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunate.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

A plea to the women of Chicago to aid their hungry and homeless sisters of Ireland was made yesterday by Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy in summoning her committee of 100 society women to assist the local organization of the American committee for relief in Ireland. A total of $500,000 is sought by the American committee in Illinois in connection with its $10,240,000 national campaign to finance its relief program in Ireland.

MRS. EDWARD I. CUDAHY.
[Eugene Hutchinson Photo.]

"Ireland's plight is of singular appeal to the women of Chicago because of the vast number of innocent women and children who have suffered the usual fate of the innocent bystander and in consequence today are not only homeless but many the in need of food," Mrs. Cudahy declared.

"The American committee for relief in Ireland is a nonpolitical and nonreligious organization, operating at a maximum of efficiency and for one purpose only—relief for whoever needs it in every section of the stricken island.

"Such a relief program every American can indorse, as have President Harding, Herbert Hoover, Vice President Coolidge, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Charles G. Dawes, Samuel Gompers, and a score of other prominent citizens. We should all give to the utmost of our means to save from starvation a people of the same tongue as ours."

RAILWAY CLERKS' DELEGATES SPURN NEW WAGE OFFER

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 9.—Representatives of three organizations of railway clerks and station workers, speaking for members employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, late today rejected the 12 to 20 per cent wage reduction, proposed by the managers' committee.

Delegates for the New York and Chicago ticket selling forces also rejected the reduction.

The company's proposals were accepted on behalf of 463 freight accounting clerks at Philadelphia, while representatives for the mutual association of workers announced that a counter proposition would be submitted.

FEARS "SPOILS" SYSTEM PERILS STATE POSITIONS

Civil Service Reform Chief Points to Raid Signs.

R. E. Blackwood, secretary of the Civil Service Reform association, charged yesterday that persistent efforts are being made to expand the spoils system in the state government under the Small administration.

Reviewing the situation, he asserted that widespread efforts are being made to eliminate a large number of positions from the scope of the merit law, that there are well defined reports that an arch opponent of the merit system will be appointed president of the state civil service commission, and that the Lundin card index system of listing all employés and jobs is being put into practice at Springfield.

Seek Jobholders' Sponsors.

He said that questionnaires are now being sent out to all employés requiring each of them to state the name of his sponsor when he was appointed, a step that has been customary when a plan is on foot to oust all jobholders not backed by politicians who are "right" with the organization.

The prospective head of the state civil service board, Mr. Blackwood said, is A. T. Spivey, editor of the East St. Louis Journal.

"In August, 1918," he continued, "Mr. Spivey printed a double-column editorial headed 'Repeal the State Civil Service Law.' What sort of a merit administration may be expected if a man who believes the law should be repealed is appointed administrator of that law? Mr. Spivey said 'It has been conclusively demonstrated in numerous instances that better results are produced where the offices and positions are occupied by men of the party in power.'"

Cites Some Pending Bills.

Among pending bills, Mr. Blackwood cites the following:

"House Bill 54—Eliminates from the park civil service law the provisions that the superintendent of employment shall devote all his time to his duties.

"House Bill 288—Creates an independent civil service commision for the Chicago board of education.

"House Bill 345—Removes road employés—between 500 and 2,200 in number—from the clasified civil service.

Mr. Blackwood charged also that a state bureau wrote the words "without reference to the civil service law," into a bill submitted to it by a civic organization.

CHICAGO VOTED FOR 14 MEN FOR MAYOR LAST WEEK

Taking their cue from the city hall organization's "legal precaution" of writing in "For Mayor—William Hale Thompson" on the ballot last Tuesday, friends of thirteen other men whom they thought mayoralty timber recorded themselves in an election that didn't occur.

Canvass of the returns yesterday showed the following votes for mayor, in addition to 14,756 cast for Mr. Thompson: Abe Saitzki, 44; Robert M. Sweitzer, 36; Dennis J. Egan, 10; John Johnson, 9; F. J. Carey, 9; Frank C. Haeger, 3; Joseph F. Haas, 2; and Carter H. Harrison, Fred Berger, Henry Stuckart, Edward R. Litsinger, and Sam Kenney, one vote each.

Mayor Thompson refused to affirm or deny yesterday that he has decided to be a candidate for reëlection in the spring of 1923.

UNION LEAGUE'S ARMY HOSPITAL BOARD SELECTED

Plans of the public affairs committee of the Union League club to improve the condition of disabled service men crystallized at a noon meeting yesterday. A delegation was named to wait upon the congressional appropriations committee in connection with a petition for $500,000 to beautify the present desolate surroundings of Speedway hospital.

Charles Ware will head a committee scheduled to leave for Washington Tuesday. Other members are Frederick Upham and Capt. Myron E. Adams.

It was also announced that George Woodruff of Joliet, president of the Illinois chamber of commerce, would confer with Gov. Small tomorrow regarding a proposed bill providing $2,000,000 to build a state hospital exclusively for the treatment of veterans suffering from mental disorders.

2 ROBBERS GET $1,150 PAY ROLL; HOLDUP MEN BUSY

Outlaws Outwit Vigilance of Police Squads.

Payroll bandits resumed their usual Saturday noon activities yesterday making two comparatively small hauls in spite of precautions taken by the police against them.

Just a few minutes before the flivver squads and motorcycle policemen mobilized by Chief Fitzmorris began their patrols, two armed men got away with one $1,150 job. Eleven men were lined up against the wall in the offices of the Joseph H. Kirk Barrel company at 725 West Thirty-first street by the two.

Harry Kirk, treasurer of the company, was forced to open the safe. The $1,150 in it was taken by the robbers, who escaped in a blue sport model roadster.

Fuel Company Robbed.

Two robbers, only one of them armed, entered the branch office of the Agni Motor Fuel company at 701 West Harrison street and threatening William Ahrendt of 44 North Parkside avenue, a clerk, forced him to turn over receipts of $75. They escaped in an auto.

Miss Esther Shier of 1530 South Clifton Park avenue dropped her purse to the sidewalk when she encountered a highwayman in front of her home. The robber took her sealskin coat.

Three Chesterfieldian Robbers.

Three Chesterfieldian bandits told Dr. Emil Roegner of 4348 West Twenty-second street that they had refrained from robbing him until he had escorted a young woman who was with him to her home. The men had left the young woman they forced him to get out of the taxicab, took $96, a followed the physician, who was in a taxicab, in a touring car. When he diamond pin worth $100, and a watch valued at $50.

Three taxicab drivers were robbed. They and their losses were: Benjamin Starr, Yellow taxi driver, robbed of $20 in front of 3352 West Lake street; E. Frietag, robbed of $19 in front of 3562 McLean avenue; Oswald Conrad, Diamond taxi driver, robbed in front of 1722 North Monticello avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Scott of 4911 Lake Park avenue will celebrate today the fifty-fourth anniversary of their marriage, which took place in Burlington, Ia., in 1867. Mr. Scott is one of the six surviving veterans who were present when the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter. He served in the Confederate forces under Gen. Beauregard. Later he served under the Confederate general Longstreet, participating in the battles of Bull Run, Gettysburg, Chickamauga, and Knoxville.

Mrs. Scott's grandfather, David Webb, was a nephew of President John Adams, and a cousin of President John Quincy Adams.

The Scotts have one son, C. G. Scott of Chicago, and four daughters, the Misses Katherine and Ada Louise and Mrs. B. O. Weller of Chicago, and Mrs. G. L. Pratt of Wichita, Kas.

PHYSICIAN IS HIT IN DRIVE AGAINST ALIBI PERJURERS

Says He Attended Boy at Hour of Robbery.

A new campaign to drive "framed" alibi witnesses from the criminal courts was begun yesterday by the state's attorney's office with the announcement that a warrant charging perjury would be issued Monday against a Dr. John E. Zaremba, 747 North Robey street. The physician will be charged with offering a false alibi for John Deuben, a 20 year old bandit, who was placed on trial two weeks ago.

Assistant State's Attorney W. G. McLaughlin declared the physician testified he had paid a professional call on Deuben at the hour the crime with which the boy was charged occurred.

Convicted of Jewel Robbery.

August Benson, 20, Deuben, and Griff and Charles Johnson, 18, were convicted by a jury before Judge McDonald of robbing the jewelry store of Rheinhard Wolf, 2849 Belmont avenue, on Jan. 7. Deuben and Griff presented alibis. Benson and Johnson admitted their guilt. Deuben presented his alibil through his attorney, Patrick Harrington. Dr. Zaremba admitted he was a client of Harrington. Griff's parents testified he was at his home at 417 Beethoven place, and could not have participated in the robbery.

After listening to motions for a new trial yesterday Judge McDonald asked Johnson if Griff and Deuben were with him during the robbery. He said yes. Griff was called and admitted participation in the robbery. Deuben also confessed.

Boys Plead for Families.

"I can understand how parents might try to protect their children," Attorney McLaughlin declared, "but I can't see how a professional man like Dr. Zaremba can come into a court and testify as he did. I want a bench warrant for the physician."

Attorney Harrington asked the judge not to take action immediately. "Wait until Monday," he said. "Dr Zaremba is sick in the hospital."

"He ought to be in jail," responded the judge. "However, I'll wait until Monday to issue the writ."

A telephone call at Dr. Zaremba's office at 2 p. m., disclosed the physician was out on a professional visit.

Not Sick, Attendant Says.

"Is he ill?" the office attendant was asked.

"No," was the answer.

Benson and Deuben were immediately sentenced to Pontiac for from ten years to life. The other two were held over until Judge McDonald could confer with Special Prosecutor Stephen A. Malato.

GANGSTERS ACT TO SAVE NECK OF CARDINELLA

Indications that prison walls have not weakened the loyalty of members of the Cardinella gang to their leader, Sam Cardinella, were seen yesterday when Leonard Crappo and Tony Sansonne, serving life sentences at Joliet, signed affidavits exonerating Cardinella from participation in any of the band's crimes.

These affidavits were part of a last minute endeavor to save Cardinella from the gallows. He is sentenced to be hanged next Friday morning at 9 o'clock. An attempt will be made to bring the affidavits before the state board of pardons next Tuesday when it meets to deliberate on Cardinella's plea for executive clemency.

Both State's Attorney Crowe and Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission, declared last night they would fight Cardinella's plea.

"It would be a miscarriage of justice for this man to go free," declared Mr. Chamberlin. "Even though his hand may never have held the revolver that killed any of his gang's victims, the evidence showed he had a part in the murders."

It was largely through the testimony of Crappo that Cardinello was convicted of the murder of Andrew Bowman, a restaurant man. Crappo in his affidavit now repudiates his confession and declares he "perjured himself."

The statements were obtained in the prison by Attorney William S. McNamara.

"From the time I entered the penitentiary I never have enjoyed one night's sleep," Crappo states. "I want a chance to right the great wrong that has been done an innocent man.

"After I entered a plea of guilty I was told by Prosecutor Raber if I weakened in my story he would recommend that I be sent to the gallows."

Officers of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, arriving here yesterday to perfect plans for the national convention at Medinah temple, April 18 and 19, announced there would be more than 5,000 delegates present.

They declare these delegates represent more than half a million citizens of the United States. The association was launched by Eamonn De Valera before he left the United States for Ireland last November.

Edward L. Dohney, millionaire oil operator of Los Angeles and New York, the president of the association, will open the convention. John W. Goff of New York, former justice of the Supreme court, will be permanent chairman. Mayor Thompson will attend the opening session and deliver an address.

Among those billed to speak are Frank P. Walsh, Harry Boland, principal representative of the Irish republic; Miss Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late lord mayor of Cork, and Lord Mayor Donal O'Callaghan of Cork, MacSwiney's successor.

Think of it! A whole, tender, sweet baby lobster, hot or cold, with Chili Sauce or melted butter for

65 Cents

See How Common Sense Has Cut Food Prices

Which would you rather do? Serve yourself at the North American with a tender, sweet, baby lobster and pay only 65 cents for it or go elsewhere, have the lobster brought to you, and pay from $1.25 to $2.50?

No matter how much you pay (or where) you can't get a better lobster than the whole one we serve with Chili Sauce or melted butter for 65 cents. The North American has been known as the "Home of the Baby Lobster" for years. It still is. We buy and sell more lobsters than any two hotels or restaurants in Chicago combined. So you know we must get the best lobsters in the market.

But we have eliminated expensive and useless "service" and you pay only for the food you eat. That's why the price is so low.

Our Common Sense plan of asking you to serve yourself has reduced the price of all of our food. No matter what you want to eat, nor when you want to eat, you can select just what you wish from the splendid assortment on our serving tables. Every portion is a liberal one and every price is far below what other first-class places charge for food never better.

Some of our staunchest patrons are men and women who never before served themselves in a restaurant. They do not dine here merely to save money. They are glad to make the saving, which is a big one, but they tell us they like the plan of serving themselves with the food they wish, rather than ordering from a printed bill of fare.

And they are particularly pleased because there are no waiters standing around to be tipped.

Liberal Portions of Tempting Salads
Common Sense Prices

Each salad portion is almost a meal in itself — usually ample for serving two. Nothing but the finest fresh fish, vegetables, shell fish and chicken are used and our specially refrigerated salad table keeps the salads at just the right temperature. The prices include French, Mayonnaise or our famous Thousand Island Dressing.

Maybe You Don't Know

You've heard the expression—"What he doesn't know won't hurt him any."

It isn't always true; sometimes not knowing is quite expensive.

Maybe you don't know that there is, at the corner of Halsted and 14th streets, a store worth knowing; a place where you get the quality of merchandise you want, at economy prices.

Low prices do not always mean economy; sometimes merchandise is cheaper than the price. In this store quality comes first; then price. You'll be surprised to find how low the prices are.

This store is out of the beaten path for many Chicago people; but there are plenty of automobiles these days; the street cars pass its door. It's a store that offers real advantages to those who visit it.

Everything here is bought for cash, which often means a great advantage in buying; we give our customers all the advantage we get.

We have many charge customers; we deliver goods anywhere in the city. Better come and see what we're doing; it may be the most profitable experience you ever had.

PRAIRIE DIVISION REFIGHTS WAR AT SPRINGFIELD

Gov. Small Unable to Be Present at Reunion.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., April 9.—[Special.]—The old 33d division—the Illinois national guard unit that was landing in France three years ago today, and, having finished its part of the job, was homeward bound a year later—held its first reunion in Springfield today.

Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., its commander during its service, and until the men were discharged in 1919, was the guest of honor.

Nearly 1,000 men, coming from every section of the state and representative of each of the two brigades of infantry, the division headquarters troop of cavalry, the brigade of artillery, the machine gun battalions, the ammunition supply and sanitary trains, field hospitals, etc., attended the banquet at the Leland hotel tonight.

Dickson Takes Small's Place.

Gov. Small, who had accepted an invitation to welcome Gen. Bell and his veterans, was called to Kankakee suddenly this morning. His place was taken by Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson. One of the net results of the day was the decision to organize permanently the Thirty-third Division association, whose purpose will be to bring into one organization every man who served with the national guard division during the war.

The organization is to be made by communities, somewhat on the plan of the American Legion, but is intended to work hand in hand with Legion posts in all matters affecting the care of the world war veterans. The state commander of the Legion William R. McCauley was an especially invited guest tonight at the banquet.

Two hundred Chicagoans Go.

Gen. Bell was escorted to Springfield by a delegation of 200 Chicago men, former officers and enlisted men of the city units, that were called into service to form the division. In the party were Milton J. Foreman, late colonel of the 122d field artillery, now major general of the Illinois National Guard; John V. Clinnin, late colonel of the 130th infantry; Horatio B. Hackett, former colonel of the 124th field artillery, and B. M. Chiperfield, former colonel and judge advocate of the Thirty-third division.

"Joe" Sanborn There.

"Joe" Sanborn—they all called him "Joe" today, now that he is out of uniform and is a citizen on foot—headed a strong delegation from the 131st infantry, the old 1st. Abel Davis, who commanded the old 2d, which was the 132d in France, had to be in Washington, but many of his men were present. Walter J. Fisher, who commanded the old 7th infantry, then the 108th ammunition train, had a substantial representation with him. C. D. Center of Quincy represented the 108th supply and sanitary trains.

All lines as between officers and men were eliminated at this reunion. General Bell in his speech at the banquet talked about "behind the scenes," which had to do with details of the Argonne-Meuse offensive that had not been made public up to the time of his speech.

A special detail from the war department exhibited many reels of government signal service film, most of it being action photography of the 33d division.

WAR RISK HEAD TO DIRECT ALL SOLDIER RELIEF

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Secretary Mellon announced today the reappointment of Col. R. G. Cholmeley-Jones of New York as director of the bureau of war risk insurance. He reëntered on the duties of his office at once.

He was returned to the department at the request of the secretary to assist in carrying out the recommendations of the special committee appointed by the president, of which Charles G. Dawes of Chicago was chairman.

The committee advised that the task of providing medical and surgical treatment for disabled war veterans to be taken over at once by the bureau of war risk insurance, under the present law, pending action by congress on the other recommendations of the committee, which include the merging of all government departments dealing with soldier relief into one to be known as the veteran service administration.

"AVAST, BELAY, AND HURRAH FOR BAFFIN'S BAY"

Yankee Will Follow Voyager of 1616.

East Boothbay, Me., April 9.—The schooner Bowdoin, built to carry Donald B. MacMillan, explorer, on his next Arctic voyage, to start in July, was launched at noon today from the shipyard of Hodgdon Brothers here.

MacMillan was the chief lieutenant of Peary in his successful expedition to the north pole. The ship's hull is egg shaped, with nothing to which ice can cling.

Will Trick Ice Floes.

Under sufficient pressure from the ice floes, the Bowdoin instead of being crushed, should lift out of water and be carried along with the pack, and as safely slip back when the pressure is relieved.

So confident is MacMillan of the schooner's ability to cope with the frozen channels of the far north that he plans to pass through the dangerous Fury and Hecla strait on the west side of Baffin bay, where former expeditions have been lost or turned back.

Reccals Voyage in 1616.

The Bowdoin is of about the size of the Discovery, William Baffin's ship which in 1616 was the first to reach Baffin land, which still is said to have 1,000 miles of unexplored coast.

The Bowdoin has a forty-five horsepower internal combustion oil burning engine, in which it is believed the use of whale oil will give greatly increased cruising radius.

The party will consist besides Dr. MacMillan of an engineer, three scientists and a cook.

Boys of Woodcraft Get Seed, Still Seek Land

Two weeks ago the Boys of Woodcraft, an organization which affords boys a free vacation on its farm, where they raise vegetables, and gives all its products to the poor of Chicago, appealed to THE TRIBUNE for help in getting seed and for twenty-five acres of cleared land to work this summer. The American Seed company has agreed to furnish all the seed needed. Many answers came to offer land, but all of it was uncleared. The boys cannot afford to pay to have the land cleared, and cannot do it themselves.

Swett. Most of the estate was bequeathed to educational institutions, but before the legacies can be paid it is necessary for the administrators to show there are no legal heirs.

If you have much figuring to do in your business, you are undoubtedly acquainted with the Burroughs Adding Machines and you probably know something about Burroughs Bookkeeping Machines.

But do you know that there is another type of Burroughs figuring machine especially designed for extremely rapid figuring, where a printed list of items is not necessary—for that big figure job in every business where all that is wanted is the answer?

With a Burroughs Calculator any clerk can work out figure problems faster than the best trained specialist can do them by mental calculation. For example, to figure that well-known discount—less 80-30-15-2 involves eight separate mathemetical problems which have to be solved whether you put down the figures on paper or carry them in your head. With the Burroughs Calculator it is only necessary to know the decimal equivalent of the discount to be taken, and by a simple mechanical operation the answer appears on the dials of the machine.

The Burroughs Calculator

This handy little machine—easy to learn, easy to operate, goes straight to the answer; extending and checking invoices and freight bills; gathering cost, selling price or profit totals; totaling weights and quantities; proving ledger postings and trial balances; extending and adding inventory figures; and analyzing production records.

Ask a Burroughs man to show you the Calculator. It will give you a new conception of the speed and accuracy with which all sorts of routine figuring can be done.

The A B C of Business

Adding, Bookkeeping and Calculating represent the three great groups of figuring operations that constitute the A B C of business. To handle these operations the Burroughs Adding Machine Company manufacture three types of machines in a wide variety of styles and sizes, among which may be found a machine that will fit the needs of any business, large or small.

JACK-GEORGES TO BATTLE IN JERSEY

THREE CITIES IN LINE FOR FISTIC GLORY, SAYS TEX

Jersey City, Atlantic City, or Newark to Be Site.

New York, April 9.—With the long awaited official announcement today that the Dempsey-Carpentier heavyweight championship bout would be fought in the state of New Jersey on the afternoon of July 2, interest among local ring followers turned to the probable place of the contest and the training plans of the principals. Efforts to obtain a definite statement from Promoter Tex Rickard as to the site of the contest were unsuccessful.

He refused to commit himself as to Newark, Atlantic City, or Jersey City, the three sites mentioned in his announcement.

He said he had received favorable offers from all three cities and would personally inspect the locations suggested before he would be in a position to make a final decision. It is expected he will devote the coming week to an examination of the plots offered and announce his selection within the next ten days.

Jersey City Generally Picked.

While there has been nothing official upon which to base the report, it appears to be the general opinion among those who have followed the negotiations that Jersey City will be the ultimate choice, all conditions and advantages being equal. This is based upon Rickard's repeated assertions that he desired to stage the bout in or as near New York City as possible, owing to the large population from which to draw his patronage.

Between Newark and Jersey City there is little choice in either time or travel conditions, but the distance to Atlantic City and the fact that accommodations may be hard to get over the Fourth of July holidays may militate against the seashore resort.

It was this desire to locate the bout close to a large center of population which caused the ultimate turning down of several excellent offers from points in Canada, Maryland, and western states.

No Decision Permitted.

The decision to hold the contest in New Jersey, however, develops several interesting points which are already causing discussion among boxing authorities. Under the New Jersey boxing laws no decision can be given at the termination of the bout.

Consequently the only way in which Carpentier could win the world's title would be to knock out Dempsey inside the stipulated twelve rounds permitted under the state code or for the champion to lose his title by a foul. No matter how much Carpentier might batter Dempsey around during the entire twelve rounds, if the latter were on his feet at the close of the thirty-six minutes of actual boxing he would still be champion from a technical ring standpoint.

As the New Jersey legislature has adjourned and cannot be reconvened except upon call by the state executive, no changes in the regulations are likely.

Tex Expects Record Crowd.

While Rickard refused to make any comparison of the fighting ability of the two pugilists, he said he did not think the inability to render an official decision, as would have been the case had the bout been held in New York state, would have the slightest effect on the attendance. He confidently predicted the attendance would be the largest that ever witnessed a championship ring battle.

Applications for seats have been accumulating for some weeks without regard to the possible site for the ring, which Rickard attributes to the extraordinary interest aroused in the first real international heavyweight bout in several decades.

HAS GOVERNOR'S APPROVAL.

Jersey City, N. J., April 9.—[United Press.]—"As long as the bout is conducted in an orderly manner, according to the boxing law, it will be a good thing for New Jersey. It has my approval," Gov. Edward L. Edwards told the United Press today when notified that Rickard had selected New Jersey grounds for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

The 440 yard race, one of the surprises of the day, was won by "Oxy" Hendrixon, California, with his teammate, McDonald, second. Capt. Butler of Michigan, considered one of the best quarter milers of the country, placed third. Summaries:

In the Wake of the News

RACING ENDS IN CHICAGO.

AFTER the closing of Washington Park race track following the Derby of 1904 because the police department suppressed betting there was a readjustment of dates between Harlem, Hawthorne, and Worth, and the slack was taken up.

These tracks were not within the city. They were able to race because village boards in the towns wherein they were located were friendly and because the state's attorney did not press to trial the cases against layers of odds who were arrested from time to time for bookmaking.

As you know, there is no law against racing. Bookmaking is without the pale. I do not recall the exact verbiage, but, stripped of technicalities, the third conviction for booking carries the possibility of a prison sentence. That was what stopped racing in Chicago.

BOOK MAKING

Until the season of 1905 it had been customary to raid the ring two or three times a season and nab from thirty to fifty bookmakers. When the cases were called attorneys for the bookies would enter a plea of nolle contendere, with the stipulation it should not count as a conviction. The bookies would be fined $100 each and the track would pay the fines, half of which went to the state's attorney as the office was conducted in those days.

The blowoff came when State's Attorney Healy informed the tracks he would no longer accept the nolle contendere plea without counting it as a conviction. This decision was supposed to be a preëlection pledge to a Chicago newspaper publisher. Anyway, it spilled the beans. No bookie fancied a prison cell and the state's attorney evidently meant business. The tracks did not open for the season of 1905.

What's the Matter with Chicago.

The Wake cannot understand why racing and boxing, allowed in New York and many other large cities, are immoral in Chicago. Even allowing for civic pride, we are not so much more virtuous in other respects.

The Wake favors a boxing bill with necessary restrictions, allowing fifteen round bouts to a decision.

We favor a racing bill allowing pari-mutuel machines with the "take" limited in per cent, for a period of thirty to sixty days in every county. The commission should refuse licenses to associations seeking to locate in other counties near big cities with patronage from those cities as the only excuse for their existence.

Super morality frets us.

HARRY HORAN.

Showing endurance and a remarkable power to corral points when needed, the veteran bicycle racing team of Jake Magin and Eddie Madden, Newark, N. J., carried off first honors in the six day grind which finished at 11:03 last night at Dexter Park pavilion. The Newark team, one of the smoothest working and hardest riding combinations ever seen in Chicago, rode several of the other teams clear out of the field in the final day's grind, when the tension of the bitter race broke up several teams and forced the withdrawal of others.

The pair which proved local favorites among the crowd which jammed the pavilion and at times rocked the windows with applause, was Ernest Kockler, Chicago, and Fred Hill, Boston. By sterling work this team seized second honors in the final hour of sprints.

Sensational and at times rough riding of the final day caused the withdrawal of two teams which had stood as original favorites. These were the Australian pair, Corry and McBeath, who led for four days of the race, and the popular Belgian combination, Alois De Graeves and Pierre Reliens. The Belgians were forced out in the fourteenth sprint of the final hour, when De Graeves fell, and after being carried to his booth, fainted.

The strenuous pace took toll of the Horan-Fitzsimmons team, when Harry Horan of Newark, who had been hurt in a spill Friday night, was removed to a hospital with a groin injury.

HOW TEAMS OF MAJOR CIRCUITS SIZE UP IN CHASE FOR PENNANTS AND THEN—WORLD SERIES GLORY

Teams Picked to Land in First Flight in the National.

OPENING GAMES

NATIONAL LEAGUE.
St. Louis at Chicago.
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.
Brooklyn at Boston.
New York at Philadelphia.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Without pretending to fix their order of finish more definitely, the four National league teams which look to have the best chances to cop first division honors this year are Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York, and Brooklyn. In fact, you can almost write your own ticket that three of those teams will land in "upper four."

Of the remaining quartet St. Louis may displace one of those clubs from the first division, but Cincinnati, Boston, and Philadelphia appear to be booked for the lower four, all the way.

There never has been a baseball winter in which more switches have been made than the one that ends with the opening of the major league championship races next Wednesday. This applies to managers as well as players and the swapping of talent has been important as well as copious. There never has been a spring in which the holdout corps has played a more conspicuous part in the outlook.

Weak Spots on All Teams.

In spite of all the trading and recruiting there is not a team in the veteran league which has not an actual or a theoretical weak spot. And the old adage always has proven true that no chain is stronger than its weakest link. It is equally true that no major league team can be stronger than its weakest spot, for the opposition invariably discovers that vulnerable place and directs its attack against it.

There isn't an aggregation in the National—or in the American league either—that stacks up in the preliminary statistics like the old Cub machine of the first decade of this century; nor anything like the pennant monopolizing team that Connie Mack put together more than ten years ago; nor yet like the White Sox aggregation which was wrecked by the gamblers in 1919. It looks now like a merry scramble from the start, with the chances favoring the manager who has the best luck in the draw—meaning the development of recruits for the soft spots.

Cellar Berth for Phils.

Reversing the usual procedure, for novelty's sake, and beginning at the bottom, the Phillies seem to have small chance of climbing out of the cellar unless they can beat out the Braves. The loss of Paulette will weaken Manager Donovan's infield, as it came too late to enable him to dig up a successor of equal merit. Third base looks to be another weak spot in the Phillies' defense, while it is doubtful if the swap of Rixey for Ring improved the slab staff. Moreover, the policy of the Philadelphia club in shaving everything down to the water level in the matter of expense has not contributed to the morale of the team.

Boston's Braves have been all shot to pieces by retirements, trades, and holdouts. The loss of Maranville from the infield makes that department a prospectively weak spot defensively. There is not a first division performer in any position on the infield, and only in the outfield do the Braves took to be well equipped, unless Hank Gowdy can continue, in spite of advancing years, to do most of the catching. The slab staff is only fair.

Stock Would Help Cards.

If Branch Rickey induces Stock to return to the game the Cardinals will have a good chance to break out of the second division, because he has apparently added strength to his pitching corps, which was his tender spot last season. The Cards led the league in swatting, but was not sufficiently strong defensively to profit by that offensive power. Without Stock the infield will be weak at second if Hornsby is shifted to third, as looks probable. Jack Smith, another holdout, will weaken the outfield if he sticks to his determination to retire.

Chicago's Cubs, who finished fifth last year, look to be the most improved team, largely because of their change of managers. With a lot of latent strength last season the Cubs lacked

LOCAL CHIEFS OPTIMISTIC

BY JOHN EVERS.
[Manager of the Cubs.]

PENNANTS are not won before the season opens, so I am not going to make any rash predictions for the Cubs. However, I do believe I will pilot a good team, one far better than represented Chicago last season. During the spring training games the team has shown a remarkable spirit and that spirit alone will win us a few games during the course of the race. Right now I am satisfied with the team, but of course there is a possibility of my being forced to make some slight changes after some of the new men show themselves under big league fire.

Our pitching will be a potent factor at all times. That is the thing that counts, be your ball team good or bad. I think the team is capable in a fielding way. The hitting strength is problematical. If the fellows keep clouting the ball as they have during the training trip I have an idea we will be there or thereabouts at the finish.

BY WILLIAM GLEASON.
[Manager of the Sox.]

WHEN I think of the many stars lost as a result of the baseball scandal I can hardly talk about winning a pennant. On the eve of the race I figure myself lucky to have picked up a number of really good ball players. True, the Sox will not be a shadow of the great team of '17, '18, '19 and '20 but we will be fairly strong and not eating the dust of the other contenders in the race. We will give the other fellows a battle from gong to gong and at the windup you will not see the Sox at the tail end. Of that I feel certain.

The team will be fairly well balanced with the exception of pitching. In that line we will have to depend more or less on the young hurlers. Some of the new pitchers have a lot of ability but need experience. Before the end of the season they will be fairly effective. Don't be surprised if one of these young pitchers proves the sensation of the year.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

To what extent do you find Chicago fans interested in semi-pro baseball?

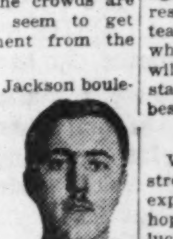
Where Asked.

Insurance Exchange building.

The Answers.

E. S. Goulding, Berwyn, Ill., optician.—I have always been interested in semi-pro baseball, as it is our true national game. In most cases it is more interesting than professional ball. As a general rule the fan knows the players personally and it is a good deal like high school and college games in this respect.

Anna Hoffert, 1539 North Wells street, bookkeeper — I am not a dyed-in-the-wool fan, but I like to see baseball games once in a while. When I go to see a game I would lots rather see the semi-pro teams play. The crowds are more "homelike," and seem to get more thorough enjoyment from the game.



A. L. Myers, 179 West Jackson boulevard, clerk.—I believe most of the medium class are very much interested in semi-pro baseball. The semi-pros are the ones who later become the big leaguers. The public is always interested in knowing ambitious young men when they are starting out to win their way to the top.

Marion Regnas, 5921 West Ohio street, stenographer.—I am in favor of semi-pro baseball myself. I think that the general public takes a big interest in the semi-pro games. As a rule I think these players take a vaster interest in the game than the professionals. They do not play so much, and then money isn't the big thing with them. They play for the sport.

T. P. Hegler, 6509 Blackstone avenue, ticket seller.—I am interested in semi-pro baseball, as it is usually more interesting than professional ball. The players seem to me to have more pep than the professionals.

Cleveland and New York Appear to Be 1—2 in American.

OPENING GAMES

AMERICAN LEAGUE.
Chicago at Detroit.
Cleveland at St. Louis.
Philadelphia at New York.
Boston at Washington.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

INDIANS NO1

Facing a season that promises nothing startling in the way of results, eight American league teams will set out on the pennant trail Wednesday afternoon. Of the eight contenders four appear to have no pennant chances, two are almost cinch bets for the one-two positions, while the other two are bare possibilities for world's series glory.

It is only logical to select the world's champion Cleveland Indians for the league's pacemaking rôle next October. If the Indians were the best of the circuit last season they will be better in this start. On paper Speaker's team is every bit as good as when the end of the trail was reached last fall. Actually it will be a more powerful and aggressive aggregation because of confidence gained in its 1920 achievement and the opposition will be no stronger.

Yanks Only Rivals of Indians.

The only team now looming up as a possible rival of the Speaker tribe is New York. With tremendous offensive strength, the Yankees are liable to do almost anything. Their one weakness in this department is base running. Speed is lacking, as was the case in 1920. The sole improvement is the acquisition of Bobby Roth, a fine base runner, but one man cannot speed up an entire ball team. In fielding the Yanks will be no better than last season.

The possibilities in this race are the St. Louis Browns and the Boston Red Sox. There is a lot of ability scattered through the ranks of Lee Fohl's Brownies, but there still is the chance that they will play scatterbrain baseball. That has been their chief defect in recent seasons.

Browns May Cause Trouble.

Whether or not Fohl can induce his men to employ smart baseball and team play is something that can only be guessed at. The strength is there and if spent in the right direction the Browns will cause a lot of woe in their travels. The worst one can predict for them is they can hardly avoid doing better than last season.

On paper Boston is a stronger team than the Browns, but disorganized, just as it has been for several years. The reluctance with which Stuffy McInnis agreed to terms had a demoralizing effect on the other players. The same goes for Derrill Pratt's case. In addition, the absence of these left Manager Hugh Duffy up in the air. As a result he will have to make over his team after the season opens, and meanwhile valuable time and many games will be lost. Once the Red Sox get started they may do things, but at best they are only a long shot.

Hopeless Chase for Sox.

With the White Sox shorn of their strength as a result of the 1919 series exposure, Chicago fans need have no hopes. Gleason will have to enjoy luck to crowd into the first division. If he winds up next October resting in fifth place he will have done all that could be expected. He will have a fairly good ball club, pitchers excepted. Given four consistent hurlers he might get somewhere, but a pitching staff is not built up overnight.

On the eve of the get-away Gleason has two experienced flingers to count on. They are Faber and Kerr, right and left handed, respectively. Between them, if propertly supported by the made over team, they may win forty games. It probably will require ninety-five games to win a pennant. That means the young and untried members of the staff must accumulate fifty-five victories. It can't be done.

Experimenting Costs Games.

Gleason has a number of excellent prospects for his staff, but will have to experiment in two out of every four games played. Experimenting with hurlers is costly business. Before they round into major league form, if ever, they will lose two games for every one they win. This means Gleason will have tough sledding for the first few months, and when he does get going he will have lost too much ground to catch up with any but the fourth or fifth place teams.

Regardless of how much or how little success the Sox enjoy in the shape of victories, they probably will be baseball's center of interest for at least half the race. For many weeks fans have been wondering how Gleason would rebuild the great machine that was junked by the gamblers' activities. That the Kid already has accomplished quite a bit is a certainty. He will accomplish more as the season progresses and his work will be well worth the watching. One thing is certain—the Sox will fight. Gleason will see to that.

The Washington, Detroit, and Philadelphia clubs hardly come up to the Sox in playing strength. Washington appears to be no stronger than last season. The Athletics probably will play a more refined article of ball than last year and win a few more games, but not enough to put them up in select circles. There is no reason why Detroit should be any stronger. Manager Cobb will teach his men a lot of baseball's pyrotechnics, such as he has displayed for years. He hasn't enough hurling talent to prosper.

Some people may be inclined to believe the loss of Ray Chapman may prove a big handicap for the Indians. As great a player as Chapman was considered, the Indians showed conclusively last season they were a good enough aggregation to absorb the loss without disastrous results. After the immediate shock they sailed along right into a pennant and a world's championship.

Indians to Be Stronger.

If the star shortstop's death did not tear down the Indians at that time, it will not do so now. In fact, they will be stronger at shortstop than in the 1920 series, in view of the improvement in Joe Sewell, the lad who stepped into Chapman's shoes. The youngster, who jumped from a minor league into a world's series, has been going great for Speaker in the spring games.

The only cloud on the Indians' horizon is Wambsganss, the second sacker. Wamby broke a small wrist bone in an exhibition game recently and probably will not be fit to resume play until the season is a week or two old. Then it will take him time to regain his normal stride. Meanwhile a less capable man will have to sit in, but Wamby's absence may be offset by some unusually steady pitching that will keep the team on even keel.

Speaker's Hurlers O. K.

Last fall when the Indians were painting up for their world series debut there was more or less concern over the strength of the pitching staff. At the end of the series the staff had acquitted itself admirably. For the coming race Speaker will have a better corps. In Coveleskie, Caldwell, Bagby, and Mails, the sensational left hander, Tris possesses a quartet he can work in rotation. In addition he has three or four other experienced men able to step in when the occasion warrants.

The Yankees' chances depend entirely on the pitching artists holding down the opposition. The Yanks can hit well enough, but several other teams in the circuit enjoy similar strength. Manager Huggins has a number of good mound men, but some are inclined to be erratic. Jack Quinn, Bob Shawkey, and Carl Mays are fairly consistent, although the latter usually has one bad inning in every game he works. Harry Harper, left hander, has a failing for slipping up in tight places, and Walter Hoyt still is too young in experience to be counted an asset. Outside of these Huggins has nothing to boast of.

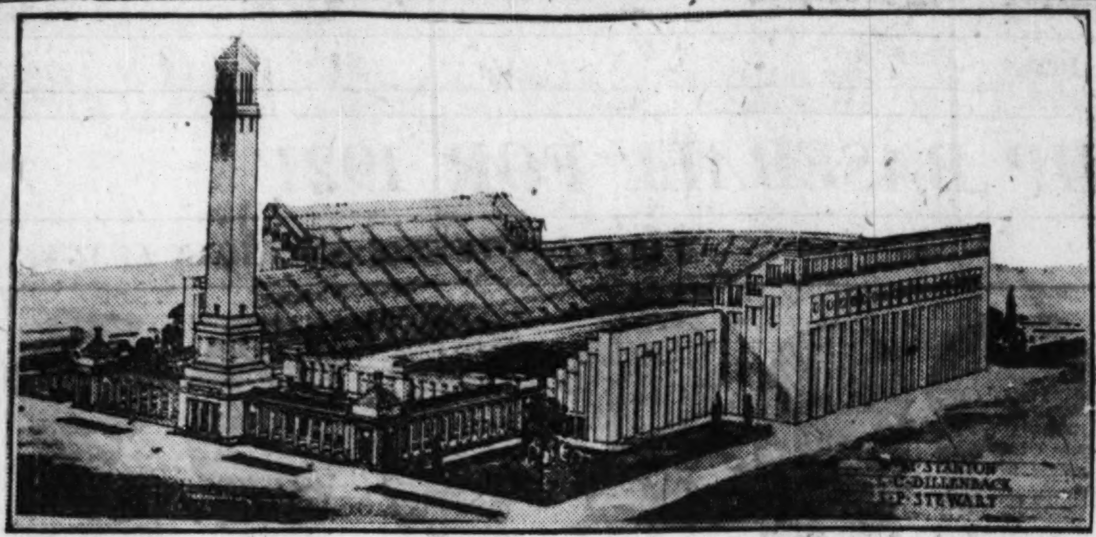
GREAT STADIUM FOR UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS



URBANA, Ill., April 9.—[Special.]—The drive for the $1,500,000 fund for University of Illinois new stadium is on and architects have drawn the plans.

The Illini stadium will be a war memorial, a memorial not only for university veterans but for all the veterans of the state. Of 351,153 men Illinois offered, 4,266 were killed and 13,794 wounded, and the stadium will stand as an enduring memorial.

The memorial will be more than a stadium. It will be the hub of a vast recreational field of 100 acres, where university and recreation activities prosper within the shadows of its inspirational towers.

Three Great Towers.

According to proposals, three great towers will rise from the entrance of the stadium. The central tower, which may be a campanile, will be a memorial to the men of the University of Illinois who lost their lives in service. Within will be a memorial room with the names of these men. There will be a trophy room and a corridor. The central tower will be a majestic, inspirational structure. One subordinate tower will be a memorial to the soldiers and the other to sailors and marines.

A colonnade will lead from the central tower to the court of honor. These columns will be dedicated to the dead and injured.

The court of honor between the central towers and the entrance to the field will be a spacious quadrangle suitable for massmeetings, band concerts, open air lectures and plays, pageants and fêtes.

Huge Field for Sports.

The stadium will be merely the heart of an ample recreational field of 100 acres. An artificial ice skating rink within the shadow of the structure will be a big feature. Forty or fifty basketball courts and baseball diamonds, a hundred or more tennis courts, handball courts, soccer and hockey fields, and a track are some of the provisions.

FOUR INDICTED ON 1919 SERIES SCANDAL CHARGE GIVE BONDS

After three of the indicted White Sox and one of the alleged gamblers mixed up in the baseball scandal of 1919 had appeared in the Criminal court yesterday and furnished new bail bonds, Assistant States Attorney George E. Gorman announced that the roundup of the rest of the indicted parties would begin in earnest the coming week.

Zork Denies All Guilt.

George Weaver, Joe Jackson and Claude Williams were the former White Sox players who gave bonds to the required amount of $7,500 each. Carl Zork of St. Louis presented $8,000 in Liberty bonds as his guarantee of appearance before the court when wanted. He denied all guilt in connection with the 1919 world's series and asked for an immediate trial. He was accompanied by two attorneys—A. M. Frumberg and H. C. Lewinson—who announced that Ben Franklin, indicted as Zork's partner in the alleged gambling scheme, would furnish bonds early next week.

Plain to Extradite Men.

Prosecutor Gorman stated that all leniency toward the indicted men would cease and that extradition proceedings would be instituted at once against all players and others who had not already furnished bonds or who did not indicate their intention to do so voluntarily in the near future. The principals whom the assistant state's attorney is particularly anxious to corral reside in New York, Iowa and Texas.

WINTRY SPASM PREVENTS GAME, SOX VS. BREWERS

Milwaukee, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—Regular old fashioned winter greeted the White Sox upon their arrival here this noon, causing the third straight postponement of training operations. Snow and wintry winds gummed up the program.

Arrangements were completed, however, whereby the athletes were permitted to unlimber their educated muscles in the gymnasium of the Milwaukee Athletic club and the Kid kept his gang husling for two hours.

Manager Jack Eagan of the Brewers suggested that the Sox, who are scheduled here tomorrow, remain over in the Cream city Monday and play, but Lou Comiskey, who is piloting the Hose, turned down this proposition.

After tomorrow's game here the Sox will grab a rattler back to Chicago. They are billed to practice at Comiskey park Monday and depart at noon Tuesday for Detroit to open the season.

Kinney, Ex-Mack Hurler, Signs in Mid-West League

Scotts Bluff, Neb., April 9.—Walter Kinney, who was one of Connie Mack's pitchers last year, has signed with the Scotts Bluff team of the Mid West league, it was announced today. Kinney has been barred from organized baseball for having jumped his contract with the Philadelphia Americans last year.

CUBS' BATTING ORGY DEFEATS K. C., 15 TO 3; ALEX FIT FOR OPENER

Kansas City, Mo., April 9.—[Special.]—The Cubs today continued their batting orgy and compiled another mess of base hits, this time at the expense of Otto Knabe's American association club, which they trounced by the respectable score of 15 to 3.

GROVER ALEXANDER.

In spite of a cold wind, Manager Johnny Evers sent Grover Cleveland Alexander to the mound to start the affair. It was Evers' intention to give him a spell of work preparatory to starting him in the first game of the season at home Wednesday.

Alex showed he is ready. He worked five innings, during which he allowed only one hit, and he struck out a man per inning. The one swat was a home run that Catcher Brock boosted into the bleachers between left and center field. It was a long fly, the same being aided and abetted by the wind.

Having demonstrated his fitness, Alex was allowed to go and Alexander Freeman chucked the remaining portions. The minor leaguers found him for only three hits, but he walked half a dozen men, which is not to his credit.

Harold Leathers, recent shortstop, was released tonight to the local team.

SANBORN PICKS 4 CLUBS TO LAND IN FIRST FLIGHT

the fighting spirit which John Evers is bound to instill into their ranks, and it is promised that "1921 will reward fighters."

Cubs Weak at First Corner.

First base is the theoretical weak spot in the Evers combination. Much depends on the ability of Ray Grimes to do the work formerly assigned to Fred Merkle. Grimes is a twin brother of the Giant Grimes. If he falls down it probably will devolve on Turner Barber to hold down the first base job, and that will weaken the outfield. If Deal can play steadily the rest of the Cub infield will be as strong as last year. The pitching staff will be no weaker, with the addition of several promising youngsters to the veteran trio, Alexander, Vaughn, and Tyler. Behind the bat Evers has the best man in the league in Killefer, who was incapacitated most of last year.

Pittsburgh's acquisition of Maranville makes the Pirates a strong contender for the pennant, provided their veteran slabmen can deliver another good year's work. Short field was Gibson's weakest spot last season, and by plugging it the Pirate leader made third base his most vulnerable position, and that can be filled by Whitted, if Barnhart, a semi-pro find, cannot do it. But Whitted at third would weaken the outfield, which was planned to consist of Carey, Bigbee, and Whitted. The catching corps is just fair.

Second Division for Reds.

The Cincinnati Reds, without Roush or Groh, are pretty sure to finish in the second division. Moran has nothing like the team which won the clouded world's pennant of 1919. Second and third bases will be doubtful spots, and Groh, if he capitulates, can fill only one of them, while it is uncertain how much longer Jake Daubert can keep up the major league pace. Roush's absence from the outfield will leave that hole to be filled by Paskert, a Cub discard, who may or may not have another good year in him. It is doubtful if the trade of Ruether for Marquard helped the slab staff, although the swap of Ring for Rixey may even it up.

New York has a team of possibilities for good or bad, depending on how Dave Bancroft shapes up. He has been ill most of the winter and it is doubtful if he can start at shortstop next Wednesday. That would mean four youngsters on the infield and an unsettled team. McGraw has plenty of veteran pitchers and catchers and a weak spot in center field now that Kauff is barred.

Robins Conceded Chance.

Brooklyn's champions will go into the race practically unchanged and their chances for another pennant depend almost entirely on whether or not the other teams have strengthened. The Robins are nearly all veterans bound to slow up more each season, and they won their laurels last year chiefly on their pitching staff, which remains as strong as ever with the addition of Ruether, except that it is a year older.

Englewood's diamond crew beat Calumet, 4 to 0, in a practice game at Hamilton park yesterday. Calumet did not get a runner beyond second base.

Tilden Warns Japs May Prove Dark Horse of Davis Cup Play

BY WILLIAM T. TILDEN II.
[World's leading tennis authority.]

The United States is to defend the Davis cup this season against the victorious challenger of the largest field that ever has entered the lists for the famous international tennis trophy.

WILLIAM T. TILDEN II.

The old standbys—Australasia, England, France, and Belgium—will again be represented. From this group may come our challenger. Surely it will take a great team to defeat such powerful combinations as Australia offers Normal E. Brooks, Gerald L. Patterson, and O'Hara Wood, as France presents in Andre Gobert, Marcel Brugnon and W. Laurenz, and as England will build around Majors Kingscote and Parke. Most people expect our team will face one of these three in the challenge round.

May, Face Dark Horse.

I am not so certain of this. We know too little of the strength of India, Norway, or the Philippines to be certain, and South Africa, Sweden, and Holland are still to be considered, as most certainly is Japan.

India may spring a surprise. Mrs. Norman E. Brookes, told me recently that India boasted several players of great promise, and that there were several natives playing the game in that land who, under the coaching of the English, had acquired much skill.

India may be a factor, but I do not believe so now that we hear that Zenzo Shimidzu, the star Japanese player residing in Calcutta, will play with his own countrymen.

The Scandinavian countries need not be feared. The only great tennis expert to emerge from the north is our own national women's champion, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory. Their men have failed to class with her.

Jap Players Are Dangerous.

The Philippines should not prove strong, although I hear they may have several Japanese players, who have great promise, to join with the regular team.

Now, the only entry to cause worry to the old favorites is Japan. I look to see this nation the coming big factor in the game. They have two splendid performers in Shimidzu and Ichiya Kumagae, stars of the first water.

For the last two seasons Kumagae has been recognized as one of the four greatest players in America. He was ranked No. 3 in 1919 and No. 4 in 1920. True, he lost to Louis Raymond of South Africa in the Olympics of 1920—a match that was a startling upset. But Kumagae was ill and in no condition to play that day.

Shimidzu Has Class.

I have played Raymond and, in my opinion, fine performers that he is, he is not in Kumagae's class when the latter is fit.

Shimidzu, runner-up in the world's championship in 1920, is a wonderful match player. He had a marvelous record in England, losing only three matches throughout the season, one to Maj. Kingscote and two to me.

Indeed, now that Japan has challenged, I look to see Kumagae and Shimidzu successfully meet the opposing teams in the preliminary Davis cup ties. It would be no surprise were we to face them in the challenge round. My choice is Japan, first, with Australasia, England, and France ranking in that order.

Women Stars to Meet.

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory will compete in France and England in May and June. I look forward keenly to the fact that I will see "Marvelous Molla" meet Suzanna Lenglen, the French girl champion. I feel that America has at least an even chance in that match.

The American tennis team journeyed 26,000 miles after the Davis cup before it returned to its native shores. Yet every mile was well spent, as we now have the opportunity to welcome to our shores our friends and to return their delightful hospitality. They are welcome to everything we have, except the cup. That should stay at home a few years and become acquainted with its own family.

After all, the best part of tennis is the people you meet and the friendships formed.

Sherdell's Wing Stops Browns as Cards Win, 4-1

St. Louis, Mo., April 9.—[Special.]—The Cardinals by defeating the Browns today 4 to 1, tied the spring series, each side now owning three victories.

The National Leaguers came out of their batting slump after scoring only two runs in twenty-seven innings and bunched their hits against Sothoron. The Browns could not stir up much of a fuss against Sherdel's southpaw shoots, getting only six hits.

Decatur, Ill., April 9.—[Special.]—The Havolines of Lawrenceville defeated the Staleys, 5 to 3, today in the opening game of the season. McGinnity worked three twirlers, while Teague went the route for the visitors. He allowed only five hits. Score:

TOM ROBINSON SELECTS SWIM ALL-AMERICAN

BY TOM ROBINSON.
[N. U. Swimming Coach.]

Picking an all star American intercollegiate swimming team for 1921 is a difficult task. The main reason for this arises from the difference in the lengths of the pools. In the east practically all pools are seventy-five feet or more in length. In the west they are sixty feet long, excepting at Illinois, where the tank is seventy-five feet.

TOM ROBINSON.

The outstanding stars of the east for the year were Binney, Yale; Damon, Amherst; Jelliffe, Thurston, and Pratt, Yale; Giebel, Rutgers; and Emery, Navy. These men carried off the honors in dual competition and in the intercollegiate meets.

Blinks Is Year's "Find."

The western aggregation of crawl stars includes Blinks of Chicago, Paver, Dickson and Hayford of Northwestern, Lampher and Gow of Minnesota, and Royal and McNalley of Illinois.

Blinks of Chicago is the greatest find of the year. In the conference meet he carried off three firsts in record time and was not pushed to do his best.

In the three odd events used in the western conference—namely: the breast stroke, back stroke, and the 440 yard swim, only western men appear, excepting in the breast stroke, where Quinby of the Navy is given a place. As the Navy does not swim in the 200 yard distance, he appears on the second team.

HUDSON

Not Enough Hudsons

Super-Six Still Holds Exclusive Position

Hudson shortage is a fact. Buyers know it. Instead of immediate deliveries an increasing number find they must wait.

Total stocks of Hudsons, everywhere in the country, average less than two cars per dealer.

Our own spring demand must be met from such small stocks as we had the foresight to get during the slack season past.

Note What You Save

Now we see better than ever before what hold Hudson quality has among motor car users.

The present market is selective. Hence the emphasis of Hudson value. Its cost advantage gives $1000 or more saving against any car to which you compare Hudson quality, reliability and performance.

Perhaps you hold Hudson the greatest of all cars. Surely, in many respects you acknowledge this is so.

For instance, the Super-Six motor. It is exclusive to Hudson. For five years it has been the master type. No other has been developed to match its efficiency and endurance. It practically annuls vibration. The smoothness which results is appreciated not only in riding ease. It means absence of strain and friction. Repair freedom and a long life car results. It accounts for Hudson's five years of sales leadership.

And if you plan to buy soon, bear in mind that deliveries are already difficult and stocks must be even more limited as the season progresses.

Lane Tech's senior swimming team repeated its victory of last year yesterday, winning the annual meet of the Chicago High School league at the Y. M. C. A. college pool with 40 points. Harrison was second with 33 points and Senn third, 25. Harrison pulled a surprise by winning the junior meet with 36 points, Senn, the favorite, taking second with 28.

It was only through the individual work of Miller that Lane won the senior meet. Miller was high point scorer, taking firsts in the 40 and 100 yard swims and the backstroke events. Ford and Schwartz of Senn divided high scoring honors in the junior meet, each accounting for eight markers.

Two league records were shattered. Blankley of Senn, making the 100 yard backstroke in 1:18 4-5, in the senior meet. In the junior event, Bell of Harrison set a new record of 0:17 in the twenty yard tired swimmer carry. Summaries:

SANDLOT BODY BANS BLACK SOX

Cleveland, O., April 9.—The National Baseball federation, the governing body of sand lot baseball, today went on record as opposing the "Black Sox," as the organization of former White Sox players under indictment is called.

"Any team affiliated with the federation which books a game with this outfit faces being placed on the ineligible list and barred from playing other amateur or semi-pro teams in our organization," J. F. Potts, secretary, said.

CONCORDIA, 7; LAKE FOREST, 1.

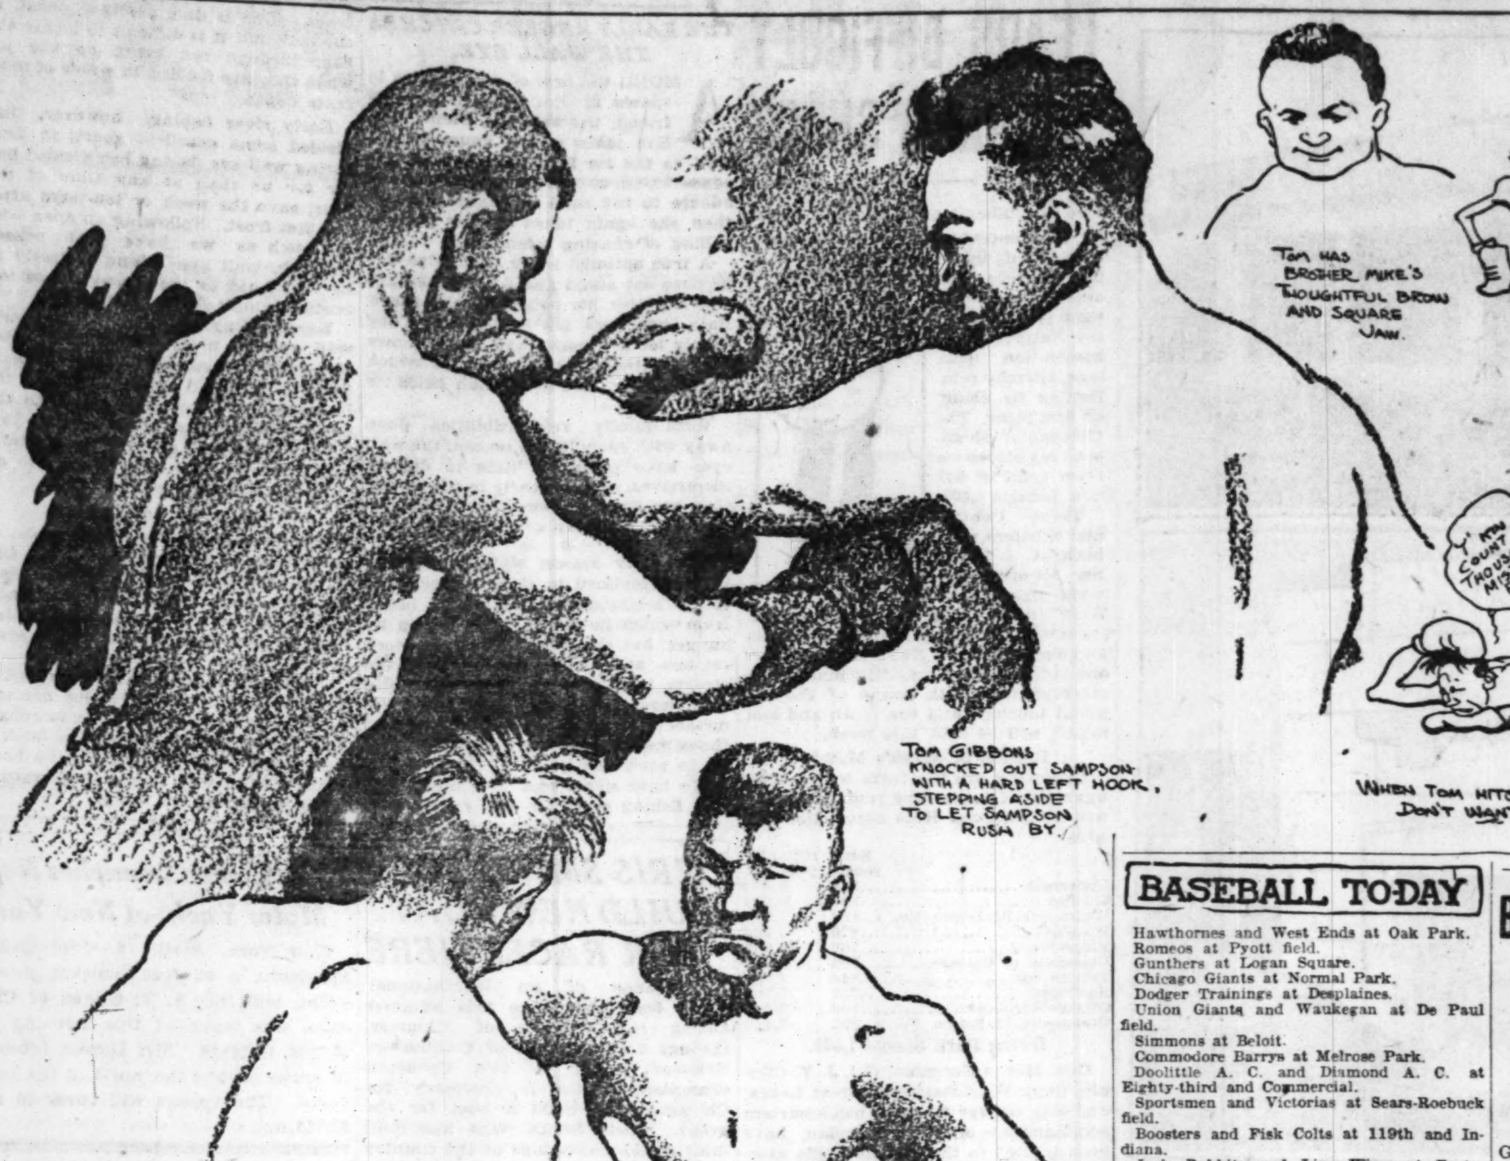
TWO REAL FIGHTERS AFTER JACK DEMPSEY



TOM HAS BROTHER MIKE'S THOUGHTFUL BROW AND SQUARE JAW.
TOM HAS DEVELOPED HIS LEFT UNTIL IT LOOKS LIKE THIS TO THE FELLOWS HE FIGHTS
Y' KIN COUNT A THOUSAND, MISTER REFEREE
TOM GIBBONS KNOCKED OUT SAMPSON WITH A HARD LEFT HOOK, STEPPING ASIDE TO LET SAMPSON RUSH BY.
WHEN TOM HITS 'EM THEY DON'T WANT TO GET UP!
HARRY GREB FIGHTS HEAVYWEIGHTS OR MIDDLEWEIGHTS HE KNOCKED OUT GUNBOAT SMITH IN A ROUND.
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

JACK DEMPSEY hasn't any more giants to fight, but two of three smaller men are camping on his trail. Dempsey has shown that among heavyweights speed counts more than bulk, so he can't very well bar smaller men on the ground of humanity, as some of the old time champions did.

Dempsey is to fight Georges Carpentier on July 2. Carpentier will weigh a little over 170 pounds stripped, and Dempsey's best fighting weight is 189, the weight at which he met the gigantic Willard. Dempsey beat Morris, Fulton, and Willard because he was a faster man, and he could hit.

Carpentier is remarkably fast—perhaps faster even than Dempsey—and he can hit. So Carpentier may be able to beat Dempsey and take the heavyweight championship back to France. But if he doesn't, there are two Americans of about his weight who are anxious to fight Jack and who wouldn't dodge a meeting with Carpentier at any time.

Tom Gibbons and Harry Greb are after championships. Both have been doing some remarkable fighting during the last two years.

Scores Quick Knockouts.

Tom has won three of his last four fights with knockouts. Very quick knockouts at that, fighting and winning much in the Dempsey manner. He fought Tony Melichar and knocked him out in 25 seconds. Tony was so well satisfied that he retired from boxing. Incidentally Tony was no slouch as a fighter, being the pride of Jimmy Dime's stable—and Jimmy Dime has a reputation for picking good ones.

Gibbons knocked out Al Reich in 2 minutes 33 seconds.

"I never saw a finer athlete in my life," Gibbons told me. "When I got into the ring with Reich and looked him over I wondered how I'd ever put him down. I'm just 6 feet tall and weigh 175 pounds—just a little more than Carpentier—and Reich was three or four inches taller and weighed 219."

Knocks Out Paul Sampson.

Tom next knocked out Paul Sampson in New York. Sampson was a tough bird. He never had been flattened before, and he had fought a lot of good men. He fought Jack Johnson twenty rounds in Mexico. He fought Greb, Turney, and others of like class. He worked five weeks with Jack Dempsey when Jack was training to fight Brennan, and he stuck through the five weeks with Dempsey, who works out the way he fights.

Gibbons knocked out Sampson in just about the way he knocked out Melichar, except that it took a few more punches to put away the blond iron man. In the Melichar fight Tom struck only two blows. Melichair was on his feet six seconds, one the floor nineteen. He knocked Tony down with a left, gave him time to get up and rush, and stepping aside to let him go past clipped him on the chin with a wicked left hook that finished the fight with no further need for action.

He served Sampson the same way. The result of this fight was a surprise, Sampson having been picked to stay to the limit.

Hard to Get Fight.

Gibbons claims that he is beginning to find it hard to get matches. He says Bill Brennan has refused an offer of $10,000 to fight him in Cleveland. Bob Martin, according to Gibbons, refused an offer of $7,500, also made by Promoter Tommy McGinty of Cleveland.

"Would you be anxious to fight Dempsey?" I asked Tom.

"That's the ambition of my life," said Gibbons.

Veteran of 100 Battles.

The other light contender who wants to fight Jack is Harry Greb. Greb is well known as a great fighter of his weight, a tough, rugged fellow with a record of about 300 fights in the ring. He is the best man of his weight in America, and when Carpentier came here to show what he could do Greb was suggested as a suitable opponent.

However, Bat Levinsky, a hasbeen, was selected. It might not have been dangerous to match the great Frenchman against Greb, but at least Greb would have given him a fight—which old broken down Levinsky didn't.

Greb is a hard hitter. He knocked out Gunboat Smith in two rounds a while ago. He claims that he never lost a decision fight, and the only knockout scored against him was landed by Joe Chip eight years ago, when Greb was just beginning to battle. He afterward beat Chip when he had a little more experience. His first fight with Chip was only his third or fourth fight in a ring.

Resembles Jack Dillon.

As a fighter Greb is very much like Jack Dillon when Jack was known as the "Giant Killer." He looks like Jack and fights much as Jack used to. He has beaten Dillon, Levinsky, Brennan (fifteen round decision), Bob Roper, Jack Doyle, and Jeff Smith, as well as innumerable men of less fame. He fought Brennan three times, and they were all tough fights. Greb thinks Brennan about the best man he has met and points to the fight Brennan gave Dempsey as an argument that he has a chance with Dempsey himself.

Incidentally Greb trained with Dempsey at Fifty-seventh street, and at Benton Harbor when Dempsey fought Miske. He believes that he can hold his own with Dempsey any time and perhaps outpoint him.

BILL DEMETRAL SAYS HE'LL FLOP GARDINI TO REDEEM HIMSELF

Bill Demetral, who wrestles Renato Gardini at the Ashland auditorium on Tuesday night, declared last evening he is going to avenge the defeat handed him by the Italian at the Coliseum or break a leg in the attempt. On his victorious showing depends a match with Earl Caddock. He has been promised a match in the event he wins, but the date and place have not been decided.

ALLEN EUSTACE.

During his training for the Gardini match Demetral has been handled mighty roughly by Allen Eustace, the giant farmer from Kansas, and says the westerner has the makings of a champion. Eustace has posted $1,000 to bind a match with Ed ("Strangler") Lewis for the title and hopes the title holder will lend a listening ear. All holds go.

Ben Stefanski Invites Meyers to Step on Mat

Ben Stefanski has bobbed up again with a defi to Johnny Meyers, self-styled middleweight wrestling champion. Manager Otto Prapotnick has been offered a date at the Haymarket on April 15 and has posted in this office a check for $200 to guarantee 158 pounds for his man at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the fifteenth. Here is a chance for Meyers to try and pick up a little "easy money." Prapotnick says Meyers is afraid to take a chance with his man. He puts the "fear" label on all other middleweights, too.

MERRIMAN DEFEATS WHITE, 9 AND 8, IN FINAL AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, N. C., April 9.—B. P. Merriman of the Country club of Waterbury won the North and South Amateur Golf championship today, defeating Gardiner White of New York, 9 and 8, in the thirty-six hole final round.

Merriman had a medal round of 73 in the morning and was 8 up, as White took 83 and did not win a hole. White held Merriman even for the first nine in the afternoon, both taking 38 shots to the turn, but Merriman won the tenth and match when he got a 4 to White's 5. White drove into a trap and had to play his second safe.

Merriman has played the sand greens here better than any other amateur this season and in his match today he seldom failed to get down in two from the edge of the greens. He rolled his approach shots up close with a putter, whereas White attempted to pitch to the pin and could not get near the cup. He also pushed a number of putts off the line, failing to calculate the slopes of the greens and the wind.

The Church Athletic association will hold a meeting Friday at 8 p. m. at 1602 Mallers building. A few more teams are needed to fill the junior league. Players 18 years and under are eligible.

Our Ninth Anniversary

Once again it is our pleasant duty to chronicle the anniversary of Billiards Magazine. Nine years ago in the month of showers it was a budding plant in the field of literature, its seed having been sown in a soil which other similar plants in previous years had found to be lacking in nutriment. Looking back nine years, it is easy to note the great strides billiards has made. In every city of any size can be found establishments which far surpass those of the preceding decade, and more are coming. The player is now able to enjoy his game amid artistic surroundings and with appurtenances as perfect as human ingenuity is able to devise.

These improvements have made possible a degree of skill never before attained. The leading professionals are accomplishing feats of scoring which far outrank those of the old time masters.

We believe Billiards Magazine, while keeping pace with the advance, has had its share in the uplift, and that its chronicling of the doings of the players has done much to create and maintain a widespread interest in all forms of cue sport.

This success has been due to the co-operation of manufacturers, room keepers and players, and to these we again extend our sincere thanks. We know you have aided us, we hope we have aided you, and so bespeak the same generous patronage in the future you have accorded in the past.

A Car as Fine As Its Wonderful Motor

Everywhere you hear the Chalmers motor spoken of with real enthusiasm by its owners.

It is due the Chalmers motor that it should be praised. For it is truly a wonderful car.

Its Great Performance

It is wonderful in the efficiency it gets from today's poor gasoline. In the added miles it returns. In the way it performs and stands up.

These things are largely due to preheating the fuel by the hot-spot before it enters the cylinders.

As a direct result of this fine performance, upkeep and replacement costs on the Chalmers are surprisingly low.

Motor Not Only Feature

But Chalmers excellence is far from beginning and ending with its motor. It is a car that is finely built in every detail.

It affords consummate riding comfort, drives with a minimum of effort, and is beautiful in design and finish.

We invite you to look into Chalmers records and Chalmers standing without delay.

WESTERN GOLF CLUBS ASKED TO JOIN U. S. G. A.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Having scored a partial victory in [illegible] for only one class of membership in the United States Golf association has appealed to its member clubs to consummate its victory.

After years of argument the officials of the U. S. G. A. agreed to abolish its "allied" membership, provided 51 per cent of the allied clubs agreed to join the "active" list, the annual dues for this being set at $20.

"Allied" members previously paid $10 and had no voting privilege.

Ask Members to Join.

Through Secretary W. W. Harless, the W. G. [illegible]s asked its members to join the [illegible] list of the U. S. G. A. and so make the national body a real American institution in which every club will be on an equal footing.

Despite the fall in temperature most of the local golf courses were patronized yesterday, the crowds being somewhat smaller than the preceding Saturday.

A dozen members of the old guard were out at Glen View, where the course was in fine shape and permanent greens in use. The new clubhouse is nearing completion and a log fire in the living room proved a gathering spot. Jock Hutchinson, after his strenuous play in the south, where he won three tournaments in four starts, played a full round in the afternoon.

Need Job for Anderson.

Sandy Anderson, former assistant to Bob White at the Ravisloe Country club, will be professional at the new Naperville Country club, which will swing into line this summer.

The Olympia Fields Country club will make the earliest start in its history, the sports and pastimes committee having scheduled a blind bogey event for next Saturday. A ball sweepstakes will be played April 23 and on April 30 the qualifying round for the spring tournament is carded.

CLUBS ASK BOARD FOR POLO FIELD IN LINCOLN PARK

Polo games three times a week in Lincoln park are to be played if the polo players of Chicago have their wish. They have already applied to the board of commissioners of Lincoln park with a suggestion that new made ground at the foot of Waveland avenue be made into a polo field.

All that is required for the field is a level space 400 by 900 feet. Used three afternoons a week for two or three hours for polo, it would be available for other sports the rest of the time.

Chicago now has four clubs. Teams from New York, Washington, Detroit and other cities where polo has become established would be invited to play here.

The suggestion of the polo clubs, the First Field artillery, Onwentsia, North Shore and Fort Sheridan, for a field in the park is being considered by a committee of the park board.

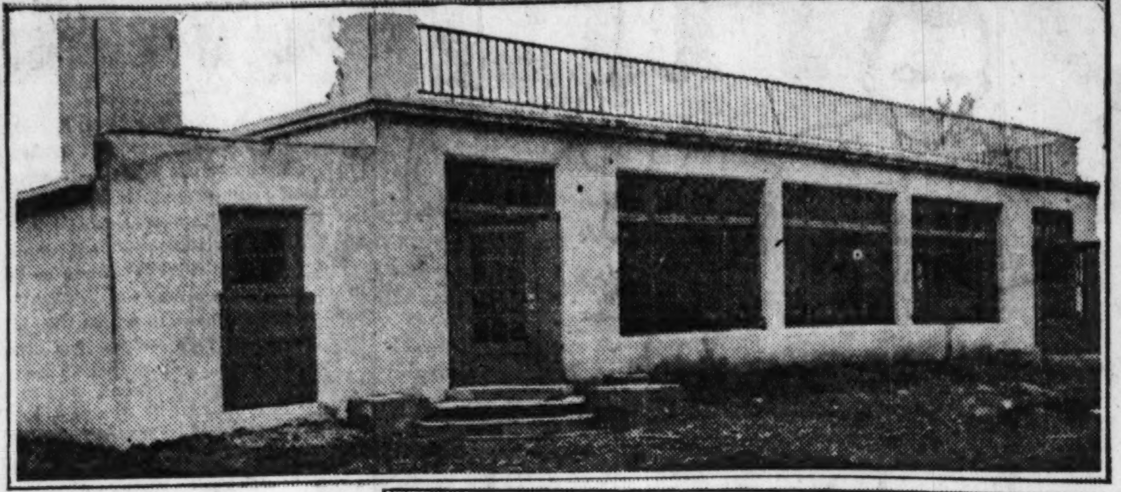
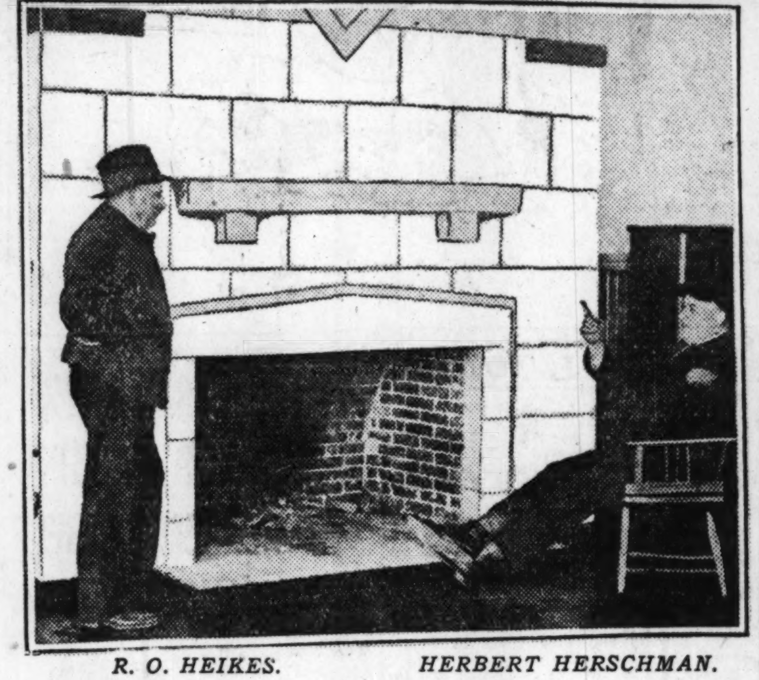
NEW HOME OF LINCOLN PARK GUN CLUB





R. O. HEIKES. HERBERT HERSCHMAN.

TRAP shooting is booming at the Lincoln Park Gun club. With the completion of the new clubhouse at the foot of Diversey boulevard and the lake, at a cost of $30,000, the club is making ready for the official opening of the new structure on April 24. The clubhouse, which is constructed of steel and concrete, may be visited by members today but it will require another two weeks to put on the finishing touches.

Opening day will be a feature event according to the plans. Gov. Len Small, Mayor Thompson and other state and city officials are expected to participate in the ceremonies and a registered tournament open to all amateurs in the country will be held.

Rolla "Pop" Heikes, former professional of the Peters Cartridge company, has been engaged as manager and coach of the club. "Pop," who hails from Dayton, Ohio, is well known in shooting circles, having participated in every big tournament for many years.

The club now has nearly 400 members. Charles W. Folds is the president, Frank E. Mueller vice president and F. E. Roets secretary and treasurer.

WOODS and WATERS

by LARRY ST. JOHN

THE EARLY ANGLER CATCHES THE WALL EYE.

AMONG the first of game fishes to spawn in the spring is our old friend, the wall eye. Dame Wall Eye takes a few hours off, as soon as the ice is out, to deposit her eggs—50,000 or more—which sink and adhere to the sand or gravel bottom, then she again takes up her regular calling of chasing minnows.

A true optimist is Mr. Wall Eye, for he does not stand guard over the eggs and fry, like his neighbor, Mr. Black Bass, nor does his "missus." They simply let the spawn and little fellows shift for themseves, in spite of which the wall eye tribe more than holds its own.

With family responsibilities done away with early in the season, the wall eyes have plenty of time to disport themselves, and this early in the spring they are the chief enemies of the feeble fish folk known as minnows.

The early season wall eye of the lakes is inclined to stick rather close to his headquarters, the deeper holes, from which he sallies when driven by hunger; but the river wall eye is more restless, and travels up and down the stream in search of food. Generally they move about in small schools, the members of each school being of about the same size; but the old lunkers prefer to work alone.

We have never met with much success fishing early for wall eyes in the lakes. This is due, partly at least, to the fact that it is difficult to locate the fish, through not being on the job when they are feeding in water of moderate depth.

Early river fishing, however, has yielded some excellent sport; in fact, spring wall eye fishing has yielded better for us than at any time of the year, save the week or ten days after the first frost. Following an open winter, such as we have just passed through, wall eye fishing is likely to be very good in the rivers unless torrential rains roil the water.

Beyond doubt the best bait for early wall eyes is a live minnow of good size—preferably over three inches in length. Hooked lightly under the back fin and allowed to run with the current it is almost an irresistible lure for a hungry wall eye, the hook retarding its movements just enough to attract the attention of the fish.

Wherever one fishes, the lure should be permitted to go where it will. One of the secrets of successful river fishing with bait, is that the fish know where the current will carry food and lie in or near such spots ready to seize it as it passes.

Give the fish ample time to take the bait, land him without undue commotion and take plenty of time to rebait. And if you should happen to hook a black bass remove him from the hook gently, with wet hands, and return him carefully to the water.

CHRIS SMITH TO BUILD NEW BOAT FOR RACES HERE

Assurance of an international speed boat race here this summer during the Pageant of Progress, through the challenge of Commodore Ericsson, owner of the Canadian champion, makes it necessary for Chicagoans to build a boat for the event. Chris Smith, who has built most of the champions of the country in the last few years, has informed the committee in charge of the races that he will guarantee to build a speed boat between now and July which will beat Miss Toronto, the Canadian queen.

With the entry of a Chicago boat in the races it is certain that craft from Detroit, Buffalo, Toledo, and probably Cleveland will be entered.

A syndicate will be formed this week to buy the boat and race it. The course probably will be laid out in the harbor north of the municipal pier.

A. Y. Gowen Launches New Motor Yacht at New York

NEW STABLE AND ARENA FOR SHOW AT SOUTH SHORE

GOSH I FEEL TOO [illegible]

In preparation for its annual horse show, which this year will be held as a four day event, June 8, 9, 10, and 11, instead of the customary three days, as formerly, the South Shore Country club already has broken ground for a new stable and arena.

The new facilities, which have been undertaken at an expense of $50,000, will accommodate 200 horses during the show, and at other times will provide an indoor ring, 50x200 feet, for the exercising of horses during bad weather.

Entries Coming Already.

The new stable will have complete dressing and locker accommodations for both men and women.

Entries for the horse show, which annually attracts exhibitors from all over the east, and as far west as Kansas City, have already begun to reach the city officials in charge.

One of the days of the show will be Children's day, with pony exhibitions and a number of other stunts on the program on that day.

Entertainment for Little Folks.

A committee of women selected from the South Shore club and the membership of the Chicago Equestrian association, will have charge of the Children's day arrangements, which include the use of automobiles in sending to charitable institutions over the city for the children, and returning them after the day's entertainment.

The Good
MAXWELL

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation wishes to bear witness to the wonderful work of reconstruction accomplished by the new and powerful organization now manufacturing the Good Maxwell Motor Car.

The great six Maxwell plants in four cities have been brought to a high state of proficiency.

Inventories have been reduced to normal, costs lowered, efficiency increased, and manufacturing practices greatly bettered.

The Good Maxwell, through sheer increased merit, has been entrenched more strongly than ever in public approval.

One of the final steps in this process of rehabilitation was reached in Detroit on Friday, April 8.

For months the banks and interests concerned in the upbuilding of these properties have held ready for this new management new cash in the amount of $15,000,000.

To establish clear title to the properties (which has been the effect of rendering these funds immediately available upon the discharge of the receivership and the consummation of the reorganization) and to insure the continuance of the present policies, a temporary receivership was consented to in the United States District Court at Detroit on Friday by all of the interests involved.

The friendly and constructive character of the action is indicated by the appointment as receiver of W. Ledyard Mitchell who, with Arthur E. Barker, has been in active charge of the management of the properties since the reconstruction process began.

In adopting the somewhat unusual policy of giving these facts in detail, this Company is actuated by the conviction that the high standing of the Maxwell properties can best be served by sharing with the public the good news of every step of their progress.

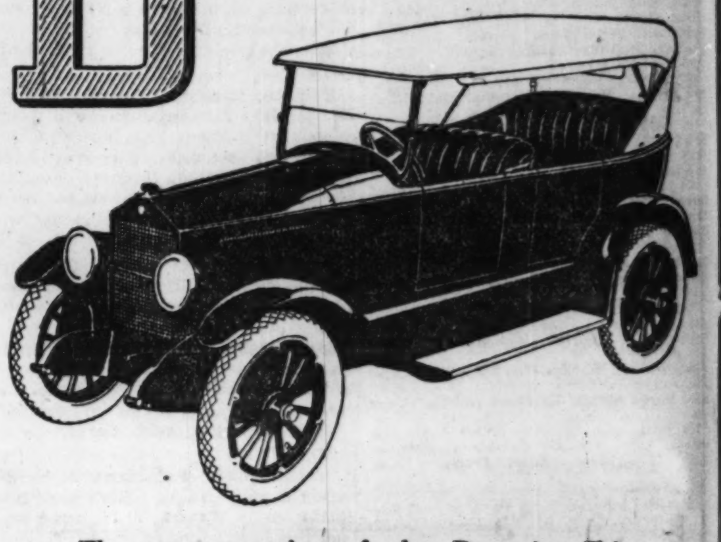
DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through



The great prestige of the Dort in Chicago has been built upon the uncommon mechanical competence of the car and its unusual operative thrift.

Chicago people say in all truth that no car of like price is of finer mechanical quality.

And now this remarkable prestige is given added impetus by the introduction upon the Dort chassis of a body of exquisite and finished beauty.

The classic charm of the new family of Dort cars marks the fullest expression of artistic coach work conceived and executed by master craftsmen.

As the Dort in the past has been reckoned the standard in its field for sustained and steady performance at the meager minimum of travel cost, so now it must in addition be held the one fine car from point of appearance in the moderate price class.

The Touring Model above will be found in our showroom together with the Roadster, the Sedan and Coupe, constituting the family of Dort cars.

We ask that after you have viewed these beautiful cars you compare them with other models of higher price.

In no other way can you fully grasp the exceptional beauty and the unequaled value that the Dort car today possesses.

MR. WELLS ON THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE.

All radical reformers—perhaps we should say, all idealists—divide history into two epochs, which might be marked B. M. and A. M., or Before Me and After Me.

Mr. Wells illustrates this observation in the first two articles of a series on "The Salvaging of Civilization," now running in a popular weekly. The first article was Mr. Wells at his best—that is, as critic of existing conditions. He drew for us a graphic picture contrasting the political unity and economic coördination of the American continent within the United States with the violent disunity which the intense national personalities of European peoples create and perpetuate throughout Europe. He shows what a burden this political partitioning imposes upon life there and he especially emphasizes the effect it has upon freedom of transportation. A man in New York, he points out, wishing to go to St. Louis, looks up the next train, packs his grip, boards his sleeper, and wakes up next morning at his destination. That with a few hours' allowance, is accurate enough. It is exact as to the simplicity of our conditions. But a man in London who wishes to go to Warsaw, approximately the same distance, must spend days in irksome passport formalities, must be turned out every few hundred miles where there is a national frontier, must be inspected as to person and baggage repeatedly, and arrives after days.

Commerce, of course, suffers the same impediments, and the productivity and exchange of the continent thus wear a galling harness of tariffs and restrictions. The gross loss to the world, year by year, is, of course, beyond estimate, but, entirely apart from the vast wastage of armament and war which political nationalism and ambitious imperialism bring about, the loss is enormous.

Americans, who take their good fortune as a matter of course, would do well to meditate on Mr. Wells' picture. He indeed points his contrast for us tellingly by asking what the American people would think if Kentucky, for example, should become infected with the particularism which divides Europe and should declare itself a separate state, erect customs barriers, organize an army, preach Kentuckianism to its people, and begin a project for seizing a strategic frontier in West Virginia, the mines of Alabama, and the mouth of the Mississippi. As Mr. Wells remarks, Americans would assume that some strange mental derangement had stricken the people of the region. Yet Kentucky would only be doing what the nations of Europe have been doing for centuries.

Mr. Wells views with alarm this European system and we cannot but share in some degree his pessimism. Nothing less, he believes, than the salvation of European society depends upon a drastic readjustment, and this in turn, he sees, depends upon a deep change in political ideas and habits.

But here Mr. Wells, we think, begins to take leave of the realities he has been showing us so clearly. He concedes that patriotism, as European nations know it, is a powerful obstruction to the evolution of such a community as has grown up in the United States. But his passionate and imaginative idealism usually carries Mr. Wells rather buoyantly over obstructions, and in this case he urges that as nationalist patriotism is not an inherent sentiment but the result of intensive cultivation in the school, the church, the forum, and the press of every country, a counter propaganda or a reformed education would produce within a reasonable period the "colossal turnover of moral and intellectual forces in the direction of creating an international mind" upon which the salvation of Europe depends.

But Mr. Wells is not satisfied with a mere nonpolitical United States of Europe. Europe is too small a field for his aspiration. We must have a world mind. Why stop at the boundaries of Europe? "Why make two bites of a planet?" Why, indeed, if we take leave of the forces operating through the ages? By education and propaganda, immensely more potent through the modern press, the telegraph, modern transport, the cinema, why may we not move triumphantly and expeditiously to the world wide acceptance of the idea of man and the principle of human unity?

We cannot here enlarge upon Mr. Wells' ecstatic vision. Our interest in it is in the light it throws upon the processes of thought familiar in the proposals of idealistic men of the Wells type. Lately Mr. Wells put forth a remarkable summary of world history. Through all but the two final chapters Mr. Wells honestly and eloquently sets forth the immemorial combat which we call life, from the earliest battles of creation in the lowest forms of life to the mighty struggle of yesterday—how the more intelligent or the more vigorous overcame the less, how Egypt and Assyria rose and fell, how the wild tribesmen of the north overthrew the Ægean culture and built the glory that was Greece, how towering Rome came, and after her Europe and America. The panorama is tremendous, tragic with the certain passing of mighty and noble things and inspiring with the upspringing of new vitalities. Always there has been war, always birth, growth, dissolution.

Then Mr. Wells, having painted his masterly picture, turns his back upon it. This force and the other are not to his liking and we are to change all that. Henceforth, if we but follow his thought, the lion and the lamb are to lie down together. Henceforth the life force is to be driven in a harness of the ideal; men are to cease from coveting what their neighbors possess and fighting for it; men are to undergo a fundamental change of that mighty ego which has built as well as destroyed since men were; altruism is wholly to subjugate it. In short, in the new era life and men are to be the reverse of what they have been since we have any slightest knowledge of them.

Our religious faith holds forth such a vision of a new heaven and a new earth to be fulfilled in the Creator's own time. But Mr. Wells and his brothers are not speaking in religious terms nor seeking to interpret religious truth. They speak of this world and assume to deal with its realities. We think they presume too much in condemning from the throne of their private intelligences forces which have played through the destiny of man from his beginning. What is good, what is bad, judged from the fate of the individual, what is an essential part of the scheme of the great reality, cannot be so confidently assayed by us as by Mr. Wells, and his condemnations and approvals do not carry us with him on his flight.

THE ROAD'S THE THING.

In Indiana week before last one good road contract was awarded at a rate of $35,000 a mile for concrete eighteen feet wide. Another contract was awarded at an average rate of $76,360 a mile for concrete twenty to twenty-four feet wide. In these figures is corroborative evidence of the contention that no good road can be as expensive as a bad road.

Indiana has knowledge of the value of good roads. Therefore it builds, expensively if it must, cheaply if it can. Illinois would do well to follow the example. The road is more important than the cost. No price, for instance, would be too much to pay for a good road from Chicago along the north shore if there were no road in existence. The speed and economy of transportation for human beings, farm products, and general freight over a good main thoroughfare is of value which cannot be sacrificed to any margin of 10 or 20 per cent in original cost price.

Good roads help to solve the housing problem, the high cost of living, and a dozen others. They break down social and educational barriers, and contribute alike to the comfort, the pleasure, the health, and the prosperity of virtually every resident of the state. Such advantages are not to be sacrificed or delayed at an incidental cost of a few dollars.

We need good roads, and we need them now. And when we have them we will need policemen on them. The advantages of swift transportation for well disposed persons unfortunately give advantages to the ill disposed which must be restricted. A good roads system and a constabulary should go together. Let's go.

MILITARY TRAINING CAMPS.

The citizens' military training camps will be conducted this summer for a month of instruction, beginning probably about the middle of July, for volunteers willing to take the course. Young men and men, from 16 to 35 years of age, are eligible, and attendance at the camps will be without expense to the candidates.

This territory of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan is the sixth corps area, and the training camp is at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill. The idea thus carried into a program is a part of the plan for the creation of a citizen reserve trained in knowledge of arms.

The plan in its most comprehensive scope is for universal military training. That may be beyond possibility. It is best, but it may never be had. The summer training camps for success require that citizens shall be willing to give a month to their country for training.

In doing so they not only make it possible to establish a voluntary system of training but they keep alive the idea that the country must have a citizen reserve. The men who volunteer will be doing a noteworthy service for their country. They are encouraging a proper military idea and they may be responsible for its proper development.

THE IMMORALITY OF KNEES.

A police censor in Detroit has issued a ban against bare knees. Some stage folk, he declares, have been going too far.

But he grants a concession. In national costumes, such as the Scotch, bare knees are officially condoned if not approved.

Why this weak compromise? Is the Scotch knee less provocative than the native? We can hardly accept the distinction, but that may be because the human knee at best, or worst, appears to our innocent and uncensorial observation as little provocative as any detail of the human anatomy. If the habitual exposure of any detail is in itself perversive of our morals the knee, we suppose, must be covered with the rest, but if there were reason in professional censorship it would remain exposed long after our fragile morality is defended from the eyes, the lips, the tresses, and other agents of immemorial temptation.

If censors would investigate the laws of the mind, which thus far has not occurred to them as useful, they would realize that habit is the safeguard of the truant fancy. Over every censor's desk should be hung the enframed classic of the London busman. It would save those excitable guardians of other people's morals a great deal of unnecessary perturbation. It is not what is seen but what is unseen that troubles.

But if that were acknowledged the censor's occupation would be gone.

Editorial of the Day

THE RAILROAD PROBLEM.

[New York Journal of Commerce.]

Senator Calder in discussing the present railroad situation recently expressed himself as opposed to government ownership or operation but as fearful lest such a course be forced upon us in order that the "arteries of travel" be kept open. Whether Senator Calder shares such an idea cannot be said, but there is a disposition in some quarters to view government ownership or operation in one form or another as a solution of the present difficulties. It should not be necessary to point out the fact that such is not the case. Such an arrangement might insure a good return to the owners and probably good wages to labor. But what the public is vitally interested in is adequate transportation facilities at reasonable cost. This the government is not likely to furnish.

The public in any case will have to pay the costs. Under government operation it would probably have to pay not only legitimate costs but additional sums in respect of inefficiency. The present financial difficulties of the roads arise very largely out of the fact that business depression has caught them without adequate reserves (which could have been built up out of past earnings but for our previous policy of starving the companies), and from the further fact that attainment of a footing of "rock bottom" efficiency and economy has been made impossible for the time being by labor difficulties. The problem of today is how to develop maximum economy in operation, and the lesson to be learned from present difficulties is the folly of a policy of railroad baiting.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

SEQUOIA.

In lonely vales, the great sequoia plods
Sunward, and after centuries it lays
Its fragrant boughs, for tributary praise,
Upon the starry altars of the gods.
Meanwhile, how far below, the little rods
Of common trees, like weeds, their tribute raise
In vain; and after some few troubled days,
Dying, become as unremembered clods.
When I beheld the world's most mighty tree,
Lifting its head to visions manifold,
Seeming eternal as the mountains old,
I could but think of Shakespeare's ageless mind
And of his rich imperial poesy
Laid on the highest altars of mankind.

✝ A Letter to B. L. T. ✝

Dear Judge: Brave souls have undertaken willingly, though with a prayer asking forgiveness (for fear that the ones who do not understand will call them impious priests who dare to venture), to carry forward the torch that you lifted so high. And it flickered at first in trembling hands, but burned right clearly, after all.

This day, in Indianapolis, I ate my lunch. The waitress who served me placed a modest hand over her exposed wishbone as she leaned over to serve a glass of water. Soberly speaking—and who isn't sober, nowadays?—the action delighted, even while it amused me. I attributed it as due to the effect of the evangelistic Mr. Gypsy Smith, a salesman of religion, who has apparently converted to decency all hereabouts except the directors of the gas company, the street railway, the water company, and of other utilities. These gentlemen have been so busily engaged in weeping upon the shoulders of the public service commission and pleading that they be relieved from beggarly rates that they have not had the heart to attend the words of the dynamic Gypsy.

I purchased some Virgin golf balls and a new pair of stockings, meaning to give the world a treat in the display of a noble pair of calves. The stockings made me think of my offer of army boots, with seventeen inch calf, to Mr. Armour, a year or so ago, when he made public his frugality in the purchase of shoes. You will remember the chuckle you enjoyed when I sent the letter through you with the remark that I feared that Mr. Armour had no calf large enough to fit my boots.

On Sunday I will sally forth to the golf meadow, bright and early. I shall first pay a visit of respect to the hole which, although it is a par three, I once made in two. After this will come the tee off, and here I shall place a bright, new ball and try to drive it on a whizzing line that will mount higher and higher, over the trees, over the bunkered fleecy clouds and into the blue, where you may find it, judge, old fellow.

Then, with a ho' and hum, I shall settle into an industrious effort and play a grand game. Thy—

Somewhat of appeasement I gained today in my Black Letter, a rare volume, Englished by Thomas Hyll, imprinted at London by William Seres, dwelling at the West ende of Pauls Church, at the signe of the Hedgehogge, Anno 1571. It is a contemplation of mankind, containing a singular discourse after the art of physiognomie, in a more ample manner than hitherto hath been published of any. However, sir, my object: In the place next after the chapter of the forehead, hath the physiognomer added a proper treatise of the signification of sundrie Lines. LINCOLN USED HIS BRAINS.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN was tall, long armed, long legged, and bony. No enemy is virulent enough to assert that he was not a man of superior ability. Some claim he was a genius, whatever that is.

Others refute the claim, but all are willing to admit that his intellectual equipment was far above the average of the politicians and statesmen who constituted his competitors and confrères. His contemporaries agree that his was a logical, analytical mind with an exceptional capacity for seeing things as they were and for clear, convincing statement.

He had practically no conventional education and his opportunities for training were not above the standards of country lawyers of his day. No one claims that his environmental influences were above the average.

Thomas Lincoln, his father, was 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed about 190 pounds and was compactly built. Dennis Hanks said that he was so stockily built that no one could stick his thumb between his ribs. He was slow of movement and slow of thought and was far from being of superior mental ability.

Nancy Hanks was built a little more on the loose, angular order, but it is not claimed that Abraham inherited his long, lean, hungry face and physique or his superior mental ability directly from Nancy Hanks Lincoln. In part because Abraham Lincoln was physically and mentally so unlike his parents, there grew up a multitude of rumors as to the legitimacy of his parentage. These rumors were aided by Lincoln's reticence on the subject, by statements made by the Herndon and Lamon biographies and by the spicy stories which came out of the political campaigns of the day, just as like stories come out of the political campaigns of the present day.

Dr. W. E. Barton has written a very painstaking book on the parentage of Lincoln in which he proves in great measure by citations of official documents that Abraham Lincoln was the legitimate son of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks Lincoln. Accepting Dr. Barton's conclusions, how can Abraham Lincoln be explained on any basis of inheritance?

Several rumors said Lincoln was the natural son of several different men largely because in each instance these men were long, angular fellows with legitimate sons who were also long and angular. But Barton shows that Abraham Lincoln was of the Appalachian mountaineer type, as were the men of the stock from which he sprung on both sides. Abraham Lincoln inherited his physical characteristics from the family stock, from a grandfather on one side or the other.

On inheritance grounds there was more reason to question the legitimacy of the stockier father. Abraham ran true to the family and district type. Thomas was the hard-to-explain variant. It not infrequently happens that physical type is inherited from some grandparent or great-grandparent rather than directly from a parent.

One rumor said Abraham Lincoln was the son of John C. Calhoun, in part because he had the same kind of an analytical logical mind. Dr. Barton destroys this rumor by the same methods employed with the others. Abraham may have inherited his type of mind from some grandparent and not directly from either parent. But let us now forget that the possibility of wide variation in type from all ancestors is accepted.

The individual is called a "sport." For a sport there is no explanation along the usual inheritance lines. Efforts to prove relationship of individuals on the basis of physical and mental characteristics is likely to fail in establishing the parentage of Guy Stillman and accounting for the genius of Samuel Rzesewski as it failed in the case of Abraham Lincoln.

PEP AND HOT WEATHER.

J. A. K. writes: "Permit me to corroborate Dr. E. Colby's opinion as how to live in the semi-tropics. I have spent more than seven years in the south. During that time I was operating a small farm, plowing, harrowing, hoeing, harvesting, or doing road work in the hot sun eight to ten hours a day. I was feeling fine, and the heat did not bother me a bit. When later I accepted an office position I soon lost my 'pep.' The heat was almost unbearable, the desire for drinking was insistent. But yielding to this desire very soon put my stomach out of order. The following rules for leading a healthful life in the south are the results of my experiences. Eat lightly and follow chiefly a vegetarian diet with plenty of fresh fruit. Drink very sparingly, avoid alcoholics, but if you must drink them, do it in the evening. The less one drinks the less will he feel the heat. Get plenty of exercise in the hot sun, either by working in the garden, marching, or playing baseball or tennis. People who follow these rules will not lose their energy in the south."

MAY BECOME CANCER.

Mrs. C. V. writes: "1. Could a tumor of ten years' growth become cancerous?

"2. Are there any exercises that would help straighten a young man's back? He daily is becoming more stoop shouldered.

"3. Or would you recommend shoulder braces? He is 20 years old and does manual labor.

"4. What causes frequent boils?"

REPLY.

1. Yes, any tissue can become cancerous. Some tumors are more likely to develop cancer than others. For instance, there is very little danger from an old fatty tumor. There is great danger from irritated moles.
2. Yes. Rowing, wrestling, work on the parallel bars, ladder and rope exercises.
3. No.
4. Irritating the skin, not keeping the skin clean, eating too much sugar and starch, diabetes.

TRY ALUMINUM CHLORIDE.

B. L. writes: "What is a remedy for sweaty hands? My hands perspire and leave an imprint on the polishing work I do."

REPLY.

Try a 10 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Perhaps two applications a week will be enough.

OBESITY IS CHIEF CAUSE.

I. V. writes: "1. What is the cause of diabetes? 2. What is diabetes mellitus? 3. What is the correct weight of a bottle fed baby of 15 months? 4. How many teeth should a 15 months old baby have?"

REPLY.

1. Diabetes is due to the inability of the system to use all the sugar consumed. Overeating and obesity are among the more important causes.
2. True diabetes.
3. About 22 pounds.

BETTER BE EXAMINED.

B. W. writes: "1. When a person expectorates blood, is it a sure sign of tuberculosis?

"2. How long can you live with that symptom who never feels sick and is otherwise in excellent health?

"3. What is the best course to take?"

REPLY.

1. No. There are other conditions which are apt to give this symptom.
2. Depends on the cause.
3. Get a diagnosis.

LOOPING THE LOOP-HOLE.

Chicago, April 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Why is it that whenever any of these overdeveloped "men" under 21, minors, purchase or get the worst of a business bargain they are always allowed to "renig" their part of the deal by claiming to be minors? Has a firm no redress from those who contract or purchase by misrepresenting their age or must we always be the goat in transactions with these so-called men?
A. S.

Although minors are not liable on their contracts, you might succeed in having them punished for fraud in misrepresenting their age. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEAREST LEGION POST.

Chicago, April 4.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you be good enough to tell me the name of the American Legion post which is located nearest to Clark street and North avenue and where applications for membership may be submitted? E. S.

LONG STANDING DEBT.

Chicago, April 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Several years ago I borrowed money in the state of New York, but have been unable to pay it, although I do intend to do so. Chicago lawyers have threatened me with court action if I do not pay it. Can such a debt be legally sued for in this state? In recent correspondence I have acknowledged the debt and assured payment of it.
DEBTOR.

A new promise can renew a debt barred by limitation. Since you do not say whether the original loan was on a note, nor the wording of the new promise, we cannot advise further.

DISCHARGES FOUND.

INSANE PATIENT.

Chicago, April 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A woman was declared insane and committed to a state asylum, where she stayed for eight months. Then she escaped and went to friends. She worked for two years. 1. Is she considered sane by the law?

2. Has she a right to vote?

3. Has she a legal right to the real estate in her name and her own jewelry and furniture? C. A. L.

1. The adjudication would raise a presumption of insanity.
2. It is not likely that any objection would be raised.
3. She can own property. Conveyance by her would be voidable.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

SEEKING AID FOR GERMAN RECOVERY.

BERLIN, Germany, March 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—After eighteen months' sojourn in central Europe, I have become fairly well acquainted with the political and economic condition, particularly in Germany. The people were last November inspired with the hope that, as soon as President Harding took his seat, peace would be declared with Germany. So far nothing has been done, and the feeling of disappointment is becoming painful. More than two years since the armistice, and we are still at war with Germany. Our brave boys fought, and many of them died, to "make the world safe for democracy." The German army surrendered upon the terms dictated by the victors. The next day the kaiser and twenty-six German princes lost their crowns and the people arose, and, without shedding a drop of blood, organized a republican form of government, to take the place of the German empire. Never in the annals of history has such a stupendous revolution occurred without the shedding of blood. The birth of a new republic upon the ruins of a military autocracy in central Europe should have sent a thrill of joy through every American heart. Instead of that, we have stood aloof, and refused to speak a word of encouragement to the new democracy.

There is a morbid fear of being called pro-German, even since their humiliating defeat. The true soldier is ready to sacrifice his life in conquering the armed foe, but as soon as the enemy surrenders and lays down his arms, he does not hesitate to risk his life in defense of his former foe. Some hothead politicians demanded the arrest and punishment of Gen. Lee after his surrender at Appomattox, but Gen. Grant said: "You will do it at your peril." Sympathy for the "under dog" should induce us to make peace with Germany, if for nothing else. This does not mean that Germany should escape paying a just indemnity to the allies. But the United States can do a great deal toward encouraging Germany to meet her stupendous obligations. Instead of canceling our claims upon the allies, it will serve a better purpose to all concerned if we will assist the prostrate foes in every legitimate way to meet their obligations to the allies, and thus help to lift the burden of reconstruction all around.
T. F. DORNBLASER.

THE LEGION AND DEBS.

Libertyville, Ill., April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am an ex-service man who served in France. I am not a Socialist. I see in the paper where the American Legion protests against the release of Eugene V. Debs. Did not the people of America elect President Harding to office? Did he not pick his cabinet? I believe we have an attorney general now. I believe these men are able to pass on the Debs case, and if not it is time to put some one else there. It seems to me the American Legion is butting into everybody's business but their own. If they would give a little more of their time to the soldiers who belong to their order that need help, then they would be doing something.
E. M. JEFFERY.

THROWING ANOTHER BRICK.

Chicago, April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Brickmaker of Riverdale seemed to be somewhat sarcastic in wanting to know why the Calumet brick plant at Blue Island was reconstructed and not placed in operation, and apparently doubts that common brick can be manufactured and placed on the market at a profit at $10.

Yes, Mr. Brickmaker, I was the engineer who assisted the Calumet Brick company to reconstruct their plant. I have erected plants which have been continuously operating at a good profit through the period of building depression. If you are familiar with the reconstruction of the Calumet Brick company plant, then you know it was completed near the first part of September, and if you are familiar with production in Chicago, you know that all plants except one, the Alex. Burke & Sons plant, are in the combine, operating under the rules and regulations of the unadvertised Chicago Common Brick Manufacturers' association, which holds regular meetings and who raised the price of brick on a falling market from $7.50 to $16 per thousand. You certainly know that when this particular plant was completed, Chicago was overstocked with brick, hence could not be operated. If the Calumet Brick company was independent, and if they were financially able to buck the combine, they could take the advantage which you so ably point out, but under the circumstances this is impossible.

The manufacturers argue that labor is the cause for the high price of brick. The manufacturers are putting it all over the union and the public simply because the union fails to fight an open battle. Just why do the officers of the union work so closely with the manufacturers and adopt silent methods regarding the actual cost of manufacturing brick at a time when the brickmakers and the manufacturers are accused by the public of preventing the erection of economic building?

THE IRATE RESTAURATEUR.

Chicago, March 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As an American citizen and a resident of the city of Chicago I wish to take exception to the remarks of Messrs. Poole and Adamowski as contained in the front page of THE TRIBUNE of March 31, 1921, regarding the restaurant business.

In view of the fact that an overwhelming majority of the restaurant owners of Chicago are of Greek descent, these remarks cannot be construed otherwise than as directed at them.

The restaurant business is operated at a very small margin of profit, considering the capital involved, the long hours, the character of the work and the depreciation.

The writer had the pleasure of helping build the railroads of the United States at $1.10 per day and had the additional pleasure of helping the United States win the war as a member of the A. E. F. Citizenship does not necessarily qualify one to operate a restaurant, and what is more, does not qualify any one for any profession whatever.

In a word, I wish to go on record as saying that the insinuations above referred to of our food expert and honorable alderman are un-American and detrimental to the spirit of good will and coöperation so indispensable to American unity and welfare.

AN ARTIST'S VIEW OF THE OLD MUSEUM.

Chicago, April 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Many of us have been happily thrilled by the publication of Mr. Goodhue's design for the new chapel of the University of Chicago. That a feature of such monumental beauty should be added to our city is indeed a reason for general rejoicing, but in our new enthusiasm let us not forget more familiar treasures from the past. Within a few blocks from the university is a souvenir of the most exalted vision of loveliness that the west has ever known; a building which fitly crowned the "Dream City of the Lake." It was of the Columbian Art Palace in Jackson park—later the Field museum—that Augustus Saint Gaudens exclaimed: "In my judgment it is the best thing done since the Parthenon." It is completely practicable to save this masterpiece for the use and enjoyment of generations to come. If we do not do so we shall proclaim ourselves barbarians, like those who turned the Roman Forum into a stone quarry.
LORADO TAFT.

LET THE OSTRICH SUPPLANT THE EAGLE.

Grinnell, Ia., April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Are you incapable of realizing what a deplorable policy you are pursuing in arousing the hostility of the American people toward Japan? Leaving aside the petty insults which you direct against a people who have made mighty progress, I should think you would realize the necessity of demonstrating to the people of the United States that there are no fundamental causes for friction between Japan and this country. Most of the differences which exist between the two nations may be adjudicated through the usual channels of diplomacy. The reasons which actuate you to impugn the statesmen of Japan with sinister motives against the United States while you imply that our own leaders and newspapers are filled with only the holiest of motives is a form of intellectual pleasantry which the editor of THE TRIBUNE alone is able to enjoy.

Is it not about time that the press of this country tried to instill into the American people the necessity of adopting an attitude of good will towards the nations of the earth instead of saturating their minds with the idea that Japan, Mexico, and Great Britain with the South American nations included for good measure are only waiting for a favorable time to wipe us off the earth? Such tactics are really childish.

AMONG the literary axioms which readers are wont to forget when they take up a new book is the one about an autobiography—to wit: "No autobiography will be what you expect it to be." With that certainty in his mind, the reader will accept the gift of the gods—for a good autobiography is that—and will not always be asking for duck and green peas when broad beans and bacon are offered. An autobiography wouldn't be worth a kopek (at the present rate of exchange) if it were all glimmer and light, if it were the same sort of brilliantly charted analysis that a really good novel is. It wouldn't be fact then, it would be fancy.

Well—I've just finished what is to me a perfectly charming autobiography, but which isn't at all what any of us would expect from E. F. Benson. "Our Family Affairs," it is called. With that title, I, for one, expected to have seriously reconstructed for me the childhood and youth of all of the famous Bensons. I expected to relive the days of Robert Hugh's passionately religious young manhood, of Arthur Christopher's first gropings toward literature. I expected to read of all the famous people who must have been part of the family affairs of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Instead, I found one of the most wholly delightful records of a boy's boyhood and youth that I have ever read. All the charm of David Blaize is in it (and was there ever more a boy's boy than David?). ¶ I found also the most glowing, understanding, beautiful tribute to motherhood that has ever been written—Barrie's "Margaret Ogilvie" not excepted.

E. F. Benson, "Fred," as his mother called him, has made of her the most human mother in history, who was called by Mr. Gladstone "the cleverest woman in Europe." With what pride does he say, "And did ever any mother at the age of 40 run so violently in playing that strenuous game called 'Three knights a-riding' that she broke a sinew in her leg? Mine did." His father, severe and pious, lost that childish companionship and affection, though he won a later love, never, however, comparable to the devotion which the children felt for their mother.

"Our Family Affairs" might almost be a text book to parents. But I am injecting into the book a moral tone which it is joyfully without. In all of his extremely deft novels, E. F. Benson has never written a story more vivid and more charming than this story of the first twenty-nine years of his life. His brother, Hugh—who, after their father's death, took orders in the Church of Rome—said of "Dodo," E. F. Benson's first novel, which has always been supposed to be a fictionization of the youthful Margot Asquith, "It's very wo-wo-wo-worldly." "Our Family Affairs" is very worldly, too; delightfully worldly, and therefore delightfully human.

It is not rare nowadays to hear the question, "Must we fight Japan?" "The Japanese menace" has come to be a phrase in popular conversation instead of a political catchword or a caption for a press story. Even so far inland as Chicago the worry over the California land question is being felt. Men, in no wise alarmists, are talking of it at their clubs. Women who have spent more than a few tourist hours in California have returned with a new topic of conversation. Wallace Irwin's "The Seed of the Sun," a novel with the menace of the Japanese as its theme, is discussed almost as an economic treatise.

Walter B. Pitkin, associate professor of philosophy at Columbia university, has been interested in the Japanese-American crisis for many years. Three years ago he began "reading up" on it seriously. Everything he found in print was tinged with pro or anti propaganda. So he set out to gather first hand material.

The result of that garnering is "Must We Fight Japan?" It is a tome of facts and intelligent interpretation. He isn't certain that we won't have to, but he offers a few suggestions which might help to prevent a war and force the two countries to find a basis of agreement.

"Women in the Life of Balzac," by Juanita Helm Floyd, receives the fulsome praise of Princess Radziwill, the niece of Mme. Hanska, Balzac's most permanent love and finally his wife. It is the first book which has not misinterpreted that relationship, Princess Radziwill declares, the first book which has thrown the light of fact on the tapestry which has been woven of the lies about Balzac.

It is a student's book, first of all, with an amazingly complete bibliography. It is written with a scholar's passion for digging about the roots of things until the source has been found. It is, unfortunately, also written with the average scholar's lack of style. As a piece of literary work per se it is completely negligible. As a piece of work about a literary matter it is painstaking and—in its revelations—brilliant.

Miss Floyd has not revivified the women in Balzac's life. She has not made them glow with that warmth of color which must have fascinated Balzac. In other words, we are not intrigued by them, and they seem—as do the loves and friends of most great men—incidental facts and not contributory causes. It takes a genius to feel the sheer genius for life that dwells in some woman whose friendship or love for some great man was her only book or her only poem or her only picture. The woman who writes her poem in the fuller creative powers of a great man is in herself creating, and must have had the aura of genius about her. And yet it is a rare biographer or a rare critic who sees her as an artist.

To any one interested in Balzac this book is indispensable. To such casualists as have been satisfied with one reading of one novel—probably "Pere Goriot"—this book will lure into reading the entire Comedie Humaine to see how Balzac not only lived his romances but wrote them.

Then there's always Harry Leon Wilson. While other performers at the literary circus are swallowing swords or eating fire or cutting down trees in seventeen minutes and thirteen seconds or snaking their pink tighted legs around a pole at the tent top or merely selling popcorn and peanuts or ballyhooing for some pet side show theory, he is the gentleman in the classic costume who drives the chariot that always wins, the cowboy who yip-yips the least, but ropes the most. He is the circus pillar who, man and boy these twenty years, has watched the crowds, ever the same age, who knows what they want and gives it to 'em, and yet who, somehow, sees the tawdriness and gaudy gayety, and takes what joy he may in the honest fooling of the crowd. He's a great man is Harry Leon Wilson, a man who will be appreciated by his peers when they meet at the cosmic circus, and honored for the applause which he won from his inferiors in the mortal big tent. All of which is preliminary to the news that he has a new book, "The Wrong Twin," whose plot I won't spoil for you by drawing a blue print of it with X marking the spot where surprise was found dead.

Winwood Reade's "The Martyrdom of Man" caused a furore when it appeared in England in 1872. It was declared to be atheistical (which was the most complete damning anything could receive at that time), and Mr. Reade was never spoken of in connection with his uncle, the famous Charles Reade, without an apology. It is an introduction to universal history, a brilliant piece of work, and one which has grown into the place which it was destined to fill. It was much too forethoughtful for the 1870s.

Many of Mr. Reade's ideas, which seemed subversive then, have come to be accepted now. H. G. Wells acknowledges his indebtedness to it in his "Outline of History," and an extent to which it inspired him. Sir Harry Johnston—the "Gay-Dombeys" and "Mrs. Warren's Daughter" man, likewise the famous African explorer—once said that it ought to be put into the hands of every young person in the English speaking countries at the age of 21. For years it was out of print in this country.

Just a few months ago it was reprinted by E. P. Dutton, and now it is one of those books which achieve a steady sale which makes an ordinary "best seller" shrivel up with envy. It is a stupendous book, one of the most amazing examples of multum in parvo that has ever been done, and withal so fascinating as to clothe history with all of the alluring finery of the novel.

"The Lost Girl" is D. H. Lawrence's latest novel—the first for some time which has not suffered from the interdiction of the Comstocks. It has conquered England wholly. Its effect on America will be a phenomenon worth watching. Word has got about that D. H. Lawrence writes books which are always banned.

In "The Lost Girl" he has written the story of a girl grown to womanhood in suppression and inhibition, with a struggle against her steel-binding wrappings, furtive longings for freedom, and a final complete fulfillment of her fate, to find herself "lost," a strange flower in a foreign soil. It is as moral as "Madame Bovary" or "Tess." It is a delicately traced pattern of psyches and neuroses. It is a scientific criticism of life. If all science is immoral, all psychology, all life, "The Lost Girl" is.

It is a fascinating thing to watch the mercury of a reading public when it is placed in the super-heated atmosphere of a new book by a man who has a reputation like D. H. Lawrence's.

"The Feast of Lanterns" is another thrilling Chinese story by Louise Jordan Miln, whose "Mr. Wu" trailed its horror through many a literary orgiac. "The Fur Trade in America" is a large and comprehensive book on the subject by Agnes C. Laut, who has won her fame through her travel books. The knowledge contained in this volume could set up anyone in the fur business. It certainly educates the ordinary fur buyer, meaning the woman who has a fur coat now and then and a few costly sables for the heated season, meaning every one from Nellie the beautiful cloak model to Mrs. Corner Groceryman. It really is a guide, philosopher, and friend in the matter of fur buying.

Lewis R. Freeman is a man known well by those who read books of travel. His "The Tracks of the Trades" was one of the most popular literary cruises among the South seas. The photographs which embellished the limited edition of Rudyard Kipling's "The Feet of the Young Men" were taken by him. He was, if I mistake not, the official photographer of the most famous of the Roosevelt wild game hunts. He has traveled over the seven seas, explored the seven lands. And now he has translated his experiences into a novel called "Hell's Hatches"—a title so alluring that it is strange it has never been used before. It is the story of a cruise in the South seas, of plots, of gun play, of—everything that might be expected to dwell in Hell's Hatches. A few women feel a little indelicate about asking for it by name, but men annex it on sight—and sound.

"Devil Stories" is an anthology of stories about our friend, Mr. Satan, edited by Maximilian J. Rudwin. It is to be the first of a series of books on devil lore, which will include Devil Plays, Devil Essays, Devil Legends, The Book of Lady Lilith, An Anthology of Satanic Verse, and a Bibliographia Diabolica. Mr. Rudwin has chosen stories from all languages and all periods from the medieval tale of "The Devil in a Nunnery" to John Masefield's "The Devil and the Old Man." He does not include that fascinating story from Max Beerbohm's "Seven Men."

AT the SIGN of the WORLD'S END

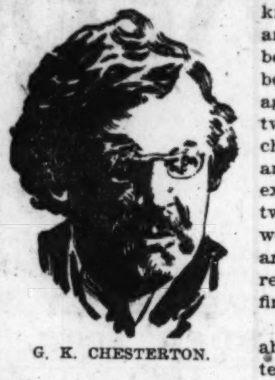
by G. K. Chesterton

THE PLAIN MAN AND THE PIPE OF PEACE.

(Copyright: 1921: By the Chicago Tribune)

ANY person of common sense judges a thing by whether it is the thing he wants, not by whether it is old or new, or (as is most probable) partly old and partly new. The only vital point for common sense is that the man wants something.

Pending the progressive prohibition of tobacco, I will suppose for the sake of argument that he wants a smoke. He may have in his mind some ideal pattern of a pipe which he really thinks would be an improvement on the existing pipes, and which he is taking practical steps to patent. But he knows that he will require tobacco of some sort and fire in some form. And he is not troubled because fire is a thing of prehistoric antiquity, because fire was a familiar spirit among the savages of the stone age, and was produced by rubbing two sticks together. At least so I was told in my childhood, but I have accepted this truth through antiquated tradition and not through progressive experiment. I fear my own experiment with the two sticks would not be very progressive. It would be marked by patience rather than progress; and at the end of a day's rubbing I might take refuge in the mystical belief that Prometheus stole fire from heaven.



G. K. CHESTERTON.

Neither would the smoker trouble his head about the date of the introduction of tobacco, or attempt to separate the sanity from the insanity in rationalistic rage of the Renascence; when Raleigh founded the state of Virginia only a few decades before the Pilgrim Fathers discovered America. The smoker would not listen to an idealist who should rebuke him for encouraging Elizabethan imperialism and the extravagant culture of colonial products. He would not pay any attention to a pacifist who should say: "Smoke your pipe of peace, but bury the firebrand along with the hatchet. Do not stain the peace-pipe with the devouring flame which has wasted so many lands in the wild hell of war." The common sense smoker would pay no attention to all this discussion about the dates of the different elements in his enjoyment; he would know that what he wanted was a smoke, and that all these things, old and new, were essential to a smoke.

The Fortress of the Private Citizen.

IT is exactly the same, of course, with moral and political ideals. Suppose I am so eccentric as to want a democracy, as the smoker wants a smoke. Suppose I am so insane that I really do believe in common sense. Suppose I believe that the common sense of the common people is, after all, the best test of rule that human imperfection permits, and that the nearer the normal man gets to the organ of government the better. And suppose I do desire an entirely new sort of plebiscite or popular vote, as the other man desires a new sort of pipe. In that case I do pray for a perfect republic of the future as he does for the pipe of the future; I do desire an ideal pipe of peace like that given by the Great Spirit in the red Indian legend.

But suppose I also think, as I do think, that the private citizen will never have that public power unless the private citizen has private property; unless he lives in a fortress of his own land or savings, a fortress in which he can stand a siege from aristocrats or bureaucrats. That idea of small property has existed approximately but imperfectly in the past; it might exist much more perfectly in the future.

And suppose I think, as I do think, that there will be no security for that small fortress unless it is a family fortress, flying something like a family flag; as in the peasant countries, where the farm descends from father to son like a coat-of-arms. That institution of the family has been more powerful in the past, but in some vague and general way it is supposed to exist now.

Finally, suppose I think, as I do think, that this individual domestic life can only preserve this sort of private patriotism when it is protected by religion, such as was present in patron saints or in household gods. That religion has certainly been far more powerful in the past than it is in the present; but that does not alter the fact that it is necessary for this particular plan for the future.

All these things hang together; and he who desires any of them is logically justified in desiring all of them. I can quite understand and respect the attitude of a person who denounces and detests all of them. I can understand the man who says that my democracy is all nonsense because it is democratic; the man who says that the popular rule, like the patent pipe, will end in smoke. But I have no patience with the appalling lack of common sense in the person who complains of my using old things as well as new things to achieve the only thing I want.

The Merely Conservative and the Merely Progressive.

I ALLOW for the anti-tobacco crank, but not for the man who tells me to smoke tobacco without lighting it; because fire has figured at so many prehistoric feasts or burned before so many superstitious shrines. The various parts of my ideal obviously fit into each other; they are all parts of one picture, whether or no we like the picture. It is simply senseless to resolve that unity into its ingredients, and approve them according to whether they appeared at one date or another. It is as if a man said that a water color landscape must be a battlefield because the artist had used both Prussian blue and French ultramarine; or that a sketch must be a picture of a half-breed because it was drawn in Chinese white and India ink.

The matter for all sane men to decide is whether they want a certain type of society or not; but it is folly for them to refuse what they want because parts of it have already been obtained by other people. Now across all this common sense cuts the disastrous division between the merely conservative and the merely progressive; or, as in that orgy of pedantry, the Common Sense Leader, between the Paleozoic and the Mesozoic. As long as industrial intellectualism is nag-ridden and hypnotized by that false antithesis, so long it will go on getting things it does not want, and getting tired of them because it has got them. It will always fall short of the common sense of many a poor farmer, who will use an old tradition because it is true and a new tool because it is useful.

Now the barbaric twilight of all the Paleozoic and Mesozoic nonsense darkens the clean and level daylight in which things are judged equally as good or evil. It introduces an element of mere restlessness, so that even scientific facts are accepted not as facts but merely as fashions. Because it was well to turn from a fish to a four footed creature (if it was) it would be just as well to turn into a fish again, and perhaps into a very queer fish indeed.

There are more fish in the sea than ever came out of it, and possibly some that are as well left in it. And if a certain enterprise was shown by the fish that crawled on to the land, their movements were cautious and conservative compared with the hustling and hopeful energy of the swine who rushed into the sea.

Next week Mr. Chesterton will write about "Dollars and Day-dreams."

LELAND-BUILT LINCOLN

Lincoln Motor Co.
Detroit, Mich.

Gentlemen:—

I have owned several cars, all of them fine. I drove these cars nearly 300,000 miles and began to think I knew something about automobiles. When the Lincoln came out I did not need a new car but my sixteen-year-old son persuaded me to take a ride. After driving the Lincoln I told your distributor I should like to see the car more fully demonstrated. His salesman took me for a ride varying from three to seventy-six miles an hour. I went over the car inch by inch. It was so good that in three days I was the possessor of a Lincoln.

This car has been driven by me and my children 3,700 miles. It has so many good features that I could write a long letter describing them.

It is the easiest-riding, strongest, most dependable automobile I have ever ridden in, and it gives me great satisfaction to tell you so. No money could buy this testimonial.

Very sincerely,

NO BUDGET LAW UNTIL LEADERS REACH ARMISTICE

Republicans Can't Agree on Bureau's Head.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Enactment of budget legislation will not be accomplished until a controversy between Republican leaders of the senate and house is settled.

So much became apparent today when Representative Good of Iowa, chairman of the house budget committee, announced that he would reintroduce the original house bill instead of the measure as agreed to in conference and as vetoed by former President Wilson.

May Have Harding Support.

Representatives Good, Madden, and Mondell declared they favored this bill after they had separately conferred with President Harding. While none ventured to claim the support of the president, intimation was given that there was reason to believe Mr. Harding would not include in his message to congress Tuesday a specific request that the bill in its final form be passed.

By lining up for the original house bill Representatives Good, Madden, and Mondell took issue with Senator McCormick of Illinois, who was chairman of the special budget committee of the senate.

President or Treasury?

The central point of the controversy between the Republican and house leaders is the question whether the budget bureau should be located in the office of the president or under the secretary of the treasury. The Good bill, as passed by the house, created a budget bureau in the office of the president with the director of the bureau responsible directly to the president.

Conferees of the senate and house deadlocked over the proposition for several weeks, but finally agreed upon a compromise bill providing that the secretary of the treasury should be director of the budget bureau, but that an assistant director of the bureau with broad powers should be appointed by the president.

RATHBONE GIVES APPOMATTOX DAY MESSAGE TO U. S.

HENRY R. RATHBONE.

At a luncheon in commemoration of Appomattox day arranged by the American Unity club of Chicago in the cameo room of the Morrison hotel, Henry R. Rathbone, whose father was in the theater box with Abraham Lincoln when the latter was shot, said:

"Appomattox day should have a message for the nations of the world at the present hour. It should teach and inspire them to adopt a policy of reconciliation. No peace can be lasting which is not founded on justice. Wherever the treaty of Versailles has been shown to be unjust it should be revised and in this movement America should be the leader."

Mr. Rathbone urged that the nation's war debts be refunded, the time of payment of the Liberty bonds extended, and the bonds kept at par. Time of payment for the debts of the allies to the United States should be extended and a bond issue arranged for, Mr. Rathbone said.

DEAD MAN IDENTIFIED.

The man who dropped dead on a Lake street car Friday was identified yesterday as Clarence Tinchy, 1413 North Western avenue, by his brother, A. J. Tinchy, 3007 South Union avenue.

FOR RENT—1 R. R. ADMINISTRATION —APPLY TO U. S.

Old War Bureau Costly to Government.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—The senate interstate commerce committee will endeavor next week to work out a plan to abolish the railroad administration and save the government the large outlay of money required for the maintenance of this bureau.

The functions of the railroad administration are confined now solely to the liquidation of claims growing out of the government operation of the railroads during the war. A large and expensive bureau is maintained. Senators believe these functions can be transferred, probably to the auditor of the treasury department or the Court of Claims.

Harding Sees Sheppard.

President Harding today continued his inquiry into the railroad financial situation. His only conferee on the subject was L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, who advised strongly against any general reduction of wages. Mr. Sheppard said abrogation of present wage contracts would be certain to work hardships and still further confuse the transportation problem.

Three vacancies on the United States labor board which will occur April 15 are giving the president serious concern. Many names have been suggested, but the list, it is said, has been narrowed down to half a dozen.

Park May Be Reappointed.

W. L. Park of Chicago, one of those whose terms expire, will probably be reappointed. He represents the railway managers' group and is understood to have been given general indorsement.

A. J. Forrester, representing the labor group on the board, is being strongly urged for reappointment, although a number of others, including J. G. Luhrsen of Chicago, are understood to be still in the running.

Appointment of a member to represent the general public is calling for wide speculation. Henry T. Hunt of Cincinnati, the incumbent, is a Democrat, and it is believed a Republican will succeed him. Wesley W. Hill of Philadelphia is being considered.

Czarnecki Says Bolshevism Has Made Europe Destitute

Bolshevism is largely responsible for the destitute condition of millions in Europe, Anthony Czarnecki, who recently returned from an overseas tour, told members of the Irish Fellowship club yesterday at a noon luncheon in the Hotel La Salle.

"We have no cause for real fear of bolshevism in this country," he said, "because it clashes with the ideals of our people."

Greater Production Through Conservation of Power

Free Ask any central power station, electrical engineer or contractor for Habirshaw's new illustrated booklet "Industrial Electricity," on the uses and economies of electricity in industry

IDLE shafting, individual transmission belts, long steam lines, shop accidents—these are typical sources of industrial waste which are disappearing through the adoption of electrical power transmission. Day after day, as men discover more and more about its adaptability, electricity assumes an ever-increasing share of the burden of moving the industry and commerce of the world—curbing the wastes of old-fashioned methods, cutting operating costs, and increasing plant production.

Ever since electricity became an industrial agent, it has been decreasing in cost, until now, through volume production of the essential materials, it is well within the reach of every manufacturer. Consider, for instance, how much has been done toward this end by Habirshaw insulated wire and cable. Though consistently maintaining the quality that has made it the recognized standard since the earliest days of the industry, it is now produced in millions of feet each month. This fact and the nation-wide merchandising organization of the Western Electric Company, distributors of dependable materials and apparatus, bring Habirshaw to every active market in the United States at minimum cost to the consumer.

In the electrification of industry, now made possible as never before, by the strategic location of hundreds of central power stations, manufacturers find it of the greatest advantage to confer with technical experts. The co-operation of qualified electrical engineers and contractors is essential in bringing plans and installations to an efficient conclusion.

Standardized quality materials and apparatus such as are presented by Habirshaw and Western Electric, installed under the supervision of competent electrical engineers and contractors, constitute the final factor of electrical efficiency.

ICE COST JUMPS 10C PER 100; MILD WINTER BLAMED

Consumers Issues Notice of Boost.

The price of retail ice jumps from 50 to 60 cents a hundred pounds this morning. This was announced yesterday by the Consumers company, which controls 60 per cent of the Chicago output. Numbers of smaller concerns will also boost the price. An almost total failure of the natural ice crop last winter is given as the reason. It is said there is some danger of an ice famine this summer.

Walter J. Malatesta, ice sales manager for the Consumers' company, said: "During the past nine years the average natural ice harvest of this company has been approximately 868,000 tons a year. This year we cut from our own lakes only 62,468 tons. Deducting from this house, transit and wagon shrinkage, there will be left only 36,481 net tons.

10 Cents Increase to Families.

"Rates on family ice have been advanced from 50 cents a hundred pounds to 60 cents. Deliveries to commercial trade go from 30 and 35 cents to 35 and 50 cents.

"The average family uses about one and one-half tons of ice a year. To these this advance means an additional expense of $3 a year, or 25 cents a month.

"We have had to meet this year conditions never before known. To meet the midsummer demand we are right now for the first time in our history manufacturing ice in Chicago factories and shipping it to our Lake Calumet storage house, so there may be ice when the heat comes down on the city."

Smaller Dealer to Boost, Too.

Just how many of the large smaller dealers will follow in the price boost is not definitely known. It is believed, however, that all the twenty-eight concerns which hold memberships in the Chicago District Ice association will make the boost.

Several fights over prices between the "independents" and members of the association have been staged during the last few years. The "independents" always alleged the association was driving them out of business. It was reported that another such a battle is brewing for this summer.

NEW PUSSYFOOT IN INDIA ROUTS OLD DEMON RUM

Ghandi, Idol of Masses, Causes England Woe.

BY HENRY MERCER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CALCUTTA, March 20.—The seed of self-determination is beginning to show its roots in India, and throughout the greatest of the dependent nations of the world the working classes are beginning to gather together to talk of freedom in their demands for better wages and living conditions.

The "noncoöperation" movement, which at first had such hard going, is now causing considerable alarm among Europeans as its teachings stir up India's millions.

Ghandi's Big Following.

Mr. Ghandi, the originator of the movement, has an immense following, and to his supporters his word is law. As an example of his influence might be cited his fight against the liquor habit among the coolies employed in the Calcutta jute mills. At one time [illegible] rupees a day was spent on drink, but after a "pussyfoot" campaign by Ghandi the amount was reduced to 1,000 rupees daily.

Furthermore, the wine sales in Calcutta show a decrease of 50 per cent. So enthusiastic are the converts that if they catch any one of their number drinking they tie garlands of old shoes around his neck, making him the laughing stock of the community.

The strike of the street railway employes in Calcutta and Madras has not yet been settled. A few cars are being run by volunteers, chiefly Anglo-Indians. The strikers are attempting to intimidate the volunteer car crews, and it is feared the already insufficient service may grow even worse.

Rioting in Lucknow.

At Lucknow there is a strike among the passenger and freight car repairers employed in the railway shops there. The strikers have attempted to get other railwaymen to quit work, but so far have not been successful. There has been some rioting.

There is an increasing amount of unemployment throughout India which is adding to the general unrest. On account of the shortage of freight cars three of the largest jute plants in Calcutta were forced to close down, [illegible] men being thrown out of work. It is feared other mills may have to close also.

Releases 'Red' Grand Jury Called Two Years Ago

Chief Justice McDonald yesterday discharged the "red" grand jury which was called two years ago to handle cases against radicals. The jurors had done no work for the last year, but were held in readiness. "I want to say you did a most commendable piece of work," Judge McDonald told the men.

Until then he will continue to act as a sergeant of city police. He has been a member of the city police department for thirty-one years. For several years he was at central station. Recently he was transferred to Cragin. His home is at 1333 Long avenue. He has two sons, one a recent graduate of the United States Naval academy, the other engaged in the oil business.

NEW HEIGHTS REACHED BY A GOOD NAME

In numbers and in monetary value, the production of Dodge Brothers cars during the twelve months recently ended, was, with a single exception, without parallel.

There is a deep and a special significance in this sales record.

Because they did not seek it in the ordinary way, it is all the more impressive that sales precedence should have been conferred upon their product.

The point of this achievement is that from the day the business was founded, Dodge Brothers never once laid stress on mere volume of production.

They never strove to surpass in the quantity of cars produced during any given period.

Their thought lay deeper than that. It was a deliberate thought, which looked toward the ultimate, not the immediate.

Their implicit conviction was that the one thing with which they should concern themselves was the true value of the cars they manufactured.

Given that good value, they were assured that greater and greater sales must of necessity follow.

They had faith, in other words, in the discernment of the average man and woman of America and of the world.

They were satisfied that as the value of Dodge Brothers car revealed itself, appreciation, admiration and larger volume would automatically follow.

They visualized this great good will, ever growing and continuing to grow, as long as motor cars should go forth bearing their name.

They never permitted themselves or their associates to lose sight of this great principle in which they believed so thoroughly.

Their life work had taught them that there was no other sound way in which to build.

The lesson of it, the logic of it, is too plain, too clear and too complimentary to Dodge Brothers to require or permit extended comment.

Suffice it to say, that Dodge Brothers are more deeply appreciative than ever of the confidence it demonstrates on the part of the buying public.

Suffice it to say that this institution will never deviate by so much as a hair's breadth from the manufacturing principles which have brought about this unique and splendid tribute from the American people.

"This Great Book in Such Compact Form Is Simply Superb!"

INDIA PAPER MAKES THE

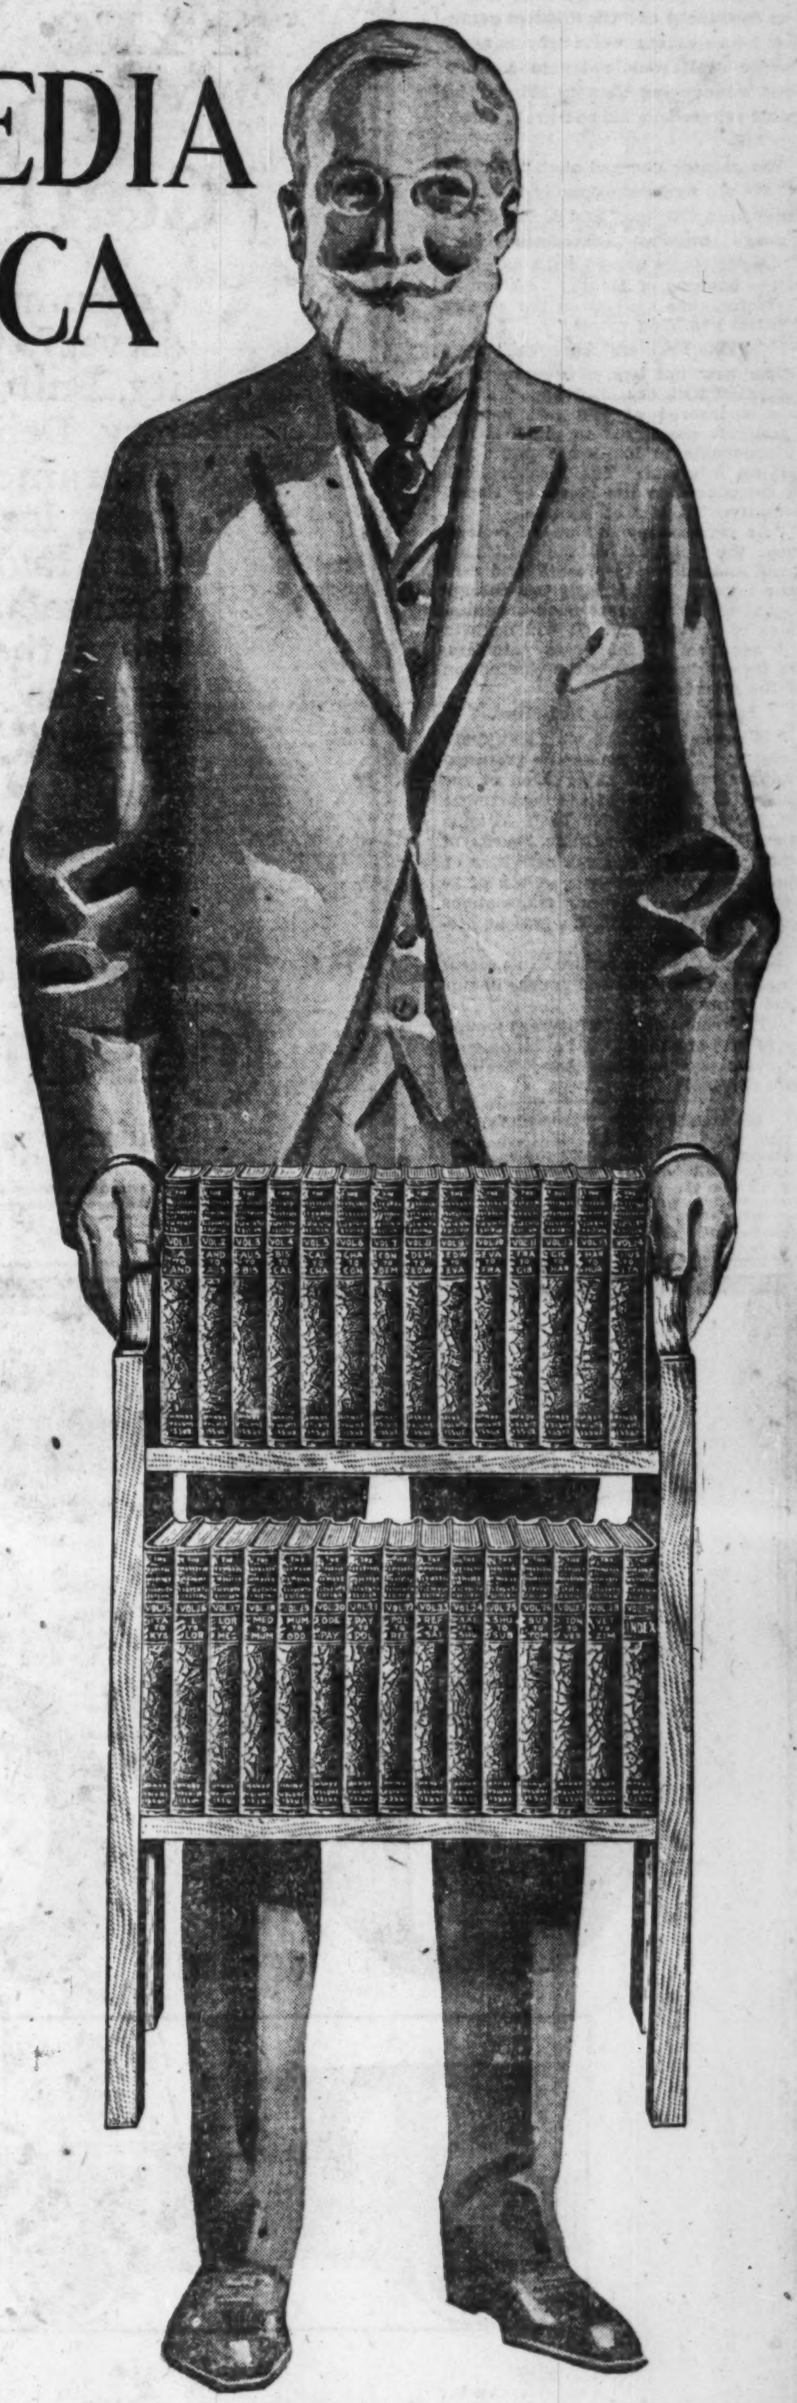
so light in weight that you can easily lift it and move it about—and yet there are 44,000,000 words, 30,000 pages, 15,000 illustrations and maps in it.



ANYTHING that we might say as to the advantages of the Britannica printed on India paper could not be put stronger and more convincingly than in this paragraph

By a
Big City Merchant

"I bought the Britannica to use. I expect to get out of it in dollars many more times than I paid for it. I know what a wonderful book it is for anyone who uses it. India paper makes it so light, so convenient, so inviting, that one can't fail to read it frequently. You say the Britannica printed on India paper is 'five times more valuable' than on ordinary book paper. I should say 'a hundred times more valuable.' This is based on my own experience.

"I owned a set of the old Britannica on heavy paper, but I didn't read in it four times a year. It was too heavy; I never had much inclination to look up anything in those big, bulky books.

"I've had the new Britannica, printed on the delightful India paper, less than six months. I use it CONSTANTLY, looking up whatever I want to know, sometimes reading as many as four and five articles a night."

This experience is repeated over and over in the case of owners of the Britannica, for of the 225,000 sets already sold more than 200,000 were India paper sets. The use of this wonderful linenlike paper for printing the world's most interesting and most comprehensive book of knowledge was inspired by the thought that it would increase the handiness of the Britannica—hence, increase its real value to those who possess it.

You, no doubt, know what a remarkable work the Britannica is—an inexhaustible fund of facts and information. Its highest practical value to you or anyone else depends, of course, upon its actual, frequent use.

YOU WANT THIS MARVELOUS WORK—the most complete and authoritative that ever came from the printing press, and you ought to have it on genuine India paper. 200,000 people have purchased sets printed on this delightful, thin but opaque India paper, which has made the Encyclopaedia Britannica infinitely more usable, because the exquisite volumes are no larger or heavier than your magazine. India paper has literally been the means of converting the great wealth of information in the Britannica into a usable, get-at-able form. The sets of the popular Handy Volume issue are offered at unusually low and attractive prices and on very easy terms of payment. We believe the prices of the Britannica are within the reach of everybody.

What the Britannica Will Do for You

Think of the Britannica as an investment, and consider whether you know any other way of investing the same amount of money, or ten times the amount, that will yield such large returns in profit and pleasure.

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education, whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study.

It will give you the answer to the thousand and one questions prompted by the morning paper, lectures, sermons and books. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

CAPPER BRANDS BOARD OF TRADE GAMING RESORT

Prepares to Reintroduce Grain Bill.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—The Chicago Board of Trade was denounced as "the greatest gambling house in the world" by Senator Capper of Kansas, today in a statement announcing that on Monday he would reintroduce his anti-grain gambling bill.

The senator charged that "$15,000,000,000 are wagered annually in future dealings in Chicago," and declared that Chicago brokers' commissions are "three times as great as the earnings of the bankers of Monte Carlo, which heretofore has ranked as the world's greatest gambling resort."

"Has Farmers' Approval."

The new bill has new features as compared with the bill which the senator sponsored at the last session. These are calculated to make it less objectionable to legitimate grain and milling interests. The measure will be introduced in the house by Representative Tincher of Kansas.

"As revised, my bill will, I believe, meet the approval of the legitimate grain and milling interests," said Senator Capper. "It already has the approval of all the great farm organizations of the country. It will not win the approval of the grain gamblers, for its chief purpose is the elimination of the gambler.

Legitimate Trade Not Hurt.

"It doesn't interfere with legitimate hedging. The bill places the grain exchanges under the supervision of the bureau of markets of the department of agriculture, which will confine speculation to the regular boards of trade. This will end the activities of the private wire houses. A tax of 20 per cent on all gambling transactions will be imposed. This tax will be prohibitive."

Senator Capper promised to present some startling facts and figures in support of his bill.

"The transactions in futures amounted to fifty-one times the actual amount of grain produced last year," the senator declared.

IRISH MEETINGS WEDNESDAY.

Finley Bell, whose great grandmother came to America with Lafayette, will be the principal speaker.

Cregier's Widow Settles Eastland Claim for $1,200

An echo of the Eastland disaster in 1915 was heard in the Municipal court yesterday when Attorney Frank J. Hogan appeared before Judge Harry M. Fisher and asked for a dismissal of the $3,800 damage suit brought against former City Custodian Dewitt C. Cregier by Joseph Putz, for the loss of jewels worn by Mrs. Putz, who was drowned. When her body was found the jewels were turned over to Creiger and they were lost. Cregier is dead, but his widow insisted on settling the claim, and was granted permission by the court. She settled for $1,200.

School Pupils to Help Move Branch Library

Pupils of the Stewart school, 4525 Kenmore avenue, will join with the Kiwanis club tomorrow at 10 a. m. to help move the Sheridan Park branch of the public library from 4734 North Racine avenue to 4869 Broadway. The branch was destined to be closed because of lack of funds and the fact the library board could not afford to pay the new rental demanded. The Kiwanis club, headed by J. F. Cornelius, raised $5,000 to guarantee the operation of the branch for another year and then found a new place for it.

Friends Will Give Benefit for Karl Gardner, Actor

They used to sit in the gallery of the old Olympic theater and listen open mouthed to the songs, "Little Bunch of Blossoms" and "Apple Lilacs," as Karl Gardner sang them. Then Karl Gardner dropped from sight. But yesterday when he left the American hospital they, including Charles A. Comiskey, Robert M. Sweitzer, Harry Ridings, Harry Powers, and others, were there to greet him. On May 8 the old actor—he's 73—will sing the old melodies again. Cohan's Grand Opera house has been rented for the benefit.

Grant Six

It has power—
The Grant Six motor develops 35-40 horse-power. It is lively, smooth-running and so flexible that there is almost no gear shifting necessary even in heavy traffic.

It has light weight—
The sedan weighs 2975 pounds ready for the road—only 275 pounds more than the Grant Six touring car.

It has roominess—
With a wheelbase of 116 inches, Grant Six bodies provide a length and roominess that permit even the tallest persons to sit in utmost comfort. The rear cushion in the sedan is 47 inches wide, with 46½ inches between it and the front seat. The coupe body is sufficiently roomy to allow the fourth or auxiliary seat to face forward.

It has style—
You won't find, at any price, a better looking sedan or coupe than the improved Grant Six. Outwardly they have unmistakably stylish lines and splendid finish. And the interiors in genuine mohair velvet are examples of refined luxury.

It has economy—
Grant Six closed cars give generous service, but are not extravagant in cost. Owners average about 20 miles per gallon of gas; 8,000 to 10,000 miles on tires—and there are almost no repair bills under ordinary usage.

It has comfort—
Warm in zero weather, cool as a touring car when the summer sun beats down, perfectly ventilated at all times, roomy and easy riding, Grant Six closed cars are truly comfortable.

Cord tires and snubbers are standard equipment on all cars
Closed cars have extra-size cords, sun and rain visor, adjustable steering wheel and heater equipment.

BRISCOE
The Trustworthy Car

A Direct Statement—and a Challenge

The motoring public has grown tired of the one-feature car—the car that stresses one point of satisfaction to the exclusion of all others. An unusual motor—a freak spring suspension—the winning of a race—a stunt or an unproved departure from standard design is not a safe criterion for judging a motor car.

Every feature of desirability must be taken into consideration. And on that basis we're making one definite statement.

The 1921 Briscoe Is the Best Car Built Today and we will prove it

What Combined Qualifications Make the Best Car

Let's put them down, and give each one the value to the average purchaser as shown by careful analysis—taking 100 points for all.

1. Reliability
This subdivides itself into
Engineering efficiency	6
High-grade materials	7

		100

How the Briscoe Meets These Qualifications
Take the 1921 Briscoe and measure it against perfection

1. Reliability
The 1921 Briscoe is a car light in weight, yet possessing the maximum of strength. This has meant the development of special steels; it meant the purchase of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of machinery—much of it specially designed—so that we could make all the essential parts of the car in our own great plants. It meant a careful study of motor-car design here and abroad. And it means now 100 per cent plus in sturdiness, strength and durability.

2. Power
The Briscoe has a remarkable reserve of power that carries it almost without effort wherever wheels will track. Hills that make most cars overheat and drop back to second speed are taken on high, with never a trace of motor-labor or boiling. Sand and mud have no terrors for the wonderful power-plant. You can readily prove this for yourself in a demonstration spin.

3. Economy of Operation
The Briscoe motor is world-famous for low fuel consumption. Owner's records of 20-25 miles to the gallon are the usual thing. The amount of unsprung weight has been so reduced and the car so perfectly balanced that tires seem almost everlasting. And the chassis is so simple and sturdy that few adjustments are necessary, and those are easily made.

4. Appearance and Convenience
It was Briscoe who originated the idea that beauty is not a matter of dollars and cents. Compare the appearance of the popular-priced car of a few years ago with today, and you will realize the great influence of Briscoe design-ideas. Briscoe, too, first realized that comfort was just as essential in the low-priced car as in its expensive brother. That is why, today, you can ride all day in a Briscoe over the country roads without feeling tired. And a child can operate it.

5. Price
That means not alone the actual number of dollars you pay, but what you get for each dollar. Briscoe today gives you more automobile value and more automobile satisfaction per dollar than any car on the market, bar none.

We Challenge a Comparative Test

To any car, and all cars, we make this definite challenge. Taking the points of motor-car satisfaction indicated above, we will enter the 1921 Briscoe in a series of competitive tests, with the American Automobile Association or any other impartial motoring organization as the judge. The tests are to involve a thorough try-out of every car on every point, and each car is to be given a comparative rating by the judges on each test.

And to every motor-car buyer we offer the same opportunity for the most thorough test. Come in and study the car; then let us demonstrate in any way you wish. Give us a chance to prove our statement—the 1921 Briscoe is the best car built today.

TARIFF LEADERS FIRST TO BAT AT NEXT CONGRESS

Harding and House Chiefs Confer on Program.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Details of the legislative program for the coming session were discussed with President Harding today by Republican Leader Mondell of the house and Representative Good, chairman house appropriations committee.

Following the conference, Representative Mondell said there is no reason to believe there will be any change in the program as to tariff and tax revision, notwithstanding the continued insistence of some of the Republican senators that the house ways and means committee take up tax legislation before completing the permanent tariff bill.

The Present Plans.

"My view was originally that no temporary legislation should be attempted and that the tax bill should be given precedence in the house over the permanent tariff bill," he said. "However, I believe the present program, by which three emergency bills will be taken up first, to be followed by the permanent tariff bill and then by the tax bill, will be satisfactory. I anticipate no change in this order.

"The bills from the ways and means committee will have precedence. The emergency agricultural tariff will be called up first. The anti-dumping bill and the American valuation bill will be sent in order from this committee, but it is possible that other pending measures may be sandwiched in between.

Other Steps in Program.

"The army and navy appropriation bills will be given early consideration. The budget bill and the immigration bill also will come up soon."

Representative Good reiterated that the excess profits tax, the transportation tax, the higher income surtax, and the soda water and luxury taxes can be repealed without making it necessary to provide any new forms of tax.

He urged the refunding of the floating debt into long term bonds without any attempt to pay it off from current revenues.

Change in Valuation.

Complications arising in connection with the bill providing for American valuation o fimports have caused abandonment of the program to make the measure apply to the present tariff law and to the emergency agricultural tariff bill.

The anti-dumping bill will be broadened to take care of the exchange situation in some way with respect to the present tariff law and the emergency bill. The American valuation bill will be made applicable only to the permanent tariff bill.

Under this change in program, as announced by Representative Fordney, Michigan, chairman, the house ways and means committee, consideration of the valuation bill will be postponed and taken up in connection with the permanent tariff bill.

This decision followed futile attempts to frame a bill which would have a uniform effect upon the three different tariff laws, the present Underwood law, the emergency agricultural bill, and the permanent tariff bill.

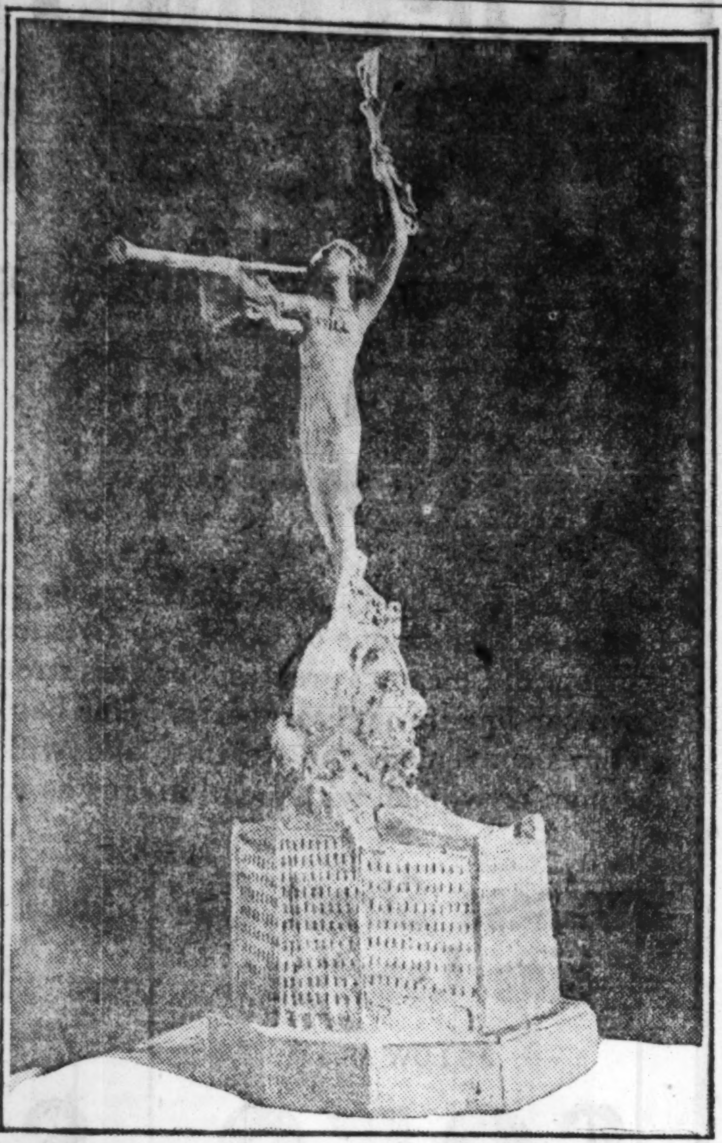
LADY OF THE LAKE—1921



This young lady, emblematic of the Chicago booster, may be seen at the entrance of the Municipal pier when the Pageant of Progress opens May 31. The design was submitted to Mayor Thompson yesterday by its sculptors, Sigvald Asbjornsen and Gilbert Riswald. The figure is standing on the moving wheel of progress above a pedestal which conventionalizes the skyscrapers and the factories of our city. In her right hand is a horn; in her left a torch.

MINE RESCUE CAR TO BE SHOWN AT PIER PAGEANT

Three departments of the federal government, the United States public health service, the war department, and the bureau of mines, will demonstrate their activities at the Pageant of Progress exposition on the municipal pier this summer.

One of the interesting government exhibits will be the rescue car used by the bureau of mines. M. H. Leopold, safety engineer of the bureau, has announced he will send one of the cars used in mine disasters to assist in controlling fire and gases and to resuscitate miners. The cars are eighty feet long and equipped with all the latest devices for rescue work.

The Institute of American Meat Packers will hold its annual convention here during the pageant. The convention will bring thousands of persons to the city.

F. H. Cromwell New Chief of Shrine Directors' Assn.

Dallas, Tex., April 9.—Frank H. Cromwell of Ararat temple, Kansas City, Mo., was elected president of the Shrine Directors' Association of North America today and Kansas City was chosen as the next convention city.

YANKEE PACKERS ARE SCORED IN SOUTH AMERICA

Foe to Cattle Raisers, La Razon Says.

BY J. W. WHITE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, April 9.—Declaring that the American packers are doing in Argentina what they are forbidden to do in the United States, La Razon, Argentina's most important afternoon paper, in a three column first page editorial announces that it will support every effort made to defend Argentina's cattle raisers against exploitations by foreigners.

"We have reached the conclusion," the paper says, "that the Argentine goverment must expropriate the packing houses and turn them over to Argentine capital for management. We must pass a law defending our agriculturists and cattle raisers similar to the Fordney act to prevent their exploitation by foreign grain dealers and packers."

Refers to Roosevelt.

It refers to former President Roosevelt's campaign against the trusts and says the best example of the dangers of the packing trust is furnished in the United States, where the laws are so severe that the packers have come to Argentina and other South American countries.

"Armours in its 1918 balance showed the concern made a profit of $37,000,000," it says. "The packing houses, as now organized, are not an aid to our cattle breeders but are an enemy and inconsiderate exploiters of them."

Could Be Run Cheaper.

La Razon then outlines the advantages which is says will result from an international organization of South American republics to expropriate all packing houses. It declares the packing houses can be profitably operated at one-fifth the profit Americans are now making and at the same time give Argentina 40 per cent more steers, and it says meat to Europe can be sold for 40 per cent less than at present.

A Message From the President of the Cadillac Motor Car Company

Year after year it has been necessary for us, at this season, to caution prospective buyers of the Cadillac Motor Car against possible disappointment in the matter of securing delivery.

The necessity was never more urgent, as it is our conviction that the months of May and June, and the remainder of the year, will witness the greatest shortage of Cadillac cars in the history of the company.

The Cadillac Company is firmly committed to the policy of building 8-cylinder cars which will continue to be the Standard of the World.

Present prices on Cadillac Motor Cars will remain unchanged throughout the year 1921.

NAME FRIENDLY RECEIVER TO AID MAXWELL PLANS

Detroit, Mich., April 9.—[Special.]—Decrees handed down in the United States District courts in Detroit, Dayton, and Indianapolis today pave the way for final reorganization of the Maxwell Motor Car company and its ultimate merger with the Chalmers Motor Car company.

The action in the three courts follows a creditors' petition in bankruptcy, and means the institution of a temporary and friendly receivership. In each instance W. Ledyard Mitchell, president of the Maxwell company, is named receiver.

Orders Sale in Three States.

All the property of the Maxwell company in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana is ordered to be sold, according to the Indianapolis decree. The minimum bid to be considered is $10,915,000. It is expected the sale and reorganization will be completed within forty days.

The decree handed down by Judge A. J. Tuttle in Detroit contains the provision that the sale shall take place when such a step would appear to be advantageous. He finds the debts of the Maxwell company amount to $16,000,000. William S. Sayres Jr. is appointed special master and intrusted with the sale.

The special master is to receive bids for the property as a whole and for each nine parcels of it. It will be sold in blocks or in parcels, according to which is the more advantageous for the creditors. The sale is to take place at the front entrance of the office building of the Maxwell plant, 12302 Oakland avenue, Highland Park.

Final Reorganizing Step.

A statement was issued at the offices of the Maxwell company which read in part:

"The reorganization of the Maxwell Motor company today entered upon the final stages leading toward successful completion. This is the meaning of the institution of a temporary and friendly receivership in the United States District court. The primary purpose of the receivership, which was agreed to by all the interests concerned, is to establish title to the properties under the reorganization.

"Strengthening and expansion of the factory and dealer organizations will proceed along lines recently followed.

"The rest of the properties, in accordance with the order of the court, will no doubt be advertised almost at once, which will clear the road for the discharge of the receivers and consummation of the reorganization plan, thus rendering available the new $15,000,000 of cash which has been held ready for months for the use of the company."

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, April 9.—Cotton prices advanced and closed around the top prices, with gains of 8@13 points. The strength came largely from shorts covering. Statistics are bearish and the trade demand poor. The world's question, the reparation by Germany, is an important factor in cotton, as that country took over 3,000,000 bales of American cotton annually before the war. Cotton trade reports are mixed, and offer little encouragement for speculative buying. Prices follow:

CORN FOR EUROPE MOVING OUT FAST

The second trainload of 35 cars of white corn for the Hoover relief of children in central Europe left Chicago Friday. The grain is to be milled at Geneva, N. Y., and prepared for export. Mr. Hoover is taking no chances on having the grain that has been donated by western farmers spoil, and the corn millers are seeing to it that it is prepared properly. The 35 cars that left Friday went over the New York Central lines, and will reach their destination today. The trainload that went out earlier in the week for Wilkesbarre, Pa., reached its destination in 57 hours. Handling of the corn at Chicago has been under the direction of Howard B. Jackson, former vice president of the United States Grain corporation, who, although confined to St. Luke's hospital as a result of a taxicab collision, has directed the work.

THE SCIENTIFICALLY BUILT WATCH

A Watch or a Bracelet—which do you buy?

A woman does not buy a bracelet when she wants a watch. Yet, that is really what thousands of keen and experienced women buyers are doing unknowingly every day. And it is not their fault.

Ladies' wrist-watches are fashionable and they are always going to be fashionable. A lady does not buy a wrist-watch to take the place of a bracelet. She purchases a wrist-watch to tell her the time. And a wrist-watch that is always "going wrong", "stopping," or that spends most of its life upon the repair bench—that kind of a watch is neither beautiful nor useful—it is an expensive luxury.

Alas, there are scores of thousands of ladies' wrist-watches hiding their worthlessness in bureau drawers, knick-knack and jewel boxes because their owners discovered they were made merely to look at. And the majority of these watches bear foreign names. But as they were sold at such "low" prices, much lower than a tiny Waltham for instance, their owners thought that they were saving money.

A watch is bought upon "faith". And there is not an article sold wherein and whereof we can be so much deceived as in a watch. It is not the jeweler's fault. The demand for reliable, fine watches is greater than the supply. If he sells foreign watches he cannot take them to pieces to see if they are put together "right." He has no means of testing the metals, of knowing the pedigree of the different "parts." He, too, buys upon faith. He gets the blame when the "works" go wrong, not the maker who lives four thousand miles away.

There are ladies who may be reading this advertisement who own tiny, exquisite looking wrist-watches that simply will not "go" or keep time. They have sent them to the leading jewelers in their town, but the trouble cannot seemingly be put right. Why is this?

There are two reasons: one, that the watch was sold at a price which forbade fine workmanship and materials. Two, that the watch lacked standardization, which is essential in tiny wrist-watches if they are to keep continuous and dependable time.

And you cannot purchase a dependable wrist-watch except at a relatively increasing price as the size of the watch decreases. In other words, the smaller the watch the greater the cost. Errors of workmanship can exist in, say, a watch of medium size, that would be disastrous in a tiny watch. The "works" of the tiny watch must be perfect even to the fraction of a human hair. For instance:

When the dial of a ladies' wrist-watch gets below the size of a twenty-five cent piece, the cost of such a watch mounts rapidly; and when the dial decreases to the size of a dime, the cost has increased at least four to five times as much.

The smaller the watch, the greater the cost. That is, if the watch was made to keep dependable time. And a small ladies' wrist-watch is rarely dependable if it lacks standardization. The fame, reliability and worth of the Waltham Watch has been built upon this undeniable fact. The tiniest ladies' wrist-watch made on this continent is a Waltham; although its dial is even smaller than a dime, it keeps the same dependable time as the larger Waltham gentlemen's watch, known all over the world for its accuracy and reliability.

And the reason this tiniest of ladies' wrist-watches keeps the time "day in and year out," is because it is standardized. It is a tiny, but perfect reproduction of the highest grade, larger Waltham Watch. Every part, every jewel, wheel and pinion-bearing is perfection itself because of exact standardized reduction in size. Just as you see a star reflected in a dewdrop—so in these exquisite, tiny, perfect time-pieces you have beauty, plus a lifelong service, which is the only reason why you desire to own and to buy a wrist-watch.

Do not be misguided by "lower prices" or "just as good," or high sounding foreign names when you go to buy your wrist-watch. No lady desires a watch that will soon be hidden away among disused trinkets, or that will cost her a small fortune in upkeep.

The more tiny the watch, the more it will cost you; but a beautiful, small wrist-watch is a prized possession indeed, when you can depend upon it. The name of Waltham upon the dial is an assurance of integrity in workmanship, of dependability, and true value for what you pay for it. It will profit you to insist that your wrist-watch be a Waltham.

NAIL
Will Turn Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing toe nail reduces inflammation and pain at once and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending April 6 by 208 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $838,518,000, compared with $795,474,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by twenty-three clearing houses amounted to $835,978,000, compared with $1,149,876,000 for the corresponding week last year. R. G. Dun & Co. report 322 failures in the United States last week, compared with 299 in the preceding week and 104 in the corresponding week in 1920.

The board of directors of the Consolidated Copper Mines company has authorized the issue of $10,000,000 8 per cent consolidated general mortgage bonds, to be dated May 2, 1921, and mature May 1, 1936, and to bear interest from Nov. 1, 1922. The Skelly Oil company has called a special meeting for April 22 to vote on a proposal to increase capital stock from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, of $10 a share par value. Pure Oil Company of Minnesota has merged with the Pure Oil Company of Ohio, giving the latter a larger distributing and marketing organization in the northwest.

The Cambria Steel company has announced a further curtailment of operations, stating that present orders show no decided improvement.

Facts Hidden; Stocks Speculative.

Several estimable men who were persuaded to buy oil promotion stocks a year or two ago have been expressing annoyance recently because other people do not share their confidence in the soundness of their investments.

The promotions, each having thousands of stockholders and all operating on similar lines, are involved. They exhibit balance sheets which make an excellent showing, but refuse to show their income accounts. All have paid dividends steadily for a year of two at least, and it is principally on the regularity of these payments that the honest stockholders base their confidence.

It is known that each of these companies has rather extensive holdings of oil lands and considerable production, but the vital question of whether they are fully earning the dividends they pay is unanswered. If they are actually covering the dividends after making a proper allowance for depletion and depreciation and leaving a reasonable surplus, they are in sound condition. If, on the contrary, they are paying out in dividends all they earn from operations, and the surplus they have is derived from premiums on stock paid by investors, they are headed for bankruptcy.

As the first object in life of all three companies appears to be to sell stock, it seems reasonable to presume that, if a disclousre of their affairs would help the sale of shares, complete reports would be published without delay.

On the basis of the foregoing the stocks of all three companies must be rated as speculation rather than investments.

Brief Answers.

F. K.—The 7½ external loan of Belgium is the obligation of that country and is in effect a preferred claim. Bonds to the amount of $2,000,000 par value will be drawn annually for payment at 115. Nothing short of a new war or a revolution could hinder their being paid.

E. W.—The Province of Buenos Aires consolidation bonds are secured by a first charge on certain taxes. As the province is the most important one of the Argentine Republic, the bonds are entitled to a good rating among South American issues.

SUGAR MARKETS.

New York, April 9.—Raw sugar: Cubas, cost and freight equal to 6.02 for centrifugal, uncontrolled sugars ¼c below. Refined, 7.75 to 8c for fine granulated. Futures closed 8 to 12 points net lower. Final bids: May, 4.70; July, 4.80; September, 4.82.

GRAINS MOVE UP ON SCARE CAUSED BY COLD WAVE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain prices moved upward and finished around the best of the day. Colder weather over the agricultural regions, combined with evening up and a large volume of changing from near to distant months, featured the trading. At the close May wheat was ⅜c lower and July 1c higher, while corn and oats showed gains of ⅛@⅜c, rye ⅜@½c, and barley was unchanged.

Lowest prices of the season were witnessed during the week, with a fair recovery from the inside figures, due mainly to the oversold condition of all markets and the subsiding of liquidation. Wheat finished 3¼@4c lower, with May in the lead. Corn was off ⅛@1⅜c, the latter on September, while oats gained ¾@1⅜c, the latter on July. Rye was ¼c higher on May and 1⅛@1⅜c lower on distant months. Barley was up ¼c for the week. Provisions dropped to the lowest since 1915, pork losing $2.30, lard 57½@65c, and short ribs were 97½c lower than a week ago.

Cold Wave Scare in Wheat.

Freezing weather over the winter wheat states, with temperatures of 28 degrees at Dodge City, western Kansas, and reports of an inch or more of ice over western Iowa and Nebraska, brought active buying of July wheat to cover shorts as fears of damage were entertained.

Local operators were the best buyers of July and on the advance there was heavy selling by commission houses in general, but their offerings were absorbed on a moderate setback which was recovered at the last. A number of the largest commission houses sold May at $1.34 and over and followed the market down. A large part of the trading was in selling May and buying July at 21@22c spread, the big discount for July making it more popular with traders, while at the same time they were easily scared by any adverse news. Seaboard houses bought May.

Corn traders were good buyers early, tried to lift prices, and sold out later at the same prices to a shade over. A fair business was on in changing. The week's primary movement was the lightest at this time in five years. Indications are that the leading industry may buy corn this week.

Shorts in Oats Active.

Shorts in oats were active buyers on the cold weather and light offerings. Prices moved up readily and closed strong.

Rye was taken by seaboard exporters and shorts. Local operators are short all deliveries of rye and the seaboard is long rye. Offerings of cash lots were light and prices all around were higher.

Less selling pressure was on in provisions and, with an increase in the buying, prices advanced and closed with gains of 17½@20c on lard, 10@12½c on ribs, and unchanged for pork. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 594,000 hogs, or 57,000 more than last year. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were smaller than the previous week and larger than last year's. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Wheat traders are watching the weather over the winter wheat country. The weather man does not promise any warm weather for several days. Those who are bearish advance the argument that with the higher altitude in western Kansas, where temperatures are lowest, the wheat crop is one to two weeks behind that in the southern and southwestern sections, and that little damage is likely from the freezing weather, as the crop is not far enough advanced. At the same time nervous shorts were active in covering. For the present the weather over the winter wheat country is a big factor in the trade and is being watched more closely than is the export demand.

Buying of oats was based on the cold weather and prospects of crop damage in the west. Oats that are up may be hurt somewhat and the seeding in the northern section delayed. The market has been oversold of late and it is not easy to buy a large line without affecting prices.

Russell's News, discussing the reports of reselling of wheat by exporters, which was a factor in Friday's market, said exporters were practically unanimous in their belief that there was no reselling by European countries. Some intimated that it might have been a switch of positions, and others that it might have been the letting go of some long wheat. A Chicago exporter who was in New York wired that the export buying on Friday was secured largely from other exporters.

A decrease of over 300,000 bu in oats stocks at Chicago is expected to be shown in the visible supply statement Monday. Shipments from here for the week were 358,000 bu in excess of the receipts.

A wide range of prices for wheat is being paid by European buyers. Antwerp paid $1.79½ per bu for 280,000 bu 60½ lb Argentine wheat for April shipment, and $2.05 for 160,000 bu No. 1 Manitoba for shipment by May 17. Spain paid $1.90⅜ for 224,000 bu 61½ lb Argentine wheat afloat.

A New York exporter estimates that 25,000,000 bu of wheat sold for shipment up to the first half of June have not been shipped.

B. A. Eckhart, a Chicago miller, who returned yesterday from California, says the Pacific coast has not felt the business depression to any extent.

"Water stands in the fields from here to Dighton," wired Geo. M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. "Crop through this territory is about an average and will continue in fine condition for a long time. Light frost Friday night did no damage."

PRODUCE MARKETS

Egg prices advanced ½c with a good trade. The movement is heavy, while receipts for the week, 151,341 cases, or 20,000 less than the previous week, compared with 105,851 cases last year. Fresh firsts were 24@24½c.

Poultry prices were unchanged, with supply light and a moderate trade. Live fowls were 31½c, springs chickens 33c, stags 24c and roosters, 19c.

Butter prices were without change at Chicago, with a fairly active market and no increase in the offerings. Receipts for the week were 39,999 tubs, or about the same as the previous week, and compared with 28,489 tubs last year. Storage stocks have decreased over 1,000,000 lbs at the four markets the last week.

Colder weather brought a better market for potatoes, with prices 5c higher at 80c to 95c per 100 lbs for carlots of round whites, sack stock. Receipts for Saturday were 35 cars and for the week 324 cars, against 211 cars the previous week and 275 cars last year. There were 137 cars on track.

Strawberries were in good supply, with 8 cars in and the market easier at $3.50 to $5 for 24 pint cases, and $3 to $8.50 for 24 quart cases, depending upon condition and ripeness.

The New York Times.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—The movement of prices on the stock exchange today was negligible. Few changes were more than fractional and total shares were the smallest of the year except for the equally apathetic trading on the first Saturday in March. At the close advances and declines were about equally balanced.

The only news of the day was the United States Steel corporation's statement of unfilled orders of 6,284,765 tons on its books at the close of March. This showed the month's decrease to have been larger even than the steel trade's estimate. Notwithstanding the fact that the company's plant was producing at less than 50 per cent of capacity, new orders were so few as to bring down the total unfilled tonnage 649,000 tons from the month before, a decrease of 9 1-3 per cent. As compared with last July, the reduction is 43 per cent.

March was the eighth consecutive month to show a decrease in unfilled tonnage, which now stands at the lowest figure since September, 1919, when it was 6,284,638 tons. The recent maximum unfilled tonnage was 11,118,468, in July, 1920, and the highest in the history of the company was 12,183,083 tons, in April, 1917. This showing merely emphasizes the facts in the situation already shown by the fall in iron production to the lowest point since December, 1914, with output now at the rate of 16,000,000 tons per annum, against capacity of 46,000,000.

OOD OF GOLD VES STRENGTH TO BANK SYSTEM

BY O. A. MATHER.

The continuous flood of gold that been pouring into the United in recent months is strikingly rated in the weekly statements the federal reserve banks. The sys- last week further increased its gold by $17,571,000, bringing such up to $2,264,000,000, which is the highest figure in its history. holdings have increased $100,000,- in a month and $205,000,000 since beginning of the year.

this increase in gold, the posi- of the system also was further thened last week by a decline in of $53,843,000 and a recession in ral reserve note circulation of $14,-000. Since Jan. 1 rediscounts have $214,000,000 and note circulation dropped $111,000,000. This brings re-nts to the lowest figure since Jan. 1920, and circulation to the lowest since Feb. 9, 1920.

Reserve Best Since June, 1919.

a result of last week's changes, the of total reserves to net deposit and ral reserve note liabilities combined to 63.5 from 52.4 per cent in the pre-ing week, the present percentage be- the highest since June, 1919. The of gold reserves to note circulation, r setting aside 35 per cent against deposit liabilities, rose to 64.7 from per cent in the preceding week.

detail, loans on government obliga- and on commercial papers declined 87,000 and $45,176,000 respectively. bought receded $18,884,000, so that bills declined $78,727,000. Treasury ficate holdings increased $3,320,000, that total earning assets receded $75,-000. The member banks reduced their rve account $10,464,000. Total re-es expanded $20,603,000. Total de-ts declined $43,917,000, including a in government deposits of $34,046,- other striking feature of the sys- statement and one which throws light on the rise in rates in the street money market was the large apparently voluntary shifting of reserves from New York to other rve banks, indicating the efficacy of federal reserve mechanism to gthen instantly the weaker parts of system by drawing on the strongest. purpose of the present redistribu- is to equip the interior banks for ing the special problems of their ricts, while avoiding direct drafts on eastern private banks. Thus, for ample, the New York federal reserve k's ratio declined nearly 3 points, al-gh it received considerable imported , and the Chicago bank's ratio in-sed nearly 5 points. This movement further borne out by the fact that deficit in reserves shown by the New clearing house banks was the re- of a lowering of balances at the rve bank, for both loans and de-ts declined.

Chicago Reserve Moves Up.

The statement of the Chicago Federal rve bank shows an increase in gold rves of $32,581,000, while total re-es expanded $33,708,000. Loans re-ed $29,450,000, those on government gations and those on commercial pa- declining $748,000 and $28,702,000, re-ctively. Bills bought declined $2,751,-0, so that total bills receded $32,200,000. al earning assets declined $32,258,000 member banks increased their re- account $5,569,000. al deposits receded $2,291,000, al-gh government deposits declined 0,000. Federal reserve note circula- increased $1,734,000. The ratio of al reserves to net deposit and federal rve note liabilities combined rose 6.5 from 40.9 per cent in the preced-g week.

New York Reserves Decline.

The statement of the New York fed-al reserve bank shows a decline in d reserves of $63,255,000, while total erves receded $63,191,000. Loans ex-nded $22,917,000, those on government igations and those on commercial per increasing $7,024,000 and $15,893,-0, respectively. Bills bought declined ,693,000, so that total bills on hand creased only $15,226,000. Total earning sets increased $18,801,000. The mem-ber banks reduced their reserve account 28,085,000.

Total deposits receded $30,603,000 and federal reserve note circulation declined $6,671,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined fell to 53.8, compared with 56.7 per cent in the preceding week.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks shows a decline in legal reserves of $18,616,620, causing a deficit of $4,331,320, compared with an excess of $14,285,300 in the preceding week. This explains the rise in the call money loan rate to 7 per cent on Friday. This decline in reserve was primarily the result of the member banks reducing their reserve at the Federal Reserve bank by $30,196,000. Their aggregate reserve declined about as much. Loans receded $24,115,000. Net demand deposits receded $89,425,000, while time deposits increased $6,505,000. United States deposits declined $7,706,000. Cash in vaults increased $4,583,000. ·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Trading in Chicago stocks was unusually heavy for the week end session yesterday. Prices generally were lower, with selling pressure especially directed against the packing house issues, influenced by the passing of the Cudahy preferred dividend. Swift International declined a point, Cudahy 2 points, and Swift half a point. National Leather was firm. Union Carbide and Western Knitting declined fractionally, while Stewart-Warner was weak. On small sales Wilson preferred and common were off 3 and 1⅝ points respectively, while American Shipbuilding and Public Service declined 2 and 1 point respectively. Sears-Roebuck advanced 1½ points.

The Art of Engineering

The art of visualizing in a definite way, designs, materials and processes, so as to deal with them in thought before they are handled concretely, is a gift the successful engineer must possess. He must see the end from the beginning, if he is intelligently to plan the layout of industrial plants.

In former years any building with four walls and a roof would house an industry. Usually the materials zig-zagged through the shop, men stumbled over each other, and the physical limitations of the building hindered operations on every hand. Yet the product came out some way, and most businesses made money.

Today such things are changed. If a manufacturing plant is to be successful, it must have an orderly and logical routing of materials; it must have buildings suited to the work performed in them; and above all, it must have its processes arranged to economize labor.

To get this result, requires careful thought and practical experience in industrial work. Such are the elements which our engineering service supplies. It effects a definite money saving, and is worth your consideration.

INVESTMENTS
That Stand the Test of Time

The recent and prolonged weakness in the market for listed stocks and bonds shows the effect of time and conditions on the general run of investment securities.

Wars, panics and depressions have brought little worry to holders of The Straus Brothers Company's Securities since the institution was founded in 1860. Recent conditions have greatly emphasized the stability of these securities.

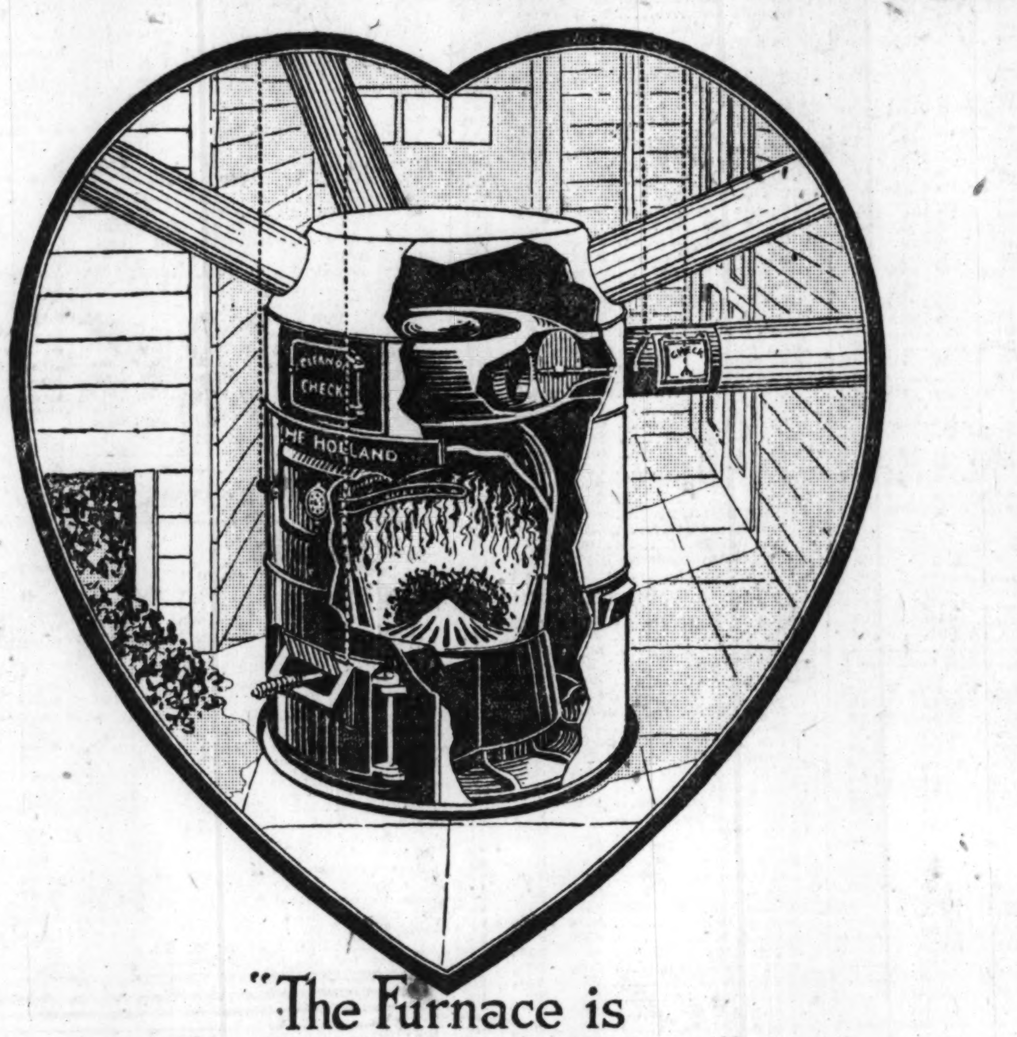
Will You Read How We Guarantee To Heat Your Home Better At Less Expense?

To save fuel and at the lowest cost have every room in your home warm, healthful and comfortable—to have no cold corners—no cold floors—no draughts—to have a home that is as clean in winter while your furnace is going as it is in summer—to save your furnishings from soot and dirt—to have proper ventilation—to have a home that is positively free from furnace gases and smoke—to have all this—your ideal in home heating—is an assurance made possible and positively guaranteed on the Holland plan.

It is assurance that you get in writing—a binding bond that gives you absolute protection—handed you upon completion of your furnace installation by a responsible company—the Largest Installers of Furnaces in the World.

And there are no qualifications to this guarantee of satisfaction, because the Holland's scientifically correct construction and scientifically correct installation makes it possible for the makers of the Holland to gladly and freely shoulder all responsibility.

Holland Means a Better Furnace Properly Installed



"The Furnace is The Heart of the Home"

Not Only a Furnace but a Heating and Circulating System

The Holland system of home heating is more than just installation of a good furnace. It is a scientific heating and ventilating system. It takes all the cold air out of the rooms, out of the corners, off of the floors, and replaces it with fresh, warm air.

It gives an even, healthful distribution of heat—makes every room comfortable no matter how remote from the center of the house. You can maintain by this method a uniform temperature throughout the house. It means warm floors and cool cellars. It saves fuel. And it gives a real, genuine home comfort.

The Holland Basis of Correct Heating Is Correct Installation

Too much is at stake in the installation of a heating unit in your home to trust it to inexperienced, side-line installers. Heating is a science, and because this is the basis of the Holland method, competent Holland trained engineers and installers plan and install these furnaces in your home.

This is why a Holland furnace is sold direct from the factory to you, and installed in your home through its own factory branch. This is why you get with your furnace a five-year guarantee bond, that makes the factory directly responsible for your heating satisfaction.

Every Holland Fits the Home for Which It Is Planned

Competent heating engineers plan your heating system according to the size of the rooms, location of rooms, position of the house, the exposures of the walls, etc. Everything that affects or tends to change heating conditions is considered about your home and the Holland system made to meet these conditions.

All of these plans must be finally approved by Holland's heating experts before installation really begins. Thus, you get in the Holland installation a furnace that is right in size and of ample heating capacity for your needs. The pipes are the right size and properly pitched. The warm-air registers and cold-air outlets are correctly placed to provide circulation and dependable, comfortable service.

And the Furnace Itself Is a Basis of Inbuilt Goodness

The Holland construction is based upon approved design and principles such as only years of experience show us how to build them. Holland Furnaces burn any kind of fuel, soft coal, hard coal or coke, and burn all of it without waste. Many users of the Holland, even in hard coal districts, are burning soft coal out of preference. They are absolutely clean—no smoke or gas can get into the rooms of the house.

The Holland has many exclusive features, for example—the easy shaking cone-shaped grate and the air admitting fire-pot which make for perfect combustion and positively keep the hottest fire in closest contact with the air supply for the rooms. No less important is the large one-piece radiator with its direct-indirect damper, making possible a long smoke travel. The Holland Radiator cannot leak gas or smoke as it has no joints. These features serve, with the Holland installation, assured by the Holland direct method, to complete an individual heating and circulating system for your home that is not elsewhere approached in quality or economy.

Now Is the Time to Plan for Your Furnace

Hollands for Homes Already Built

Because your home is already built does not mean you have to put up with inefficient, unsatisfactory heating. A Holland can be installed in any house. Any factory branch listed on this page is specially equipped to handle this work for you.

New pipes can be put between the walls to any room in your house without removing or breaking the plaster. New registers in their proper places to assure correct circulation can be placed, all easier and with less confusion and annoyance to your household than you may think possible.

A Holland for New Homes

If you are planning a new home, phone or write the Holland Branch nearest you. Without obligation a Holland expert will call and aid you in arranging for an efficient heating system.

Holland's Money-Saving Service Starts Before You Dig Your Basement

Many times Holland men have been able to suggest changes in basement design and construction that more than save the cost of the entire heating system.

Close attention should be given to the construction of the chimneys. They must be large enough, high enough, and made straight. Careful planning for the inside walls of your home tends to save money, and give you a better heating system.

This service of Holland experts is given without obligation—it is free to anyone who desires it.

Heating Service Insured by Our Service Bond

When your installation of a Holland is completed we give you a signed contract, a bond to replace—without cost to you for labor or materials—any part of the Holland furnace that may prove defective. And, furthermore, please understand that this bond is positive assurance of correct and economical heating.

And no farther away than your telephone is a factory service man at your call to regulate and adjust your furnace and instruct you in operating it to get the most efficient service.

We know how Holland furnaces are made in our own foundries. We know how our men install them and how comfortable and enthusiastic is every one of our 150,000 Holland owners. So, unhesitatingly, we are ready to accept all responsibility of satisfying you. No Holland job is finished until you are perfectly satisfied that your heating system meets all your requirements, no matter how exacting they may be.

Long Time, Easy Term Payments

You can buy and pay for any Holland on terms you can afford—cash or easy monthly payments. Thus, you need not forego the advantages of having a Holland in your home next winter, even though you are not in a position to pay for the furnace and installation at one time. You pay only the direct factory price on any plan of purchase you prefer. This means, if you choose the monthly payment plan, that you virtually pay for your Holland out of the savings it enables you to make.

Now is the time to make your arrangements. Call or write the nearest factory branch listed in this advertisement. There is a factory-trained heating expert at your service to give you conscientious advice and aid on any heating system you may now own, or on a new installation. Consult him without obligation. Plan with him for a better, more comfortable, more healthful home; for better heat next winter at less expense.

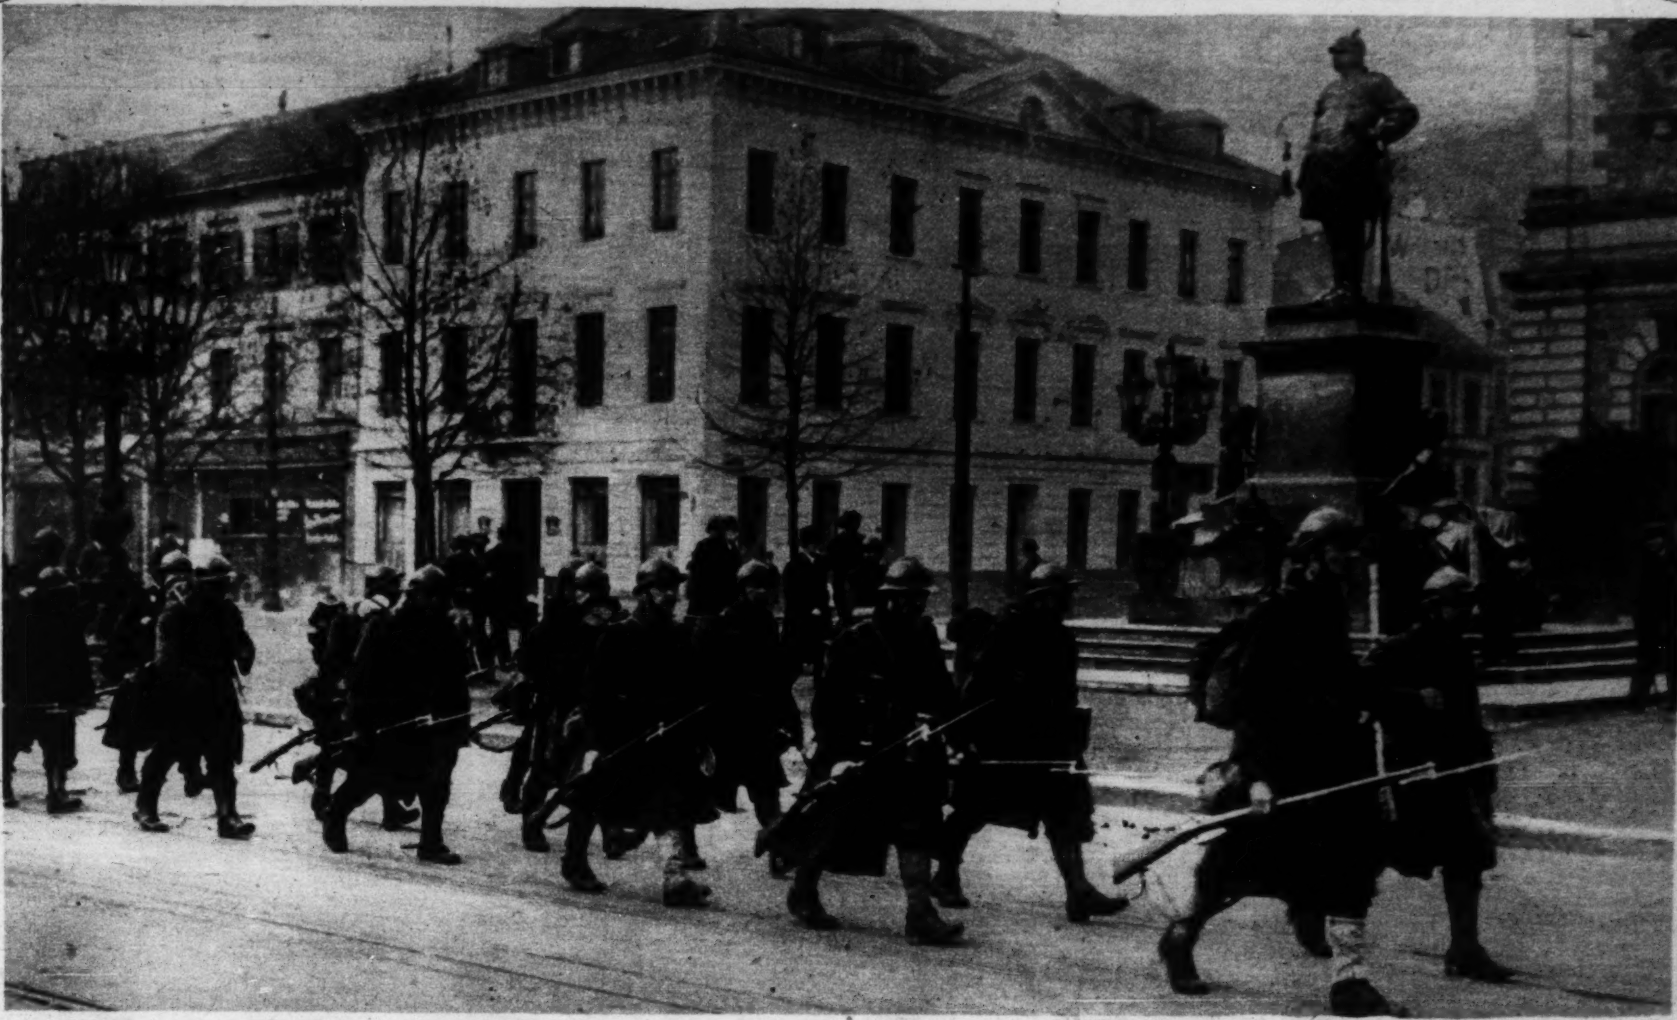
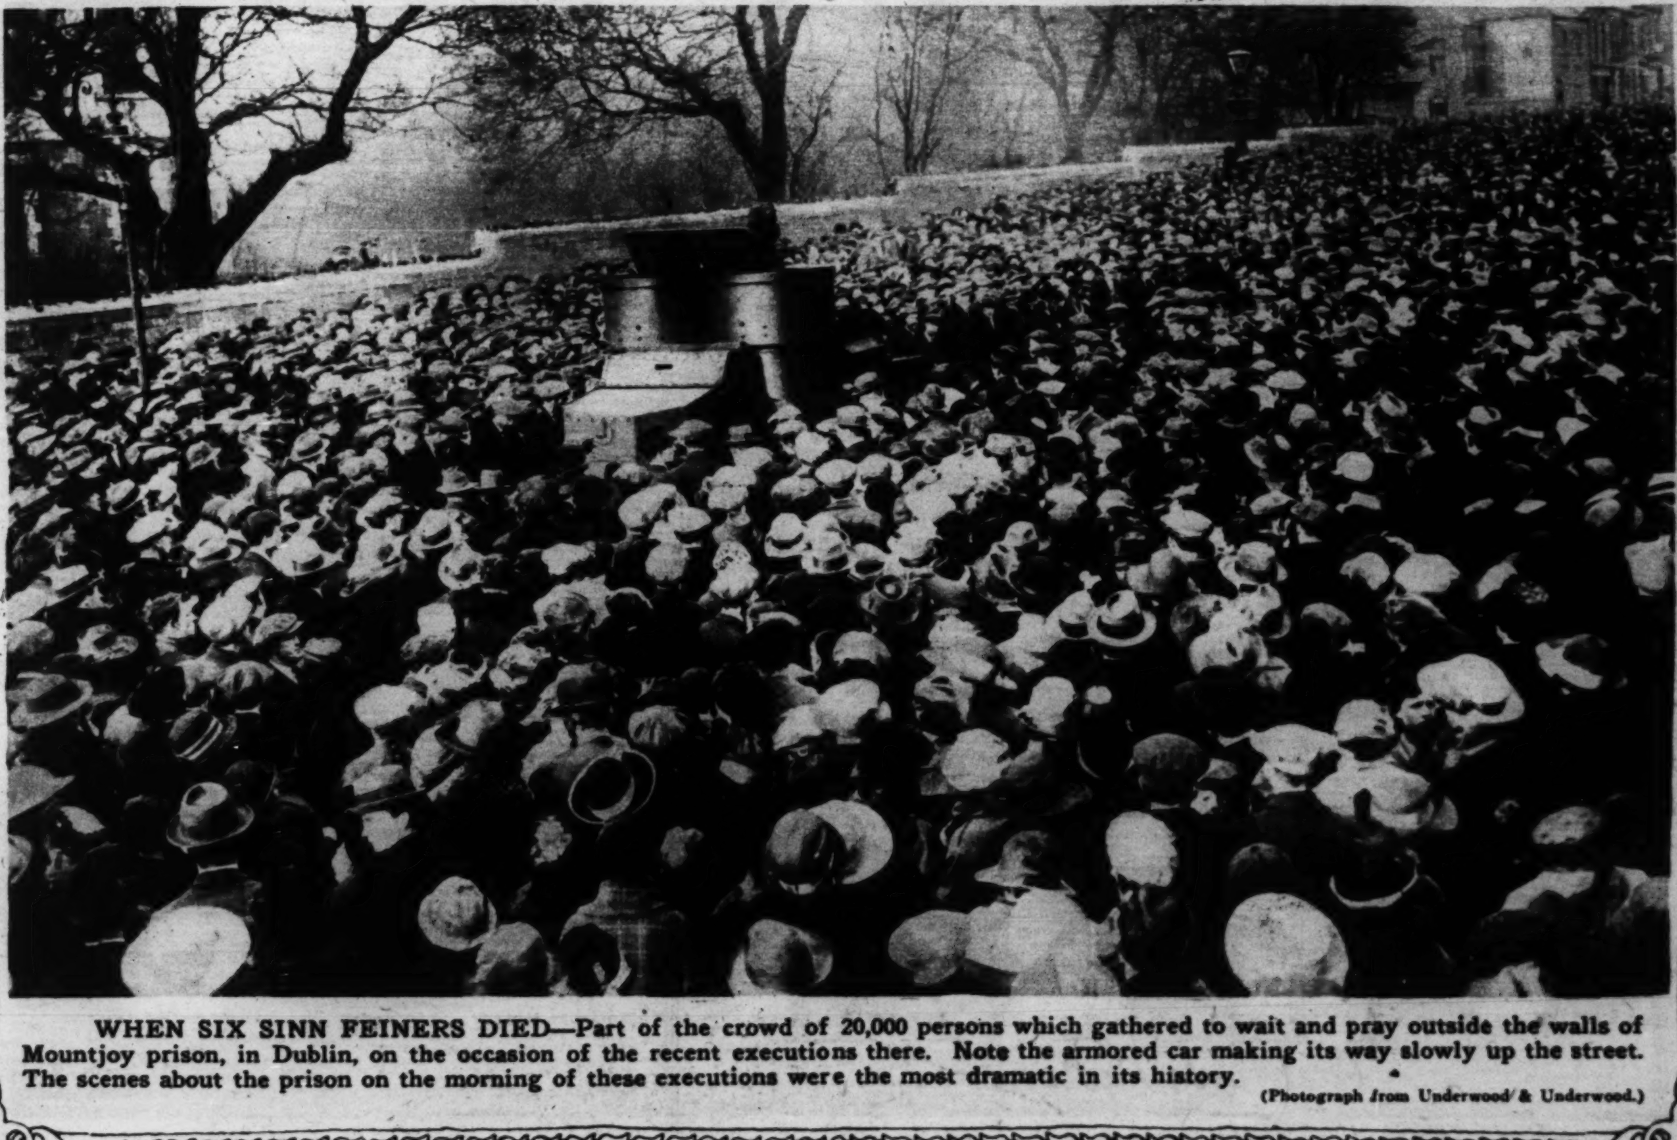
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 10, 1921



THE ALLIES INVADE GERMANY—One of the many warlike scenes enacted when heavily armed forces entered the great industrial cities of the Ruhr coal basin to enforce the payment of reparations. The picture shows a contingent of Belgian troops marching through the streets of Dusseldorf, with a statue of Bismarck looking down from its pedestal and probably getting the surprise of its life.

(Photograph copyright by Kadel & Herbert.)



WHEN SIX SINN FEINERS DIED—Part of the crowd of 20,000 persons which gathered to wait and pray outside the walls of Mountjoy prison, in Dublin, on the occasion of the recent executions there. Note the armored car making its way slowly up the street. The scenes about the prison on the morning of these executions were the most dramatic in its history.

HELPING OUT WITH THE SPRING CLEANING—When they get round to trimming the trees in the Cincinnati zoo they bring "old Lil" out to do the heavy part of the work, which she performs with much intelligence. One twist of her trunk around a bough and down it comes. Then Lil drags it away to a rubbish heap for burning. Have you a little elephant in your home this spring?

Get Thin—to music!

Don't pay for my services until I demonstrate their value. I'll put you through five days' lessons free. Then decide whether you wish to reduce this quick, effective way. If you make the start now, you can and will have a normal figure two months from today. Apply only by mail. Use coupon, filling in with lead pencil.

From Letters:

'I can never thank Wallace enough; the course has brought me back a trim figure.' * * * 'I am now almost proud of my figure.' * * * 'I am 51 pounds lighter and a new woman. * * * 'I have not used a laxative since the first lesson.'

NOTE: Women readers of the Tribune will be interested to learn that a prominent Chicago Modiste now refers those of too stout proportions to Wallace, for betterment of figure prior to engagement of her services.

IN the LIMELIGHT

A ROMANCE OF THE HIGH SEAS—Richard W. Landon, high jumper, and Miss Alice H. Lord, high diver, of New York, sailed together last July to compete in the Olympic games. Landon broke the Olympic record and took first place in the high jump, but what concerned his most was what Miss Lord thought of his company on shipboard. He knows now. The young athletes' engagement has just been announced.

"MARY JANE" WEDS GEN. PERSHING'S NEPHEW—You remember Buster Brown's little pal in the comics, of course. Here is the original of the character—the former Miss Mary Jane Outcault, daughter of Richard F. Outcault, the cartoonist, and her husband, Frank E. Pershing. The picture was taken after their wedding the other day in New York.

MRS. HARDING'S SECRETARY—Miss Laura Harlan, daughter of the late Associate Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme court, who is now looking after the details of the White House social activities. Her duties will be as complex as those of an ambassador.

ESTABLISHING THE ENTENTE CORDIALE—Germany's former crown prince turns out with the folks to shake hands and pass the time of day with the new mayoress of Wieringen. It is reported that the mayor of Doorn told Wilhelm's father the other day approximately where he (the ex-kaiser) got off. Evidently the prince doesn't propose to have a like experience if a little diplomacy can prevent it.

Liquid Silmerine

The Truly Beautiful

are those whose charms convey the impression of having been naturally acquired, exhibiting no evidence of artificiality. Hair and skin look as though they retained their attractiveness and youthfulness as a result of hygienic care and cleanliness. The preparations here described are appreciated particularly by those who prefer "natural beauty" to that which is obviously otherwise.

Keeps the Hair Wavy Glossy and Beautiful

"I often find Liquid Silmerine valuable in my work, especially when I am in a hurry to arrange my coiffure, and particularly for scenes where I must look my prettiest. It imparts that lovely sheen or lustre which shows to such advantage under changing lights." May Allison.

Many other popular screen stars praise the virtues of this unique product.

LIQUID SILMERINE

A great many women now consider Liquid Silmerine a real necessity. Splendid as a dressing, as well as for keeping the hair curly and wavy. Pleasant to use. Is neither sticky nor greasy. Perfectly harmless. Have you tried it?

Every Woman Prefers A Natural Complexion

Shedding worn-out skin is Nature's way of renewing the complexion. When this process lags, a bad complexion results. Then Mercolized Wax comes to the rescue. Actually absorbs the aged, faded or soiled top skin, in tiny particles, day by day, causing no inconvenience. The fresh, bright, health-tinted skin which has been covered up soon is revealed in all its beauty, and the face looks much younger. One ounce of Mercolized Wax usually suffices.

Removing Wrinkles, Age Marks and Flabbiness

Dissolve one ounce of Powdered Saxolite in one-half pint of witch hazel, and you have an effective and harmless wrinkle remover. Bathing the face in this quickly tightens and tones up the skin, erasing every line. Remarkably effective for flabby skin, and double chin. Reduces enlarged pores. Gives a tired, careworn face a freshened feeling and appearance.

Actually Removes Roots of Superfluous Hair

A boon to women disfigured with superfluous hair or fuzz is Phelactine—because it actually removes the roots! Easily, quickly, harmlessly. Not a caustic, to merely burn off the surface hair. Not a depilatory. Not electrical. It is "different," and truly wonderful. No odor, no irritation, no scar—skin is left clean, white and smooth. Get a stick of Phelactine today, try it, and you will be surprised and delighted.

Liquid Silmerine, $1.00; Powdered Saxolite, 75c; Powdered Tarkroot, $1.00; Mercolized Wax, 95c; Phelactine, $1.00

These splendid products are sold by Druggists and at Toilet Counters everywhere. If your dealer happens to be out of any of them, please ask him to get some from his wholesaler.

Skin Eruptions Fade Away

With War's Wonder Healing Agent

Ends itching, eczema, dandruff, boils, carbuncles—soothes inflamed skin as nothing else can. Free trial proves it. Test its many uses.

Most skin diseases are due to tiny germs that enter the skin through the pores. So the one and only scientific way to end the trouble is to destroy the germs.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many users, as Kloria. The way it wipes out eczema, barber's itch, and other skin diseases almost challenges belief. The way it soothes irritation, soreness, itching scalp and itching anywhere is truly amazing. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and notice this troublesome affection disappear with a few of these easy treatments, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. One trial for almost any skin disease shows results you never thought possible.

This is the same wonderful antiseptic agent, discovered in the war, which healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant and absolutely safe because not poisonous. Yet, by scientific test, it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Test Kloria on a boil, carbuncle or open sore. Notice how it destroys the pus infection, ends the soreness and heals with magic quickness. For cuts and burns, it insures quicker, cleaner healing than iodine, peroxide or any old-time antiseptic or salve. Use it for mouth wash or gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat and canker sores—how clean the mouth feels. Apply it to sore, bleeding gums (pyorrhea) and see if the soreness and bleeding do not disappear within a week. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic, which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

CHENEY SILKS

Fashion quite approves the picturesque and, surely, its effect could be no more charmingly achieved than in this snugly-bodiced frock of Cheney Twill with sleeves, softly-gathered fichu and skirt frills of Crêpe Chenette.

THE PROBLEM OF THE SPRING WARDROBE

"TO be or not to be" is not the problem, for new Spring frocks, tailleurs, negligées and dainty underthings are just as sure to be as are the showers of April or the flowers of May. The question of paramount importance is "of what to be," and the Sage of Fashion answers, "For smartness, for beauty and for durability—be of Cheney Silks."

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

ONE CREAM ALONE CANNOT DO JUSTICE TO YOUR SKIN

Every normal skin needs a cream that protects and freshens — to cleanse and to tone takes quite another cream

TODAY a skin that is soft, smooth and colorful can be maintained only by care. Smoke and soot and artificial heat are only some of the taxing conditions that the skin must be helped to meet.

One cream alone cannot meet them successfully. Every normal skin needs two creams—one for daytime use and one for night.

The first contains no oil. Oil inevitably reappears and a cream that will later reappear in a shine is intolerable for daytime and evening uses. The second, however, has an oil base. For its work can be done only by oil—cleansing, discouraging wrinkles and toning the skin to beauty.

The two creams are designed to meet different needs of the skin and their proper use makes steadily for loveliness.

To forestall a weather-beaten skin—the protective cream without oil

If you don't protect your skin against its ever-present enemies, wind, cold and dust, it will protect itself by developing a tough, leathery surface.

Wind whips out the natural moisture, chapping and drying your skin. Cold contracts and roughens it. Dust working deep into the pores enlarges them and forms a base for blackheads. No wonder skin specialists advise a protective cream!

When you are going out make a point of applying a little Pond's Vanishing Cream before you powder. It disappears at once, affording your skin an invisible protection. There is not a drop of oil in it to reappear in an ugly shine, and it makes the powder stay on twice as long! With this cream you can keep your skin always smooth and soft.

Instant freshening for tired-looking skin—the oil-less cream

Nothing so adds to a woman's years as a tired skin! There is however a way to bring instant refreshment. Smooth in a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream. It is based on an ingredient recommended by a famous physician for its softening effect. Gone is the dullness, those flat, unbecoming tones! Your skin is softened and refreshed—its exquisite surface is restored.

The oil-less cream is also wonderful to do away with the humiliating necessity of powdering in public. When there's nothing to hold it, powder just won't stay on the skin. That's why so many women needs must powder, no matter where they are. But with a little Pond's Vanishing Cream used as a base! The cream disappears entirely, softening the skin as it goes. Then powder. See how evenly it goes on—your skin has been prepared for it. How long and firmly this foundation cream holds it! No need ever again to furtively powder in public.

To really cleanse the pores—the cream with an oil base

Some dust and dirt always bore too deep for ordinary washing to reach. That is the cause of many a dull, old-looking skin! At night after washing, apply Pond's Cold Cream generously. It contains just enough oil to work easily into the pores and thoroughly cleanse them. Then wipe it gently off. You will be shocked at the amount of dirt your skin picks up every day. This nightly cleansing goes far in preserving the clear skin of girlhood.

For tonic rousing of the skin—the oil cream

To stimulate the play of blood beneath the skin that keeps it youthful looking, slap the face gently, persistently, with finger tips dipped generously in Pond's Cold Cream. It is soft enough not to stretch the finest pores as it works into them. Your skin is stimulated and roused by the swift coursing blood that spells youth.

Start today using these two creams

These creams are both too delicate in texture to clog the pores, and they will not encourage the growth of hair.

Get them today at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Co., B-14 Hudson Street, N. Y.

EDNA WHEATON won the contest conducted by The Daily News, New York's picture newspaper, to find the most beautiful girl for the role of Beauty in Paramount's forthcoming production of "Experience."

Miss Wheaton was born in Ithaca, N. Y., 18 years ago, and went to New York City from her birthplace to study singing. She has blonde hair and dark brown eyes. Now she's at work in the Paramount studios with—whom do you suppose? Richard Barthelmess! Some girls are lucky. Mae Tinee.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS of course graces your album a number of times. This new and lovely picture, however, has just come in.

It seems to me Miss Williams is prettier today than she was when we first met her in "The Adventures of Kathlyn." What do you think about it? Mae Tinee.

DOROTHY MACKAILL is the cunning girl appearing in the "Torchy Comedies," featuring Johnny Hines.

Little Miss Mackaill has only been in this country for a little over five months. She comes from England, where, they tell me, she was known as the Joy Belle girl in the London Hippodrome revue.

Besides appearing in the comedies, this small person takes part in the Ziegfeld Midnight Follies. Mae Tinee.

ALICE TERRY appears in your album (or should) doing the tango with Rudolph Valentine. She has, you know, the leading feminine role in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," now appearing at the La Salle. She is cast as Marguerite Laurier, the beautiful young Frenchwoman who loses her heart to the black-eyed boy from the Argentine.

Miss Terry was born in Nashville, Tenn., in 1896. She was educated in Washington, D. C., and had a brief stage career. She has played for the silent drama under Vitagraph, Crystal, and now Metro banners.

She isn't vurr' big—5 feet 1 inch tall—weighs 115. She has blonde hair and gray eyes. Mae Tinee.

Interesting side-lights, reported by interested friends

A WASH-LINE AT THE RITZ

AFTER luncheon and bridge in Helen's suite at the Ritz, Betty, who was driving Cora home, asked excitedly, "Did you see that tiny clothes line hung across Helen's bathroom, with silk underwear drying on it? Do you mean to say she washes it herself?"

"She does, indeed," Cora replied, calmly. "Helen says she saves enough that way to pay for it. Thinks it's extravagant to buy cotton or linen underwear which has to suffer boiling, bluing and bleaching by careless and costly laundries."

"What kind of underwear was it—did you notice?" inquired Betty.

"She told me," answered Cora, "she won't wear any but Vanity Fair, because the silk is so heavy and it fits so well."

SHE LEARNED IT IN COLLEGE!

She was a quaint old dear, with her crisp grey curls, and one never doubted a Boston background. Her daughter, a radiant young sophomore, was tea-ing her at the Campus Tea Cozy.

"Daughter," I heard her say, "what are Vanity Fair double-backs? I thought I knew my Thackeray from 'The Newcomes' to 'Denis Duval' but I never heard of two backs on Vanity Fair."

Her pretty daughter struggled for composure. "They mean Vanity Fair knickers, darling—all the girls wear them, and they are double thickness in back to keep them from wearing out. Vanity Fair, by the way, is responsible for the saving in my clothes allowance this year."

IN BUSINESS CIRCLES, TOO

Over their mid-day salad, two keenly alert young business women were chatting.

"Could you leave early and stop in to see the silk undervests Harley is advertising for $2.95?" asked the younger girl.

"What make of silk underwear?" her companion inquired.

"I don't know, but what difference does that make? A vest is a vest and glove-silk is the most economical because you can wash it yourself."

The older woman smiled. "There's a vast difference in silk underwear. The vest I wear, Vanity Fair, is in a class by itself. Not only is it four inches longer, but the shoulder straps are of hemstitched glove-silk instead of stringy ribbon. These straps stay on your shoulder, too. That's one reason why I'm not interested in Harley's sale unless I know it includes Vanity Fair."

The WRECK of the WORLD'S GREATEST ELEVATOR

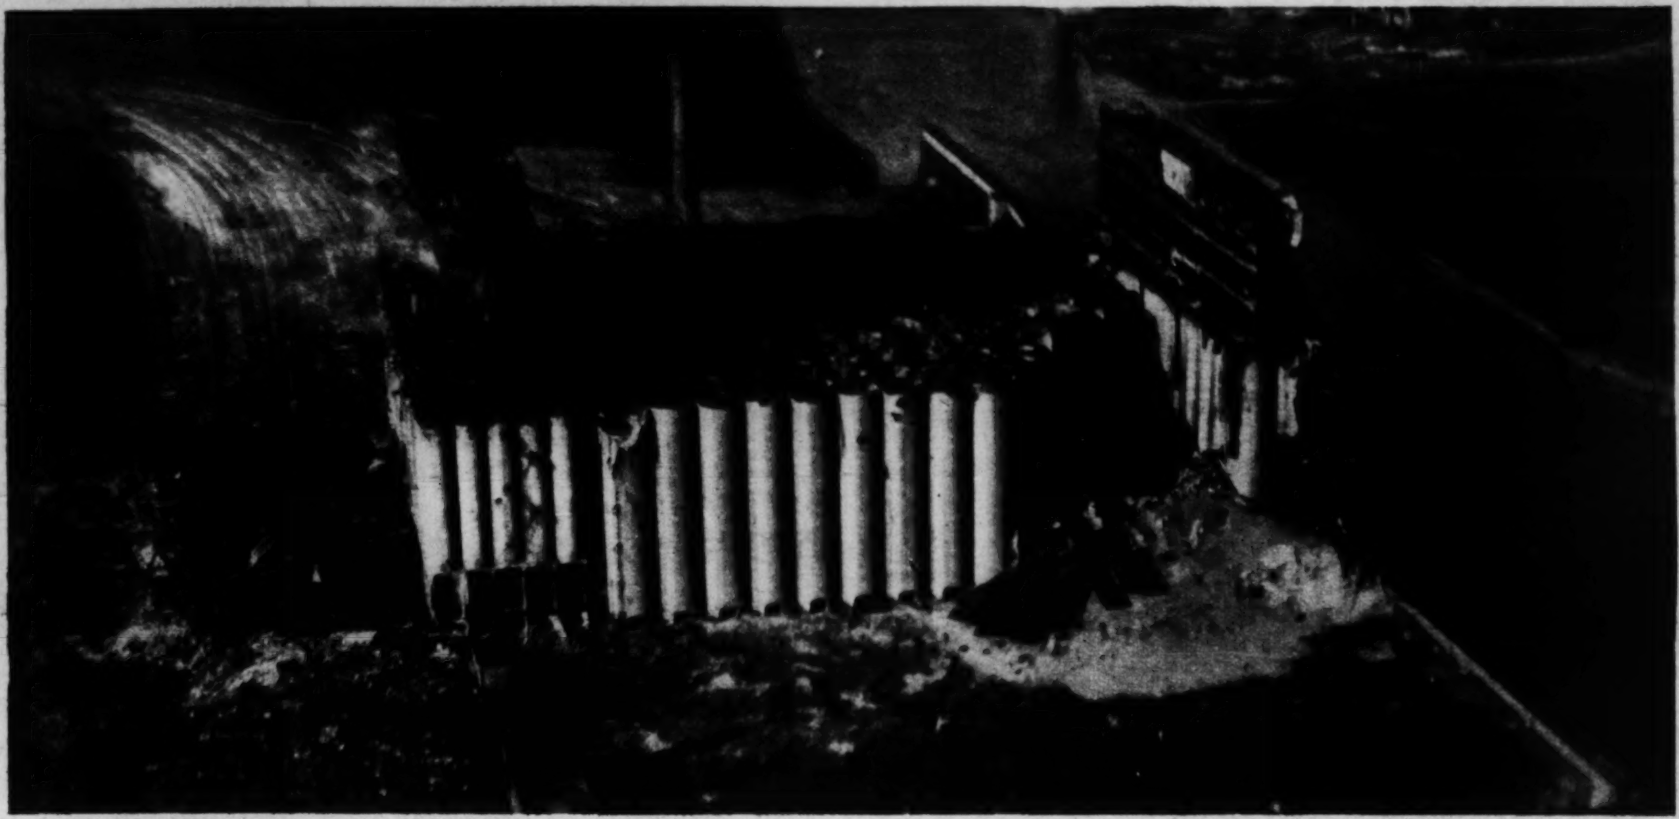
(Photographs from the Ralph C. Diggins company. Copyrght by The Tribune company.)



A $3,000,000 EXPLOSION FROM THE AIR—This and the other photograph on this page were taken by Aviator J. W. Akers immediately after the great blast which wrecked the giant Armour grain elevator at One Hundred and Twenty-second street and Torrence avenue, killing several persons (the exact number was in doubt long after the disaster) and injuring a dozen or more. At the left may be seen the mass of twisted steel which blocked the railroad tracks flanking the structure. At the right a huge steel framework ripped from the top of the plant is toppling into the Calumet river, while just to the left of it is one of the mountains of grain released from the pits by the explosion.

THE RUINS AT CLOSE RANGE—The plant consisted of a "nest" of thirty-two elevators of steel and concrete and comprised 240 separate grain storage pits of concrete, many of which are shown in this picture. The superstructure was of steel and gunite, a material designed especially for elevator construction. Most of this was blown away, but much of the main steel framework and a large part of the cylindrical storage pits were left standing.

Is your skin pale and sallow?

How you can rouse it

IF your skin is pale and sallow, it shows clearly the need of a more stimulating treatment than you are giving it. A pale, sallow skin means inactive blood vessels—pores that do not throw off quickly enough the waste matter that accumulates.

Don't let this condition become chronic. To give your skin the soft, clear color every healthy skin should have, follow once a week this special treatment:

JUST before retiring, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head with a heavy bath-towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The other six nights of the week cleanse your skin thoroughly in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water.

The first time you use this treatment, it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it is an indication that the treatment is doing you good, for it means that your skin is responding in the right way to a more stimulating kind of cleansing. After a few nights this drawn sensation will disappear, and your skin will gain such a soft, clear color, you will realize how much it has needed the treatment.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin tonight this special steam treatment. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

When Brown moved to San Diego, California

—he didn't intend to bother about business. He'd made enough money to live on, and he and Mrs. Brown were just going to play around.

They've been "playing around" ever since, because you can't help it in those days of sunshine by the blue Pacific, with motoring, golf, polo, sea-bathing, fishing, hunting and a score of other recreations added to the social enjoyments of 90,000 residents of this hospitable seaside city.

Yet, quietly and gradually Brown's name became connected with the city's commercial life. His sons established themselves in leading enterprises. The real name of the Brown family is today inscribed on many directorates, and means much.

Within the year, thousands of practical men have learned that life in San Diego offers, to the man who has won a competence, greater opportunities for his happiness and that of his family.

That's why it is the ideal city for your permanent home. The San Diego-California Club, an organization of 1000 representative citizens, will make you welcome and you'll find immediate friends. Every woman should know what this make means

To be genuine, Dorin Rouges and Poudres made for the U. S. A. must also bear the name F. R. Arnold & Co.

When you reach in your vanity-case or handbag, and with a touch from your dainty compacte, renew the fresh charm of your skin, do you realize to whom you are indebted for this handy little invention?

It is natural that the study of skin colorings and textures has reached its zenith in the century-famed ateliers of Dorin of Paris. Here also was invented the idea of compressing these poudres and rouges of inimitable fineness into handy compact placques.

You must be on your guard

So popular did this idea become that the name "Dorin" has been loosely applied to any compacte, even those of doubtful and inferior value. So Dorin gives you this warning:

In addition to his own label on the top, look on the bottom of every box for the round label with the name F. R. Arnold & Co., the sole American importers of Dorin's poudres and rouges.

As an aid in selecting the tints that will emphasize your particular kind of beauty, we have prepared a booklet, "What Is Your Coloring?"

For 25c in stamps or coin, this booklet with two miniature compactes (La Dorine Poudre and Dorin's Rouge) will be mailed you. Send description of your coloring. Or send 10c in coin for the booklet and two Dorin packets (poudre and rouge) in loose powder form.

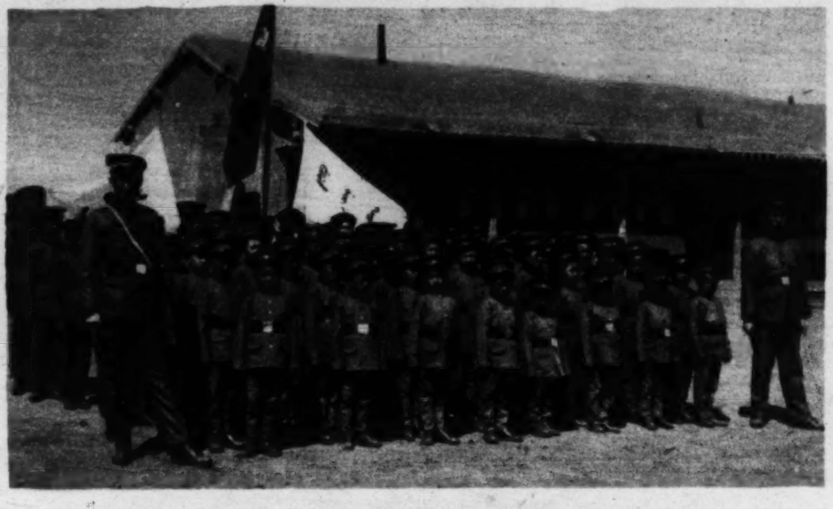
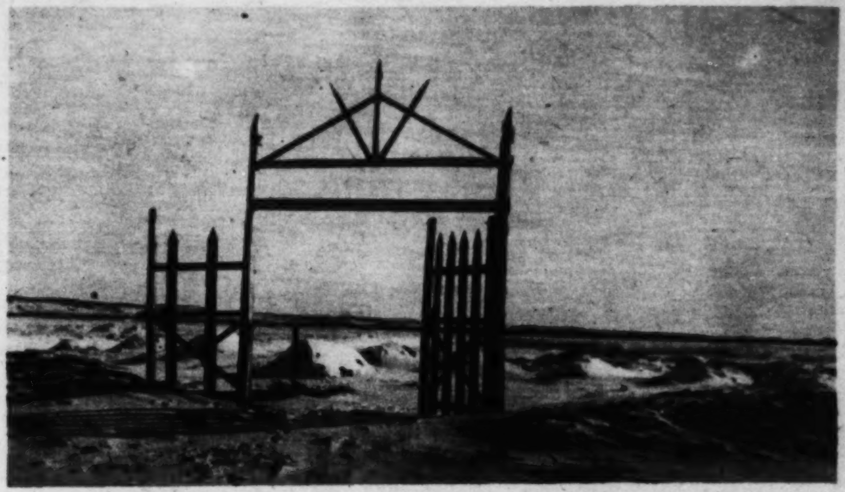
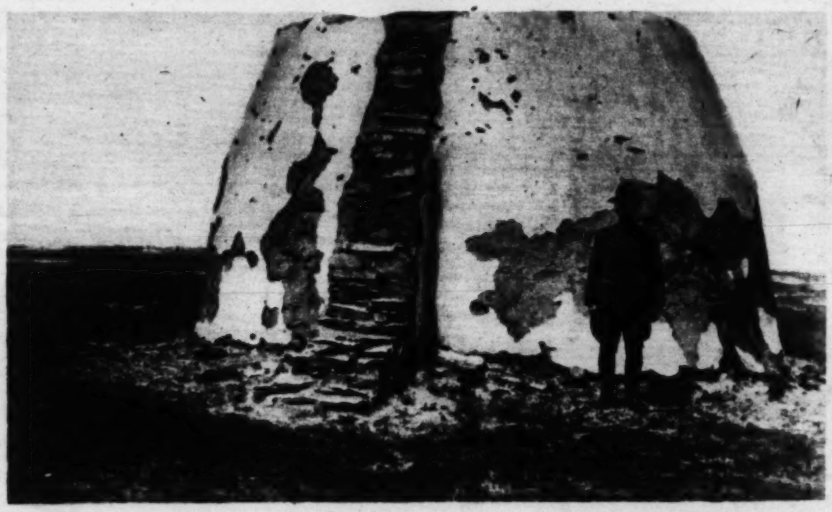
PICKING THE WINNER—As the wrestling contest nears a finish, the guards are pressing the crowd back to prevent interference. Note the pigtailed Mongolian soldier standing just to the right of the wrestlers in the center.



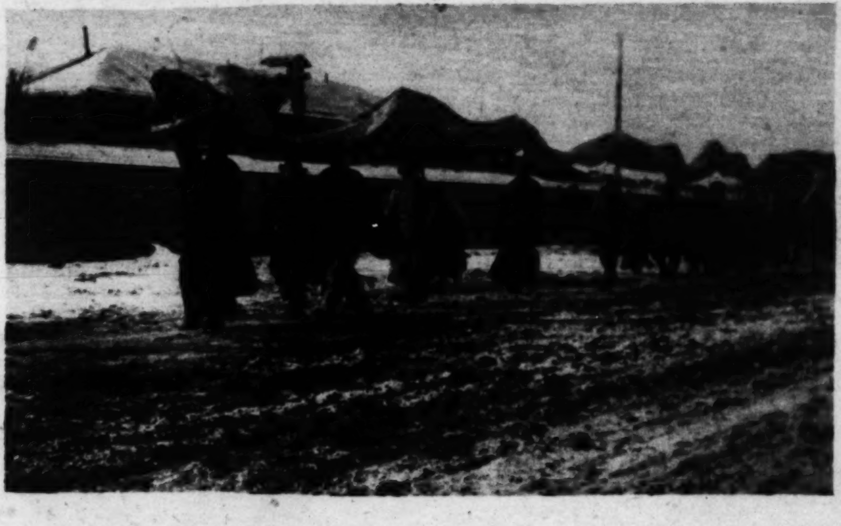
MILITARY DRILL—Seventy Mongolian school boys in Chinese uniform executing maneuvers under the command of their Mongolian teachers. The school, which appears in the background, is in Hailar.



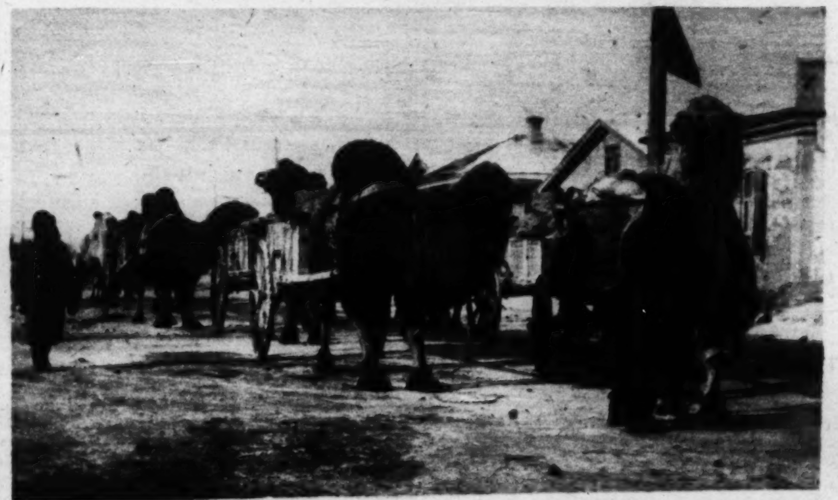
A CHINESE CEMETERY—The oddest thing about these bleak burial places in Mongolia is that, although the entrance is always through a gate, none of the plots are enclosed by fences.



MONGOLIAN ARCHITECTURE—This stone house stands near a village within two miles of Hailar. The village was raided by bandits and burned, but the stone house resisted their efforts at destruction.



A NEW YEAR PARADE—The dragon is sixty feet long. It is made of inexpensive material and is supported on poles carried by Chinese. At night its eyes are illuminated and a tongue of fire is kept wagging in its mouth.



GETTING UNDER WAY—A camel caravan, laden with freight, preparing to start from Hailar for Urga, the capital of Mongolia. These caravans number anywhere from ten to fifty camels.

Beautify your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggly, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Lulu Balks at Stepladders

I WASN'T much surprised when my maid Lulu finally balked. She was heavy and awkward and always afraid of stepladders.

"I'se awfully sorry, ma'am," she said, "but I done got to leave you-all."

You see the time had come round again to wipe the dust off the picture moldings and over the doors and windows.

"Now see here," I said to Lulu; "I wonder if we can't compromise. I don't blame you for being afraid of ladders. I don't like them myself. But suppose we get a Premier Electric Cleaner. You know it has attachments for reaching everywhere."

Lulu's teeth glistened. "Wouldn't that be gloriful!" she exclaimed.

So she stayed. Lulu does more and better work with Premier in two hours than she could do in two days with dangerous old stepladders and cloths. Of course once in a while I polish the woodwork with a rag.

And of course there's no comparison when it comes to rugs, floors and upholstered furniture. The rubber-fingered brush—the distinctive feature of the Premier—is a marvel for going after dirt, grime, dust, hairs, pins and ravellings. Lulu was getting worn out with the everlasting sweeping and cleaning—which didn't half do the job anyway.

"That sho' am some Premier!" says Lulu.

The Premier Vacuum Cleaner is the one with the revolving rubber-fingered brush. It is air driven and cleans the surface of the heaviest rug, without the least injury to the most delicate fabric. It's no wonder the servant likes the Premier. It not only cleans rugs, but also woodwork, backs of pictures, lighting fixtures, upholstery and mattresses.

There is a great difference in cleaners. Before buying any cleaner you owe it to yourself to have a TEN POINT DEMONSTRATION of the Premier—First Among Cleaners—in your own home. 'Phone the distributor named below to have your nearest Premier dealer make this demonstration tomorrow.

The window of every Premier dealer contains a poster of this or a similar advertisement.

Learn the advantages of the Premier's specially designed bag, self-balancing handle, notched nozzle, rubber brush and direct-connected attachments. Test its light weight, powerful suction and efficient attachments. Have this Ten Point Demonstration first thing tomorrow morning. Find out from the Premier dealer what you can do with $5.00. It will surprise you.

Women Everywhere are using this beautiful 'La-may Vanity Box!

NOW you can use a face powder that cannot spill. The powder is in cake form, covered with porous cloth. You can drop it on the floor and the compact will be just as perfect for use. You wipe the puff on the cloth covering of the compact and the powder comes through as needed. You could powder your nose in the dark and you would not get too much powder, and you are sure not to spray your clothes with powder. This new, perfect way to use face powder was invented by the specialist who perfected the famous, harmless La-may Powder. There are two qualities of packages. Both are very flat and convenient to carry. One box with compact and puff sells for fifty cents. The other, a German Silver Gold Plated Vanity Box with hinged cover and two-inch mirror, containing compact and flat lamb's wool puff, sells for one dollar and fifty cents. This beautiful La-may Vanity Box looks like solid gold and will not tarnish. It will last a lifetime. The La-may compact in the La-may Vanity Box contains enough pure La-may Powder to last for generous use for about two months. When La-may Vanity Box is empty you refill it by asking your dealer for a fifty-cent La-may compact. The compact and puff from the fifty-cent package is made to fit the La-may Vanity Box. Ask your face powder dealer to show you this splendid new idea. Remember, here, at last, is an entirely new idea in face powder. VESUVIUS, THE TERROR OF ITALY, IN ACTION AGAIN.

POPOCATAPETL, MEXICO'S GREATEST VOLCANO, IN ERUPTION.

REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPHS OF TWO FAMOUS VOLCANOES—Here are the most impressive sights of their kind to be witnessed in the eastern and western hemispheres respectively. The picture of Mount Vesuvius in eruption was made from a nearby mountain in Italy by Capt. Ariel Varges while the residents of hamlets round about were cowering in fear of the rumbling giant, which has threatened them and their ancestors for centuries. Popocatapetl, about 100 miles from Mexico City, also has been "showing off" recently, and several tourists were asphyxiated near the mountain last month by sudden eruptions of gas from the crater.

The MOTHER by Courtney Ryley Cooper

This I know about the caged animals of the circus and little more: that in their sleek heads are brains, and in those brains the rudiments of the same instincts, the same emotions which exist inexorably in every animal thing, whether human or beast: the love, the hate, the primal cunning and strategy, the power to wait for the time to come when things that have gone awry may become aligned again and the world a world once more.

BEAUTY lay within her "permanent" cage of the animal house, proudly disregarding the various yowls of curiosity which emanated from the kitten-like jaws of her month-old cub as it made a tour of investigation about its steel-barred home. Beauty was a mother, and there can gleam the same wonderful, placid light in the eyes of a leopard, possessed of young, as gleams in the eyes of a human parent as she bends over a bassinet. Nor was Beauty in the usual animal predicament of having her attention divided between three or perhaps four cubs; just one had come to her, her very first baby of her four years of life, and upon it was all of Beauty's being centered.

Spring was approaching; the windows of the menagerie house were open, to admit the clanging of blacksmith shop, the sounds of clattering hammers, the snorting and trumpeting of the "bulls," or elephants, sunning themselves in the winter quarters yard. A month more and the circus would take to the road, the bands would blare, and the inactivity of winter give place to the feverish effort of the summer season, as the circus fought on from town to town in the never ceasing battle against time, bad railroad connections, long hauls to the circus lot and the vagaries of the elements—the inevitable handicaps of the land of the "white tops."

And to Beauty, within her cage, the soft air and multitudinous sounds from without carried a message which she did not want to receive. Spring to her meant disagreeable hours in the big steel arena, and the sting of the trainer's whip. Beauty was what is known in the circus world as a "worker"—and that means a great deal more enjoyment to the audience than to the beast. Already a steel training arena had been erected within the great open space in front of the hippopotamus den, and a man and a young woman were within it, seeking to tempt the big, lubberly beast, by means of cajoling and vegetable delicacies, into action that would denote a semblance of intelligence on the part of its slothful, piglike brain. Beauty paid little attention to it. Training meant nothing to her without the bite of a prod rod and the cutting slash of a bullwhip. She could understand naught else.

Besides, there was her baby, and she came to all fours with a gruff growl of command as the wabbling little creature padded too near the fine netting barricade which had been placed against the bars of Beauty's cage where it adjoined the den of Rajah, the great, sleek, ugly tempered Bengal in the adjacent compartment. The cub heard the command, and ambled on to its pan of water, attempted to drink, became too enthusiastic, tipped over the shallow vessel, then ran, yowling and hissing and disagreeably splattered, to its mother.

Another growl, and a paw went out to slap the cub, then to draw it close between the forelegs of the parent, there to remain while the file-like tongue of Beauty smoothed the straggly, water soaked fur, and cleansed it of the chaff and straw which had settled there during the homeward scramble. Both were purring now, Beauty with a magnified, hoarse rumble in accordance with her great size, the cub with the light, rolling tones of a house kitten on the rug before the grate. A half hour of ablutions, of mingled purring and scolding, while the cub curled into a fluffy, dun-colored ball against her breast and slept, and while Beauty nodded and blinked—only to look up at last in sudden curiosity.

A form stood before her den, peering between the bars, a form whom Beauty recognized—Delaine, her trainer. Heavy of shoulders, of muscles and of build, stocky of neck, and menacing of mien, Delaine denoted just one thing to Beauty—pain Pain from the slash of his bullwhip, pain from the flaring bark of his blank-cartridged revolver, spitting the burning powder straight against her tightly closed eyelids, pain from his kicks and cuffs—Delaine knew no other route by which to reach the animal intelligence. And in the months that he had been gone, Beauty had not forgotten—neither him, nor the cold glance of his blue steel eyes, nor the coarseness of his heavy, brutish voice. And now, Delaine was back.

For just a second he hesitated outside the railing, a few feet from the den, at last to crawl over and, grasping the bars, stare within, as though seeking to identify the fluffy thing curled within the protection of Beauty's forelegs. At last a grunt. Then a command:

"Beauty! Beauty! Get up there! Let's see what you're hiding!"

The big cat hissed and rose, slowly, while the cub, suddenly shorn of its comfort, yowled dismally. Delaine grunted again.

"Got a cub, huh? Of course you'd have to show up with a cub, just when I need you!" Then he turned slowly and stood watching the man and the girl, just leaving the training arena, in front of the hippopotamus tank.

"That's my luck! She's got a cub—and she won't work!"

Silent then, he stood grasping the bars, seeming to challenge Beauty to bite and scratch his hands as he turned away, still watching the man and girl. But Beauty took no notice. Once more she was fondling her baby, and withdrawing it to the farthest, darkest corner of her den. Far down the line of cages, the man and the young woman parted, the man to leave by the side door for the winter quarters yard, the girl to come forward. Delaine loosed his hold on the bars and swung heavily about, awaiting her approach, then:

"Hello, Alice!"

She looked up in surprise—almost fright—at last to find a smile. Reluctantly she put forth a hand, and stood waiting, with something in her eyes which spoke the same dislike and fear that existed in the eyes of Beauty, a qualling uncertainty in her poise that betold anxiety and repugnance.

"I—I didn't know you were back, Fred."

"Got back this morning." The trainer had shaken hands with her coldly, then straightened himself as he often did in the steel arena, just before he applied the lash.

"Hear a lot of things have been happening around this show since I've been away."

She parried—and smiled again.

"Yes—a lot. They've gotten a new bunch of hay eating animals for those empty cages we had last summer and I understand they're going to have——"

"That isn't what I'm talking about. You've been doing a few things yourself!"

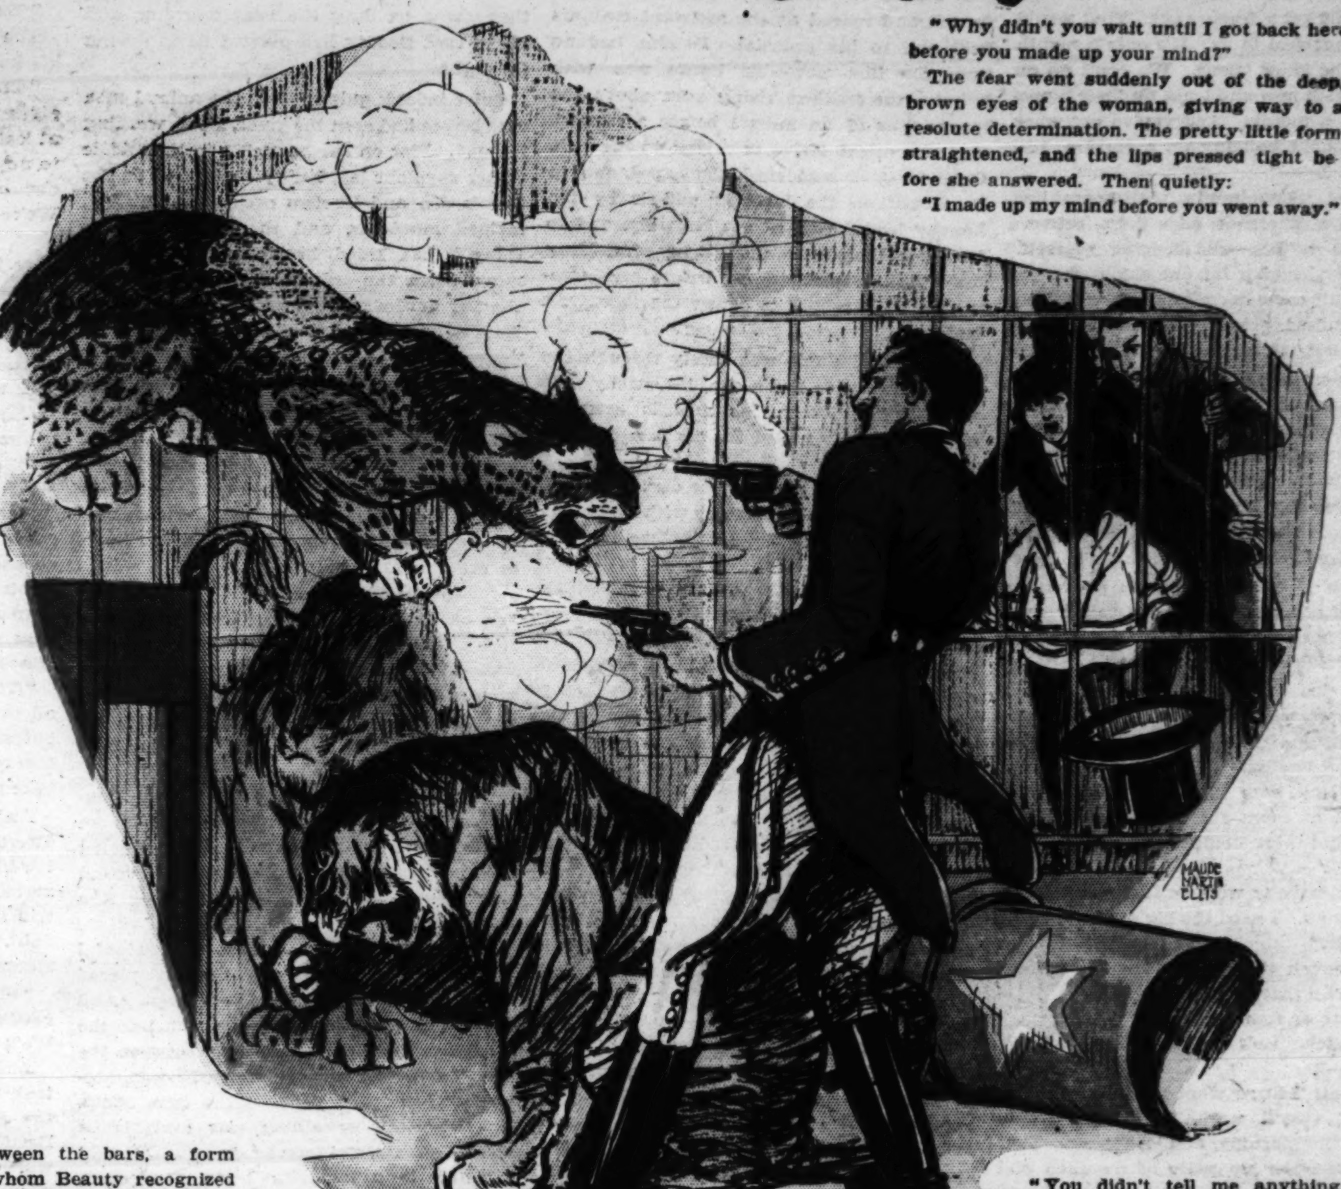
"What do you mean?"

He waved his head slowly from side to side

"Why didn't you wait until I got back here before you made up your mind?"

The fear went suddenly out of the deep, brown eyes of the woman, giving way to a resolute determination. The pretty little form straightened, and the lips pressed tight before she answered. Then quietly:

"I made up my mind before you went away."



The tiger was clawing with all its strength, not at Delaine, but at its own eyes. Blinded! Beauty leaped!

"You didn't tell me anything about it."

"I told you that I—I couldn't take you, Fred. That should have been enough."

"Well, it wasn't!" He advanced a step. "You know what you've done, don't you?" There was menace in his tone. Alice Martin of the steel arena disregarded it.

"I've told Tom Bayliss that I'll marry him—and I'm going to keep my promise."

"That ain't all!" Again the threat, concealed beneath a sneer. "You've set him up as a better man than I am! You've tried to make a fool of me in front of the show. Everybody knows that I was after you—now you've turned me down for him!"

"Wasn't that my privilege?"

"Not when it was a case of choosing between us two. I'm a better animal trainer than——"

"A woman doesn't marry a man to be trained," she shot at him. The thrust cut and he came still closer to her.

"No! But she lives by what he can do. What've you two been trying to do with Bumbo?"

"We——" she spoke before she thought—"we think maybe we can teach him a few tricks. It'd be the feature of the show if we could——"

"There's only room for one animal feature on this show."

"I know. And a trained hippopotamus would——"

"I said," he growled, "that there's only room for one feature on this show—and it's not going to be a woman who's turned me down."

A sudden look of defensive fright came into Alice Martin's eyes.

"But Mr. Williams said that if we could make good on the first day with Bumbo he'd——"

"I don't care what he said. You won't make good! Get that! Because there'll be an act that'll beat yours if I have to kill off every animal in this menagerie to do it! You're going to know what a real animal act looks like after I get through!"

IN TOY BOY LAND—

There's a hubbub down at the grocery store—
Flurry and hustle and bustle galore.
Glad hearts a-fluttering,
Motors a-stuttering,
Excitement's a poppin' on every hand.
Then comes to the street,
With a clatter of feet,
The refreshment committee from Toy Boy Land,
Puffing and tugging,
Pulling and lugging,
New combinations for every demand—
Six different drinks of the Toy Boy Brand.
Now here's something nice,
Just off of the ice,
Thirst-quenching Green River and rich Edelweiss.
But, as tastes often vary,
Here are sodas of Cherry,
Sodas of Grape and of Orange for sale.
Your grocer 'll arrange it
In case you should change it
To Root Beer, or Water, or good Ginger Ale.
Just mention the flavor
That meets with your favor,
He'll make up a case just the way you have planned;
So many of those and so many of these —Vary your order as much as you please.
But make it a point to have always on hand
A case of Good Judgment—The Toy Boy Brand.

"But, Fred——"

"Don't Fred me! I'm Captain Delaine as far as you're concerned and I'm the road superintendent of this menagerie."

"Very well, Captain. But can't you be a man at the same time? I can't love you——" there was pleading in the tone. "I tried and tried my best. You wouldn't want a woman who didn't care anything about you. It's—it's different with Tom. And don't you see what it all means to us? We've been working all winter, Captain, just on the hope that we would get a feature act. That would mean—a great deal to us. It's only a month now until the show opens. We can't go on any other trick now and train up their hippopotamus in a month. And you've got work enough without building up a feature just to beat us. I——"

He smiled, triumphantly, with heavy lips.

"There's a difference, ain't there, between listening to me beg—and begging yourself."

"I'm only begging for one thing—for you to be a man!" came her retort. Then quickly, her head raised, proud determination in her eyes, she left the animal house.

For a moment Delaine watched after her, his heavy eyebrows touching, his thick lips cruel and straight. Then he turned swiftly and Beauty came to her feet as his gaze centered on her.

"And you had to go and have a cub!" he muttered. "Well, you're going to work just the same, cub or no cub!"

He drew a whistle from his pocket and blew on it sharply. An animal tender came on a run from the far end of the menagerie house. Delaine pointed, brusquely.

"Bring that arena up here from in front of the hippopotamus den. Put three more sections in it, and fix up that small arena for Martin and Bayliss."

"That isn't very big, sir. They need a good deal of room for that hippopotamus. They've got him doing some pretty good tricks."

"They'll have to work in that small arena, or none at all. I need the big one."

"Yes, sir."

"How much time a day have they been putting in on that hip?"

"O, three or four hours, sir."

"Too much. He's too fat to stand it."

"But——"

"Cut that! I know what I'm talking about. Hereafter, they'll work him from ten to eleven in the morning, and no longer. That sticks. Now stir up some of the men and move that arena."

The tender disappeared from the menagerie house on the run, to return with a crew of helpers, and to move, section by section, the great steel arena to the place which Delaine indicated; while within her den, Beauty, her cub frolicking beside her, watched with wide, anxious eyes. Delaine and a steel arena meant difficulties for Beauty. She began to fret, her claws extending slightly as her forepaws moved in pistonlike unison before her; soon she was pacing her cage, her sleek, sloping head close to the bars, and hissing, the skin drawn back in ugly, vicious wrinkles from her teeth, while the cub yowled in the background, unnoticed. A workman looked up from his work of strapping together the heavy sections of steel, then nodded toward the leopard den.

"Going to work Beauty?"

"Going to work 'em all," came sullenly. "I'm going to put on an act that'll raise 'em out of their seats, a lion, tiger, leopard, horse, and a dog." He grinned then. "How's that?"

The tender gulped.

"Gosh! But can you pull it?"

"I can pull anything. Hurry up and strap that last section. Then turn Rajah and Beauty in here. I'll have to get 'em used to each other, a little at a time."

Hard working moments, as the arena was bound in place. Then the clattering of wood as the runway was put into position, leading to the tiger's cage. Hissing and snarling, the big striped beast slunk from his den and into the greater space of the training enclosure, while Beauty, pacing the confines of her narrow prison, watched with animal anxiety. A moment more and she growled in defiance, and clawed at the steel prods which workmen were shoving between the bars to separate her from the cub, now crouched in a corner. The runway was before her now, the steel shifting door was raised, and, shouting, Delaine jabbed her forth. Then she, too, was out in the arena, with the heavy bodied Rajah, while Delaine, his "bull" whip curling, came through the door.

They had worked before, the leopard and Rajah, but that was in the days before Beauty was a mother. Then she had obeyed the gruff voice and sharp pointed whip of Capt. Delaine. But now——

Shifting about, her head low against her breast, her forepaws fringed with claws, her yellow teeth showing as she hissed and bellowed in her fright laden rage, Beauty held her place at the side of the arena nearest the den which sheltered her cub, and refused to leave, in spite of the roaring commands of the trainer, in spite of the leaden tipped whip, even in spite of the sting of paper wadding and the flare of burning powder, as he fired at her, again and again. Over on the other side of the big enclosure Rajah, the tiger, fretted and roared as the assistant trainers held him to his pedestal. Delaine had no time for him now—his battle was with Beauty, the mother, rising even above the innate fear of an animal before a human, that she might strive to return to her cub. Once, frenzied, maddened, she leaped, only to be struck on the head in mid-air by the heavily loaded butt of the bullwhip, and to tumble to the ground, there to lay scrambling and all but unconscious, before she summoned the strength to renew the fight. At last——

A bound; Delaine was safely through the door and outside the arena, his steelly eyes shifting maliciously, his nostrils extended slightly as they pulled the air into laboring lungs.

"Put that cat back in her den!" he commanded. "Can't do anything with her on account of that cub. Send Capetown into the arena in her place."

The runway again. Beauty was back in her cage, licking her cub and fretting over it, while out in the arena the shouts of Delaine and the cracking of his whip resounded as he kept the tiger and its new working partner, Capetown, the Nubian lion, from each other's throats; beginning the series of lessons that, through their very ferocity, would force them to forget their natural enmities in becoming menials to a greater power even than that of tradition—fear. But Beauty took little notice. Never before had she been allowed to leave that arena a victor—and to Beauty it could only mean that her days of servitude were at an end, for Beauty was only a caged animal of the jungles, and Beauty did not, could not, know. So she mothered her cub and was content as the afternoon died, and the contest of the arena ended, only to come to her feet again at a voice outside the bars. It was Delaine, cursing her, before he left the menagerie house—and two hours later he was back, cursing again.

But this time his voice was lowered, and he moved cautiously about the place, watchful, furtive. But for him the animal house was deserted; it was evening, the night watchman had not yet come on duty. Swiftly he fashioned a hook from a piece of heavy wire and with this reached between the bars, while Beauty, her cub behind her, watched and growled. Slowly the hook went to the heavy wire netting which covered the bars leading to the tiger's cage, and worked at the insecure fastenings. A few minutes of effort and the grating fell, leaving only the bars between, safe enough as concerned Beauty and Rajah—but far different for the small body of the cub.

Quickly the hook was withdrawn now, to give place to the prod rod. A savage lunge, a breathless grunt from Beauty, and she had been knocked, spitting, and snarling, away from the baby she had protected. A swifter sweep of the weapon, and it had caught the cub and driven it, toddling and scrambling forward, its tiny, frightened yells growing greater with every step. Furiously Beauty leaped, only to be beaten back again. And before her muscles could concentrate into another plunge, the rod in the hands of Delaine had swept the cub through the intervening bars and far into the tiger's den.

A roar, racking, bellowing, as Rajah leaped from his slothful position at the far end of the den and regarded the huddled, yowling, frightened intruder. A screaming yell as Beauty, free now, pounded vainly against the bars in leap after leap, or, stretching forth her paws, sought to catch her cub with her claws and drag it to safety again. But the prod rod had been shoved through the bars of the next den now, darting about in swift, dark lines, to cut off the baby's escape and to edge it closer to the tiger. A strange cub in a caged animal's den means just one thing—death!

Again a roar from Rajah, lower now, and rumbling. Like the tremendous cat he was, he crouched, his yellow eyes following every movement of the unfortunate interloper, his big paws padding nervously, his sleek muscles seeming to glide into tensity beneath his skin. Then a bound, the slap of great paws on the floor, a screaming yowl from the cub—and the crunching of heavy jaws. A laugh, low and satisfied. The clanging of the prod-rod as it was returned to its usual resting place. Then the door of the menagerie house opened and closed. A half hour later the night watchman, investigating the racking howl of an animal mother, found the wire netting in Beauty's cage pulled from place, evidently by one of her leaps, and the cub dead in the tiger's den—too often the usual end of an animal youngster when it wanders from home in the circus. And so he reported in routine fashion to the animal men when they came on duty the next morning, and added that Beauty had quieted down during the night.

Quiet indeed; quieter than the animal men ever before had seen the great, sleek, working leopard. Flat on her haunches in the middle of her cage she lay, her eyes centered on the tiger's den and its two occupants, the big, striped murderer, and the crumpled little thing it had killed, her baby. Nor did she move when the animal man dragged forth the tiny puff of fur, and carried it away. For Beauty was in a waking unconsciousness.

The tiger roared and leaped about his den as weeding time came and the great hunks of meat were pushed between the bars. Beauty did not eat. The morning progressed; Delaine came to her cage and called to her gruffly. She only moved her head and stared at him in vapid, disconnected fashion. The trainer swung his big shoulders and turned to the animal men.

"Grieving," he announced. "Won't work her today. Be all over it tomorrow. Put Rajah and Capetown in there again, and I'll whoop it up with them." Then as he saw a man and woman enter from the other end of the menagerie and stare in surprise at the undersized arena before the hippopotamus den:

"Remember what I said about letting Martin and Bayliss work that hip only between ten and eleven. It's too fat. I'm not going to let any animal get worked to death around this show—not while I'm running the menagerie."

He moved away, and soon the watchful eyes of Beauty saw the runway placed against the door of the tiger's cage. And she trailed him with those eyes, out into the steel arena and to the struggle between the lion, the Bengal, and the man who was mastering them, then back to the cage again. Out of it all something was evolving in Beauty's brain, the foundation of a hate that will live in a leopard's being for years, smouldering under a cover of cunning docility until, at last, the time comes—to strike! Beauty did not know it now; she only realized that this great orange and black thing with its white belly and cotton tipped ears had killed her cub; that it was greater than she, stronger, more powerful, and that it could kill her, too, if it cared. She only knew that it must be watched; that it was a thing of danger; that the old instinct of preservation within her cautioned wariness and strategy and a vigilance unending. And it was during this realization that the hate which was to come began to breed and to develop hate that would never cease.

She was a thing fascinated; yet no growl came from her spotted throat, no hiss passed over her long sharp teeth. Her game would be a waiting one, when her torn brain recovered sufficiently for treacherous cunning to assume command—and instinct was caring for her now. She did not even retreat to her corner at the sight of Delaine as he approached her cage, in spite of the fact that his voice was raised and angry. She merely looked at him, expending little more interest upon him than upon the young, intense man at his side—and certainly none, for she could not understand, upon the words. Delaine jabbed forth a hand.

"See that leopard in there? I'm going to work her, too, together with the lion and tiger and horse and dog. And do you think I won't? Wait—that's all—wait. Then you'll see whether you ever could get away with a bum hippopotamus rolling a ball."

"Then I should think——" the voice was quietly insistent—"that if you've got such a wonderful act you'd at least give us a fair chance to develop ours. A person can't do anything with just an hour a day."

"An hour?" Delaine glowered at him. "How much more do you want? I'm not going to let you kill that hip!"

"He seems to be in pretty good health now and we've been working him all winter. At least," came coldly, "he doesn't know what it means to feel the touch of a whip or to have powder marks on his forehead!"

Delaine snorted.

"Don't get away from the subject! I say you've been working that hip too long at a time. I know. I'm the menagerie superintendent. You've had plenty of time——"

"It's slow work trying to pound anything into a hippopotamus' brain. He can't understand like other beasts."

"Nobody asked you to get up the act."

"But Mr. Williams gave us the right to do it. He said that if we could do what we claimed——"

"He wasn't figuring on me putting on a feature. When he knows that, there'll be a difference."

"He knows already."

"Went to him and whined, eh?"

The face of Tom Bayliss became white—his hands clenched, slowly to relax.

"The position of animal superintendent gives you a great deal of leeway," he said at last in forced calmness. "I never whined to anybody. I simply told Mr. Williams, as owner of the show, what had happened. We're both to put on our acts at the same time, on opening day. And the best one wins."

A sneer, as Delaine turned his back. For a moment Bayliss hesitated in white anger, then, to free himself from the possibility of violence that might spoil his one chance of success, hurried out of the animal house. Delaine placed his hand between the bars of the leopard den and snapped his fingers.

"Beauty!" he ordered, "come out of that! Wake up there! Hear me, wake up!"

Slothfully, almost dazedly, the animal ceased her gazing into the tiger's den, and obeyed as Delaine commanded her forward, coming slowly toward the outstretched hand, even allowing the big trainer to rumple her ears and smooth the hair of her neck. Delaine's eyes narrowed.

"Thought so," he murmured, "it's taken all the fight out of her. Guess I'll try her out after all." He blew his whistle. "Put the runway up to his den. I'm going to take on this cat for a little session, alone."

And this time, Beauty made no objection. There was little need for the whip; less for the blank cartridge revolver. Like an automaton, Beauty went through her rote of tricks, one after the other, displaying no fight, no insurrection. Delaine grinned and stepped out of the arena.

"She's O. K." was his verdict. "That punk getting killed knocked out her backbone. We'll work all three cats together tomorrow."

And when tomorrow came, Delaine's sole task was that of handling the Bengal and the great Nubian. Cunning had come to Beauty to combine with hate, the cunning which sent her within reach of the tiger's claws time after time, which caused her to sit passive and obedient upon her pedestal while her enemy circled about her, their fur touching more than once as the angry jungle cat sought to evade the lash of Delaine or to leap upon its own enemy, the Nubian. Not once did Beauty fail in her rote, not a false movement did she make, not once did her claws extend or forepaws jab the air in circles before her as the other animals bounded past or the whip in Delaine's hands cut into her flesh in accompaniment to his various commands. Beauty had lost her fear for him, in a more intense emotion, and in losing that fear, looked upon him only as a disagreeable thing which must be obeyed and endured that the mask of her vengeance not be torn aside.

An hour, then a rest of the same period, only to go back to work again. Long before, at the other end of the menagerie house, Tom Bayliss and Alice Martin had pleaded for more time with their lubberly, genial, pig-headed river horse—in vain—and Delaine watched them with a short, ugly grin on his thick lips as they went out of the menagerie house. The world was good. The animal which he had feared the most, the agile, sleek, fast working Beauty, had become the most docile, the most obedient of all. And that meant worlds. A leopard, when it is consistently bad, is all but impossible.

Work and rest, rest and work, throughout the long day, until at last, worn out from frenzy, from anger, and from beatings, the lion and the tiger ceased to snarl at one another and sat on their pedestals, side by side. Down went Delaine's lash and he turned toward the door.

"Enough for today!" He was rubbing the aching muscles of his whip arm. "I'll be here at nine in the morning, and go to it again. Give Beauty some catnip and an extra feed. She's a good girl!"

And just as Beauty could not know the workings of the brain of Fred Delaine, the trainer could have no intimation of the seething thing that was fermenting in the mind of the leopard which had lost her cub. Beauty was a good girl, Beauty went through her rote, Beauty obeyed; that was enough. And Delaine smiled again, while from the semi-darkness of the leopard's cage, gleaming eyes reflected the light of the open, sunlit win-money while the sun was still high did not tend to temper the acerbity of their remarks.

Nothing that the crack shots of the range could do would satisfy either Sawdy or Carpy. Van Horn, himself considered an expert with rifle and gun, was master of these ceremonies, and the belittling by the Sleepy Cat sports of the best the cowboys could show nettled him. "What've you got that'll beat it?" he demanded. "Before you knock this any more put up some better shooting."

The taunt went far enough home to stir the fault finders. Sawdy and Carpy took grumpy counsel together. Presently they hunted up Laramie, who, in front of the ranch house, was talking horses with Kitchen and Doubleday. They told him the situation and asked for help.

"Come over to the creek and show the bunch up, Jim," was Sawdy's appeal.

The response was cold. Laramie refused to take any part in the shooting. Sawdy could not move him. In revenge he borrowed what money Laramie had—not much in all—and went back sore. With the peeve of defeated men, the Sleepy Cat sports called for more horse racing to retrieve their fortunes—only to lose what money they had left and suffer fresh jeering from Van Horn and his following.

But abating in defeat and with empty pockets nothing of their confident swagger, Carpy and Sawdy, reinforced this time by Lefever—McAlpin trailing along as a mourner—headed again for the ranch house after Laramie.

They found him on a bench where he could command the front door, talking idly to Bill Bradley and whittling. He was there intent on waylaying Nancy, who was inside. His friends descended on him for the second time in a body. They laid their discomfiture before him. They begged him to pull them out of the hole. It was too much in the circumstances to refuse the men he counted on when he himself needed friends, but he yielded with an ill grace.

"What do you want me to do?" he demanded, finally.

They told him. He would not stand up before a target, nor would he shoot in competition with anybody else.

"I've only got a few cartridges, anyway," he objected, "and suppose when they're shot away these fellows get a fight going on me?"

It was argued that there were enough gunmen in the Sleepy Cat crowd for defensive purposes and that there was no end of available ammunition. A way was found to meet Laramie's objections on every point, and it only remained to hatch up a scheme for lightening the cattlemen's pockets.

With Carpy, Lefever, and Sawdy, Laramie sat down apart. An exchange of views took place. Sawdy had something in mind he had once seen Laramie achieve, and on this—and the possibility of its success—the talk centered. The feat, it was conceded, would be a stiff one. It was put up to Laramie. He consented, after some wrangling and with misgivings, to try to pull the thing for the benefit of his misguided friends. The minute consent was assured, his backers hurried away in a body—McAlpin as crier, Lefever and Sawdy to raise money, and Carpy to bully Van Horn and Stone and their following.

The news that Laramie would shoot caused a stir. Not every one present had seen him shoot. His reputed mastery of rifle and gun was often in question; and no more grueling test before friends and enemies could ever be given than what he was to attempt now.

Not every one got clearly, as the talk went on, just what the trial was to be. Sawdy, having reinforced his resources, announced the event as Laramie against his record—to tie or to beat.

Laramie himself, unmindful of the controversy, held to the bench. He was still sitting there, head down and still whittling, when Bradley came to say the crowd was waiting. He asked Bradley to bring up his horse.

Kate coming out of the house drew his attention. He threw away the stick in his hand and rose.

"I hear you are going to shoot," she said.

"Can't get out of it very well, I guess."

"You wouldn't shoot the time I asked you to."

"I didn't actually refuse, did I?"

"Pretty near it."

"It's a harder case today. Your men have got all the money. My friends are broke. And they've asked me to help them out somehow. That's the only reason. If you really want to see me shoot, all you've got to do is to tell me the next time you see me."

"Oh, I'm going to see you shoot now." She looked at the gun holster slung at his left hip. "They say you are left handed."

"They've got work enough lined up today for both my hands."

Bradley returned with the horse and climbed awkwardly down from the saddle. Laramie tried the cinches and turned to Kate.

"Are you all ready?" she asked.

"Just about."

"You try the cinches; I should think you'd want to try your gun."

"I tried that this morning before I left home. All I've got to do before I begin is to slip an extra cartridge into the cylinder."

Leading his pony, Laramie, clinging to the talk as long as he could, walked with Kate toward the creek.

Leaving her on a slight rise, where he told her he thought she could see, he got into the saddle and rode down to where the crowd had assembled.

THE MOTHER

stared at her in a surprised manner and went on.

The big top, with its crowds, and with a heavy shouldered man in glittering uniform waiting beside the arena gate, a new whip, leaden tipped and thicker than ever, lashing slowly before him, a revolver shoved into the top of each high boot. The runways. Then a scamper for the pedestals. They were in the arena again—but the crowd was not watching. Instead its attention was centered upon the smaller enclosure and the novelty of a lubberly, trick hippopotamus. A bellow came from the throat of Delaine. Faster and faster his orders sounded as he whipped the beasts around the arena, forcing them to show fight, yelling and leaping before them to attract the attention of the crowd. It succeeded in a measure—then the eyes of the thousands went back to the fat, amiable, barrel-jawed old hippopotamus and the pretty girl who enticed him into trotting about the arena after a lettuceleaf. Delaine cursed. Then as he snapped the whip with greater ferocity he wheeled with a sudden idea.

"Going to cut the rest of this routine stuff," he shouted at an animal man. "Got that horse and dog ready?"

"They're in the menagerie tent, sir. We didn't think——"

"Hurry 'em up. I'll pull one more stunt. That'll last 'til you get here. Beauty! Back to your pedestal! Hear me! Back there!" But it was not until the whip cut across her face that the animal obeyed. Deeper, deeper, the excitement was working into the leopard's blood. In her brain something was tugging against its bonds, fighting for freedom. Back on her pedestal, she clawed at the whip and Delaine cursed her.

"Why haven't you done that before? Cut it now—hear me—cut it! Stay on that pedestal. All right. Capetown—place! Rajah—place on that turntable! Beauty! Place!"

The whip and obedience as the animals took their positions on the turntable and allowed themselves to be swung about. Then to their pedestals. Outside the arena waited the horse and the dog; the band had ceased; the announcers were bawling forth their proclamations—and the crowd was watching at last. Delaine leaped to the door and unstrapped it, before the helpers could assist.

"Bind it tight, in case this nag goes nutty and tries to break out," he ordered as the horse and dog passed within. He looked out at the crowds and grimaced toward the hippopotamus arena, deserted of attention now. Then, as his whip curled about him, he whirled to his task. "Beauty! Up, Beauty!" and the leopard obeyed. "Rajah! Off that pedestal and up! Up there! Up!" A snapping crack as the whip went out; the tiger, confused, had left its resting place and begun to slink about the arena. It swerved as the lash caught it, darted between the horse and the trainer, then behind him—while from high above, the eyes of Beauty became suddenly eager, suddenly alert and shifting. That tugging something in her brain was stronger now, and more compelling.

The tiger had returned before her, writhing and snarling and fighting against the attacks of Delaine. Now he was near the horse, and the whip dropped to the ground as the trainer reached for his bootlegs. A flare of flame, then another.

"Up on that horse! Up, Rajah! Up!"

The tiger did not obey. Again the flame and four times more in quick succession. And then it was that Beauty's muscles bunched, then it was that the tugging something in her brain freed itself and leaped into command. The tiger was clawing madly, twisting and roaring, clawing with all its strength, not at Delaine but at its own eyes. Blinded! Beauty leaped!

Delaine saw her spring and sought to block it. In vain. The horse began to gallop about the arena, the dog yelping about his legs. Capetown started to slink from his pedestal. Beauty was free, to fight as she chose, and her teeth sank deep in the throat of the tiger. But only for a moment. Then she sprang free, to scratch and tear with all her strength at the Samson-like vulnerability of her enemy—its eyes.

Outside the arena was a world gone mad, as the massed thousands fought and scrambled on their way down from their seats, hampering the animal men as they strove to force their way to the arena. Within the big enclosure, a heavy shouldered, fear-ridden man screamed in vain—the hands which worked at the straps of the door were fumbling and numb with terror. And Delaine's fight was his alone.

Once he avoided Capetown as, suddenly maddened, he leaped at the throat of the plunging horse and felled it, while a yelping dog sought security beneath the turntable. Once he escaped Beauty as, bleeding from a chance blow of the tiger's claws, she turned spasmodically and tore at the first thing before her. But there was one thing that he could not avoid—the accident-directed bound of a blinded tiger, struggling in vain as it sought to loosen the hold of a leopard at its throat, for Beauty had attacked again.

Five shots were left and Delaine fired them all at the two beasts which came at him in one, Beauty clinging grimly to the Bengal's throat, the tiger scrambling vaguely in a frenzy of blind terror. Straight on came Rajah—nor did it know that human flesh was before it. Then the impact, throwing Beauty far to one side. But the tiger's claw had found flesh. In blindness, that was enough.

Outside the arena, a man and a girl struggled at the straps—cutting them. Then into the enclosure they fought their way, the girl driving the bloody jawed Capetown and the frenzied Beauty before her, the man firing bullet after bullet into the brain of the blinded Rajah as he sought to compel the great beast to leave the crumpled thing on the ground beneath it, a man and a girl, striving with all their strength to save the one who had sought their failure. A fourth bullet. A fifth. The tiger toppled. It fell. A swift movement. The man raised the limp body of Delaine in his arms. A leap, while a girl sped beside him, and they without the gate. But the man they had carried forth had ceased to breathe.

Crowds. The madness of panic—then quiet. Beauty was back in her cage again, licking at the clawmarks on her shoulders and breast, yowling softly now and then with the pain of it, but in her brain the tugging pain had ceased and there was peace. Beauty had killed a murderer—nor was it for her poor, dumb mentality to distinguish between the human and the beast.

the d'partment, an' he was temp'rarily engaged on a big piece of pussyfootin' what might keep him out night for days. Well, who wouldn't o' took that for a raw hint? I cert'nly did, an' I said maybe he might get so busy he wouldn' remember to come back at all. She pulls a smile—one o' them deep ones what make a man feel: 'What a rum I am to think I got a chance'—but she says to sit down, which I done.

"We lap up a couple o' highballs—oh, yeh, they cheat at the Wigwam if they know you ain't a rapper—an' Buster gets a young edge on an' starts in tellin' me where have I been all o' her young life an' such come-on guff as that. An' I ain't got no tin ear for it, neither, havin' for a long time nursed the hunch that Buster was about the niftiest blondie around them corners. So I says she would o' heard from me long ago, on'y I never was lucky enough or fast enough to ketch her between sweethearts. 'Aw, go on,' she pipes back. 'You din' hafto.' Which—I leave it to you—is the langwidge o' chase me.

"We stick for an hour or so an' then I trundle her home in taxi. She kisses me good night without knockout drops, an' says call her up—call her up.

"I admit I stepped to my room two feet offen the ground. You know, I ain't exac'ly no Rummyo. I've met a jane now an' then what could see me, but to cop a kiss offen Buster, the queen o' the layout, an' to have a phone date with her after she tells me that I look kind o' candy to her—well, it sent me to the hay with a smile on my puss an' a buzzin' in my bean.

"I wakes up about noon an' has my bacon an' eggs in bed. Then I lays out my silk shirt with the lavender stripes an' a red bow tie with green dots. This with the double breasted tan suit an' the canvas shoes stripped with tan leather, an' the crusher hat, looks to me like an outfit made to order for the flank attact on Buster Castle.

"They's nothin' left now but a shave, a massadge, an' a shampoo. So I breeze for Baldy Baldwin's barber shop.

"It's early in the afternoon of an off day, so Baldy is in there workin' alone. He's got a cust'mer in the chair all wrapped up in a hot, steamin' towel like they useta bring in champagne bottles in the days when—

"I nods to Baldy an' I says 'How long?' He says 'Oh, five minnits.' I looks at my watch an' it's about time for Buster to be up, so I says can I use his phone, an' he says sure, so I fish out a nickel an' goes to it. I drop the jit in the bottomless pit an' I calls Buster's number. I can see now, as I think back, how that must o' hit the ear o' the bird in that chair with the towel over his puss. It ain't no use kiddin' you, it was Harv Peters.

"I get Buster, she talks sugar to me, I tell her I dreampt of her an' some more bum slop, an' I ask her did she hear from her busy sweetie, Peters, an' she says yes, but he ain't comin' over that afternoon, so I cuts in quick on that openin' an' says well, I'd be over in about twenty minnits—I was jus' gonna get shaved nice an' clean an' then massadged nice an' smooth so I—so I wouldn' scratch her soft, satin face. Can you beat that for boob chatter from a grown-up simp?

"I'm standin' on one foot with a bright beam on my map, waitin' for the come-back.

"I got it!

"But it didn't come over the wire. It lit from behind. I got a clout with Harv Peters's billy that crumpled me on the floor an' I heard sweet melodies an' seen the angels. He might o' spared me a kick in the face, but I s'pose I had it comin'—anyways, it come.

"See where them three teeth is missin'? When I woke up in the hospital a nurse was standin' by me. I asks where was I an' she says the report on the sheet was that I was hit by a flivver while attemptin' to cross a street out o' my turn.

"Next mornin' I got a sore letter from Buster sayin' I was a fine bird, gettin' her in dutch with Harv when she hadn't give me no incouridgement, an' that a girl was always at the mercy of a lot of crows what keep callin' her up an' givin' her a bad name an' causin' unjust suspicions of her conduc', but she would be careful hereafter what kind o' buzzards she let talk to her.

"She says she heard from Harv how I was hit by a machine an' she was glad of it, an' thank her stars Harv was a gen'leman an' didn' dirty his hands on me, like he could of an' would of if it hadn' been that he was an officer an' thus held in check an' unable to follow out his manly inclinations. She was right this far—he did not dirty his hands on me—only his loaded billy an' his shoe.

"Now that I'm out again, an' at least while I'm havin' three teeth bridged in, I'm fancy free an' off the feeble sex. An' this goes for life—if ever again I pick up a receiver, it'll be to call the police, an' you know what a fine chancet there is o' that."

dows, eyes which watched one thing, and one alone—the tiger!

The next day and the next—it was all the same. A week, while the gleam in the eyes of Fred Delaine grew more brilliant and while the features of Tom Bayliss and Alice Martin reflected less and less of hope. A fortnight—in which Beauty still remained the docile, fast working, obedient leopard, and while Capetown and Rajah laid aside their racial differences in deference to the whip and gun of Capt. Delaine. Then an order; hurrying animal men who returned with a decrepit, white horse, its head shielded by heavy, padded canvas, its back covered by a platform which extended from its neck to its tail, while on each side hung thick curtains of canvas to protect its ribs and vitals from jagged, feline claws. Into the arena it was led, while hesitant animal men waited with the runway. Delaine waved an arm.

"Beauty first!" The door of the den opened and the leopard came forth, to crouch instinctively as she saw the strange, armored thing in the arena, then to flex as the whip caught her.

"Up Beauty!" came the gruff, commanding voice. "Up! Up! There—good girl—hold steady!" For Beauty was on the platform of the horse's back, awaiting the next cut of the whip, the next command. Delaine turned. "Now Rajah!"

A change of the runway. Again a beast which crouched, which hissed and roared as it caught the scent of horseflesh, its natural food. Then it cowered as the whip caught it full upon the tender nostrils and the revolver blazed its powder straight toward its eyes. Half blinded, confused, the big animal slunk about the arena, twisted, sought to avoid the whining, vicious whip, and failing, leaped to its place on the horse's back. There, with one last spasm of fury, it whirled to its haunches and with four or five, quick, boxerlike blows, dug its claws deep into the spotted hide of Beauty beside it. The leopard hissed—then quieted. The cunning in her brain had reserved the pressure upon the trigger of hate for another time and the tiger turned sullenly away in answer to the whip in the hands of the man below. A third command:

"Capetown!"

Again a battle of cruelty and ferocity. Again a victory for the heavy shouldered man with his bullwhip and his gun. The three cat beasts were bunched on the back of a loping horse, a horse that some day would be killed to feed them, and riding around the arena.

Five minutes he held them there—then back to their cages to rest. And then he sneered into the faces of Alice Martin and Tom Bayliss, passing from their work of the morning.

"I guess you're going to beat that with your blood sweating Bohemoth from the River Nile. And that's just the beginning!"

The man shut his jaws tight and walked grimly on. But the woman stopped.

"Please pardon my curiosity," came quietly, "but I can't help wondering why a person who can whip animals into doing such wonderful things hasn't the courage to chastise himself into being a man!"

Then she, too, went on, while Delaine, his purple lips standing out grotesquely from his white face, swished his whip through the air and, cursing, sent the animal men for the runway.

"Bring 'em out again!" he roared. "And hurry it up!"

Nor was even Beauty spared the slash and biting cut of the bullwhip as he beat the three animals about the arena, sent them time after time through their routine tricks, and at last to the back of the horse. Once again, tired, fretful, ugly as usual, the Bengal roared and clawed at the leopard beside it. But still the cunning of her brain held steady—and she was only a cowed, unresponsive thing. Delhine cracked his whip.

"What's the matter with you there?" he yelled at the cringing leopard, "show some pep! Where's your fight—eh?" But Beauty only stared at him with vacuous eyes—and accepted the beating.

Four days. The dog was brought in, to cower and yelp in fright as the beasts hissed at it, to seek escape, to lie on the ground in terror or crawl to the trainer's feet and whine—but at last to obey as the others obeyed, at last, as the days went by, to ride on the neck of the horse, forefeet on its padded head, while the great cats crouched behind. And then came the day when the arenas no longer were in place, when heavy wagons truckled out, one by one, from the winter quarters yard, when there were shouts and the cludding of heavy teams of six and eight horses; when the runways were used only to guide the various animals from their "permanent" dens of the winter to the gilded, resplendent cages that would form their home until the snow should fly again. The call of "the bluebird" was sounding, spring had come in earnest; and the circus was on the move.

But the racking journey of the long trains brought no change in the actions of Beauty; it brought none of the pacing that she once had done in her big, summer den, none of the fierceness and lively defiance by which she once had been known. At the feeding stops, the animal men found her, as usual, crouched in a corner, her eyes searching, almost piteously, for something she could not see. Nor did that look fade until the cages were lined by the big arena under the canvas big top, and the runways in place for the three days of rehearsal before the opening matinée. Already within the steel inclosure was a great, heavy bodied tiger, and the look of searching ceased.

The whip and the gun and the dog and horse again—and Beauty side by side with a murderer. At the other end of the tent another arena, smaller, was up and an act working. No gun barked from there, no whip slashed the air, no bawling voice roared curses. But to Beauty it was nothing. Besides, Rajah had clawed her again, and the whip of Delaine had seared her hide because she had voiced no remonstrative roar. Another day, another—then Delaine turned suddenly from beside Beauty's cage as a woman passed.

"Alice!"

The woman hesitated, then turned toward him. The other animal men were far away. Delaine's lips took on their inevitable sneer. "What do you think about it now?"

"You have a very good act—if that's what you mean?"

"How's yours?" he asked it bluntly, and she looked straight into his eyes.

"You ought to know."

"It ain't going over, Alice."

"I—I——" But he did not catch the break in her voice. Instead he reached forward and caught her by the arm in a grasp intended for gentleness.

"Then why don't you get some sense? You know what's going to happen, don't you, if that act don't go over? You're closed—both of you. There ain't room on this show for two feature animal acts and other people have taken the places you gave up to try this fool stunt. Where you going—if you're closed?"

"I don't know," she said it wearily. "But we'll live. Tom can find a job outside the business—and so can I."

"Yeh, at ten a week. There ain't any hundred dollar jobs floating around for extroupers. Listen, Alice," his face was close to hers, "why don't you come in on a regular animal act—one that'll make you a knockout all over the business? Did you ever figure what this mixed act of mine would look like with a woman handling it, and the man just stalling around? Huh? Did you?"

Her face lighted.

"You mean——"

"Say the word!"

"You mean that Tom and I——"

"No," one side of his mouth curled sharply, "just you."

Then he stood and stared. For she had said nothing; merely turned and walked away. That afternoon at rehearsal, Rajah and Capetown got more beatings than ever, and Beauty the most of all. For again she had refused to fight back. Then the long night of rest, and——

Morning. The glaring of a circus band, the thick lined curbs, the truckling of the heavy wagons and the steel throated scream of the calliope, far in the rear. Noon. The dusty warmth of the circus lot, the yelping of the ballyhoo men on the kidshow platform just beyond the menagerie top, the hurrying workmen with their arms full of straw, the sweating candy butchers as they made their last preparations in the great, hollow squared counter in the center of the menagerie top. One o'clock. The flooding crowds. The peanuts. The popcorn. The thickly clustered crowds before the picket line of the elephants—only to give way to a sudden thinning as an hour traveled by, and the mass flooded into the big top and to its seats. Noise. Shouts. The sharp blast of a bugle and the brass-throated music of massed bands. It was the entry. The show was at the threshold of its season; already the teamsters were hitching their horses to the cages of Capetown, of Rajah, of Beauty and to the deep-tanked den of Bumbo, the hippopotamus, that they might drag them into the bigger tent for the test that would mean slinking hearted revenge for one—or happiness and love and peaceful security for two. Beauty rose and for the first time in weeks began to pace her cage. Excitement was in her blood, the excitement of the crowds, the noise, the band blaring in the far away. She hissed as an animal man stuck a hand between the bars and sought to rumple her ears. He

The Tearful Tale of a Telephone Tragedy

By Jack Lait

MET Pete the Gun the other day. Pete was looking slicker than a new nickel. I commented on it while I shook his hand. I always shake his hand, because I like him and because while I hold his hand I know it isn't in my watch pocket. Pete plays no faves. He is a "gun," which is a crook-slang description for a thief. No, it does not mean a gunman or any other violent type of criminal. The word "gun" and the word gun are not related; "gun" is an abbreviation of "gunniff," which, in Yiddish, means thief. They needn't have abbreviated it for Pete, for he went all the way.

When I told him that he was looking very by jingo he smiled and said:

"Why not? I've cut out my worst habit."

I asked him whether he meant smoking, and he said that wasn't it—and to prove it he took the cigar I reached him. I asked him whether he meant alcohol, and he looked expectantly toward my hip pocket, but he was out of luck. I knew he had never been "on the hop." And so I "gave up."

"Come on," I yielded. "What was this awful habit you cut out?"

His answer was in one word: "Telephoning."

I think I understood fairly well what he meant, even before he got into the story that he told me, the story I am about to tell you.

Has it ever occurred to you the telephone is probably the most insidious little instrument ever brought upon this earth by the devil's private secretary?

We wouldn't know what to do without it. But! Two-thirds of the divorces, crimes, triangles, flirtations, trespasses, scandals, and split-ups of today would never have had a chance had it not been for the telephone. It is such a universal thing—it reaches alike the just and the unjust, the innocent and the felonious, those who ought to know better and those who let not the right hand know what cometh through the receiver held in the left.

There is a good deal of jesting and gagging about bad service; but the service isn't half as wicked as what it serves.

There is a psychological something in talking and being talked to without those restraining factors of face-to-face communication. So much may be said when there is no chance of being "crowded," either physically or optically.

A girl can sit on one man's lap and (through the telephone) tell another man how well she loves him. A husband can telephone three times a day how lonesome he is, whereas he can't register anything but impatient annoyance when he's in the same room with wifie. Husbands phone regularly, as a rule; they do it ostensibly to ask how the wife is, but often to find out where the wife is. Wife is at home—fine. Then, if she is wise, she calls back to see where hubby is.

If the telephones were cut off for a week there would be not only commercial paralysis but social chaos and domestic panic. It would be a blow to quick acquaintances, pat excuses, and fishy prevarications. It would be a crusher to the staller's alibi and a wallop to the welcher's get-by.

You drop a nickel in a gum slot and you get five little slabs of sweet and flavored wax, all nicely sprinkled with sugar, wrapped in pink kimomos, and a valuable coupon besides. You drop a nickel in a phone, and what do you get? Maybe you get nothing; maybe you get a busy signal—these if you are in luck. If you connect, you get—well, you'll probably never know what you get. You've seen telephone wires tremble and quiver? They have a sense of shame. If they had a sense of humor they'd laugh themselves to shreds.

This flashed through my mind, assembled and organized by what Pete the Gun had said. I had known it long—so did you; but I had never had it quite so pointedly put up to me before until Pete said that he had abandoned his worst habit, telephoning.

I knew that he had not come to the great divining light through reflection or introspection. Some concrete lesson, some critical climax, had awakened him to this dawn of realization that telephoning is a dangerous and disorderly habit.

I felt that if I drew him out he would tell me. And for your sakes I worked on him. There being no saloons, the job was more difficult than it would have been in 1919 B. P. (Before Prohibition), but there was an ice cream parlor. Pete was scarcely a sundae fiend or a banana crush maniac, but he was human, so the old adage as written by a man in Iowa applied: "When we are far from the drinks that we crave, we'll lap up the drinks that are near and try not to choke." I bought him some root beer, with the accent not on the root, out of consideration for his feelings and his past attachments, and we sat down to a round table on spindly and twisted wire legs, and he told me:

"I jus' got outta the hosp'tal a month ago. We kep' it pretty quiet on account o' Harv Peters him bein' a dick, an' it might o' set him down in the department if a rap come into headquarters that he was rowin' with a grifter over a frail, see?"

I knew Harvey Peters, of course—plain clothes man assigned to pawnshops, one of the main links in underworld chains, and therefore a man of no minor consequence in the haunts and habitats of thievery and outlawry. I had known Peters as a cunning, conniving fellow, not always applying those talents to the betterment of the community at large; a rather presentable man with physical courage and not much moral stamina.

He was a terror to thieves who were not "in his book." Just what it meant to be there you may imagine as well as I could tell you—it ran from out and out hush money to social friendships, for Peters was of the type of policemen who cannot be in the underworld and yet not of it. He lived in "the district," frequented its resorts (telling those who didn't know better that he was "keeping his eyes open"), and followed largely the ethics, manners, and standards of his environment.

That he and Pete the Gun should have clashed over a female was not in any way extraordinary—they had about the same tastes.

"Who was she?" I shot.

He laughed. So will you if you still remember a story named "Caprice"—for it was our cute little heroine of that triangular tragedy of guns, knives, and knuckles, Buster the Booster, the bobbed-haired little counter-snatcher who made monkeys of strong, brave, bad guys.

The brightest thing I could think of to say was, "Well, what do you think of that?" And he answered "I think I was a sap."

Now, I don't see why he should have said that. If one must be a "gun," one might do worse than to register a reaction when gazing into the big blue lamps of Buster the Booster. True, Buster had served in the home for incorrigible girls, but Pete had served in Sing Sing and Danemora; true, Buster was a shoplifter, but Pete was a "dip"; true, Buster had been the star of some dozens of atmospheric romances, but Pete had played opposite less savory ingenues and even a few character women; true, Buster was a coquette and a double-crossing little fox, but Pete was a cabaret hound and a double-dealing wolf. So I did not entirely see why Pete should cudgel himself because he had fancied Buster, who in her young time had ridden in an alderman's limousine, a patrol wagon, and a charge-account taxi.

Pete went on: "You see, I meet Buster down in the Wigwam one night. She was expectin' Harv Peters, but he phones up that he's stuck on a case. I don't know who he could o' found these days that still got a case left. Anyways, they was a mild scramble for Buster when it got noised that she was 'open,' an' she didn' get up an' blow out, becus in the firs' place you know her—she's got to have the life all the time, an' besides she'd run up a check an' it would o' broke her elbow if she had to reach for her own jack to come clean.

"I kind o' eases over an' I says if she's been stuck up I'd have my refreshments at her table, kind o'. She says she ain't been stuck up—on'y her sweetie was a guy what had important matters to handle for know nothing about it, but it was a dirty trick, and tell this town that cattlemen fight but they fight fair. It'll do more to set you right and to set everything right on the range than anything else you could possibly do. And don't make a mistake. Laramie'll follow that wire pulling for years, but what he'll get the man that did it. I know him. He's got a memory like an Indian."

Like all well meaning and candid friends, the Doctor found himself at once in for a deal of angry abuse, but, as he explained, he had taken so much abuse from patients at various periods of his career—and abuse fully justified—that nothing Barb could add, deserved or undeserved, to the volume would move him.

"As our old governor back in Wisconsin said, Barb, 'I seen my duty and I done it,'" was the Doctor's only retort to Doubleday's wrath. "Now if you're in a hurry, Barb, don't let me keep you, not a minute. I had my say and if there's anything pressing you down street go to it."

But angry as Doubleday appeared, Carpy had given him something to think about. Consultations were held—by precisely whom, no one could say, but in them there was dissension. Van Horn vehemently opposed any further overtures to Laramie and he was vastly put out at being overruled. While the discussions were going on, he talked in a veiled but emphatic way to Kate about the queer way her father was acting. Van Horn would shake his head with violent emphasis at the way things were going. But when Kate poured oil on the waters of his discontent, Van Horn was always responsive and stayed to dinner or for the evening, if he were asked—and Kate was alone.

On the gentler side, however, he could make no headway. When he tried headaches for sympathy, Kate was stony hearted. When he asked her one day at the spring to take down her hair, she told him she wore a wig. He looked at her amazed. And in spite of his objections to placating Laramie a decision very unpalatable to him was reached.

Pettigrew as spokesman approached Laramie and insisted, in order to allay bad feeling, on replacing the barb wire. When Laramie declared the wire must be put back by the men that had cut it, there was naturally an impasse, but Tenison and Carpy, aided jointly by the representations of Lefever and Sawdy, induced Laramie to forego his punitive attitude and accept the amende as offered. This, as the doctor had predicted, put a pleasanter face on the tangled affairs of the range. And to strike while their iron was hot, and to keep it hot, the cattlemen announced a big Fourth of July celebration, at which old scores should be forgotten and friends and enemies meet in goodfellowship. The place for it, after much talk, was fixed at Doubleday's ranch. The saloonkeepers of Sleepy Cat, except Tenison, fought this, but they lost out.

Since her own home was to be the scene of the celebration, Kate took a particular interest in the undertaking. She made herself, in a way, hostess, and her father gave her free rein. The big crowd that responded to the public invitation found awaiting them, as they picturesquely rode in twos and threes and groups up the creek to the ranch house, all the "fixin's" for a rousing celebration. Men came for as much as fifty miles and some of them by trails and over passes Kate had never even heard of. There were cattlemen, cowboys, sheepmen, little ranchers—all the conflicting elements of the country, besides a crowd from Sleepy Cat with the band, and all the town loafers that could possibly secure a conveyance.

There was for these latter worthies the attraction of a free feed—for they knew the prodigality of the cattlemen; but there was also the underlying hope that where so discordant elements were assembled a fight might occur; and nobody wanted to miss a fight. The principals necessary for a serious affair were present. The fact that all were armed was not significant, merely prudent. Men careless on this point were no longer attending celebrations of any sort around Sleepy Cat.

From the Falling Wall came the rustlers, every one of them except Doubleday's old foreman, Abe Hawk, who scorned all pretense of compromise. He advised Laramie not to go near the celebration. When Laramie intimated he might go Abe was greatly amazed. A master of bitter sarcasm, he trained their batteries on his sandy-haired friend and these failing he warned him he would be in serious danger. He intimated that the scheme was to get the rustlers all together and finish them in a bunch. In which event, one hated as Laramie was could hardly hope to escape unmolested. But Laramie persisted in his resolution to go, and he went.

Doctor Carpy made it a point to go. He was usually needed at Fourth of July celebrations professionally. But on this occasion he was, in matter of fact, sort of sponsor for the whole affair, and he brought Sawdy, Lefever, and Tenison along. The four drove out in the smartest wagon and behind the best team in the Kitchen barn, Kitchen with them and McAlpin driving.

By noon the big end of the crowd had arrived. The barbecue tables were set out under the trees along the creek. The roasting itself was in the skilled hand of John Frying Pan and before one o'clock he was ready to serve.

The day was fine, the crowd big, and everybody seemingly happy. Doubleday had told Kate, when arranging for the tables, that his particular friends would sit at his table, and she was on her way down to the creek to ask him how many there would be in the party, when whom should she find him talking with, of all men, but Laramie, who had just ridden over from the Falling Wall.

Before Kate could retreat her father had seen her. He called her over. To her astonishment he insisted on introducing to her his friend, Jim Laramie, of whom he was making as much as it was possible to make of a wholly undemonstrative man.

The band not far away was playing full tilt. Kate wished they could have made even more noise to hide her confusion, but there was nothing except to face the situation, much as it surprised her. Laramie, fortunately, seemed indisposed to say anything. He spent most of his time listening. Kate being far from demonstrative, her father was left to do the honors. And on such rare occasions as Barb was communicative, he was quite capable of good fellowship.

Laramie, however, seemingly under some restraint, soon made excuses and left to join the crowd.

Some of the little ranchmen had brought their wives along. A few of these women had their babies with them, and Kate returned to the house, where she made the mothers comfortable. There her father afterward ran across her. He stopped as he came up.

"You remember that man I introduced you to—Laramie?"

"Very well," Kate said wonderingly.

"Treat him well at dinner."

"But I'm going to eat here at the house." He shook his head. "You eat at the creek at my table."

She had no choice but to obey. When she returned to the pits the stones had been removed and John Frying Pan, with a pair of Sleepy Cat ice tongs, was lifting out the first big chunks of roasted meat. The crowd being called ran for the creek whooping and yelling, and while Kate watched John and his helpers dish up the meat the guests—nearly all men—seated themselves pellmell at the long benches. It was a noisy assemblage, overflowing with good nature, and when Kate very trim in corduroy, walked to the head of the table to take her seat, the demonstrative ones rose and led in a burst of cheers. Good spirit is contagious. Nancy enjoyed it, but when they began calling for a speech she ran away to the coffee boilers. From the coffee she returned to join her father, and to find with him and old man Pettigrew at the head of the table, Laramie, calmly seated, and the fourth place waiting for her.

Van Horn as host to other cattlemen and guests presided at the next table. Unluckily, where he sat, he could see Laramie opposite Kate. But if he was discomfited the group at the next table below, where Doctor Carpy presided, flanked by Lefever, Sawdy, Kitchen, and McAlpin, was correspondingly elated at the spectacle of the Falling Wall and the Crazy Woman sitting in harmony.

Despite the unpleasant stories Kate had heard about him she found nothing to complain of in Laramie's manners, except that he always drank with his spoon in his coffee cup. But he was, she told herself, on his good behavior, and under the circumstances would naturally try to appear at his best. Little as Kate relished her assignment of making things pleasant for him, the bubbling spirits of the occasion to some extent infected her, and she soon found it not difficult to help along with small talk and to make the queer combination at the table go.

There was really no great need for her to work hard in this way—both her father and Pettigrew were very lively. Laramie seemed a bit dazed at being set up with such honors in the house of his enemies. But though he did not volunteer much, when Kate said anything that afforded a chance for comment he improved it.

The talk went a good deal to cattle, and range matters, but Pettigrew, a crafty fellow, told good stories about men that everybody in and out of Sleepy Cat knew, and appealed frequently to Laramie for confirmation or a laugh. Some of the laughs he got were a little dry, but they were not ill natured, and Kate enjoyed the rough humor. The two cattlemen finished their dinner, and without ceremony got up to see how the crowd was being served, leaving Kate with Laramie. "How do you like old Pettigrew?" was the first thing Laramie asked her as the bearded cattleman moved away with her father.

"The only thing I don't like about him," said Kate, candidly, "is his eyes."

She was looking at Laramie as she spoke and finishing her coffee. He lifted his own cup. "You're a good observer," he said.

"How so?"

"A man's eyes are all there is to him. You don't mind if I smoke?"

"Not a bit."

He drew a sack of tobacco from a breast pocket.

"Not going to run away, are you?" He was fishing for cigarette paper when he asked. He spoke as if he had no special interest in the matter, yet the question startled her. Kate had not made a move to go, but she was thinking, when the question came, of how she might manage to escape. She flushed a little at being anticipated in her intention—just enough perhaps to let him see he had caught her, not to say irritated her. As luck would have it, Van Horn, who had risen, sauntered towards them. Kate was glad just then to see him. "I hope you got enough to eat," she said as he approached.

He seemed stiff—Kate did not realize what he was put out about. He made some answer and turned to Laramie. She felt at once the friction between the two men, not from anything she had reason to suspect or know—for she knew then nothing whatever of their personal relations. Nor was it from anything said; for an instant neither man spoke. Instinct must have made her conscious, for as soon as Van Horn looked at Laramie she felt the tension.

"Well, Jim, where'd you blow from?" demanded Van Horn after a pause.

Laramie was making ready to smoke. He was in no haste to answer, nor did he look at Van Horn, but continued, cowboy fashion, rolling his cigarette in the finger tips of his left hand, his right resting on his hip. "I didn't blow," he retorted.

"How'd you get here?" asked Van Horn.

"I was invited."

Van Horn laughed significantly. While Kate would rather have been out of it, she thought it time, since she was in it, to say something herself. "I didn't suppose anybody needed a special invitation for a Fourth of July celebration," she interposed. "The town has been covered for two weeks with bills inviting everybody."

Van Horn laughed again. "It wasn't you invited him, eh?" he demanded of Kate. The thing was said so unpleasantly she would have retorted on impulse, but Laramie took any possible words out of her mouth.

"Why don't you ask me who invited me? Barb Doubleday invited me. That's enough, isn't it? And Pettigrew invited me. And," he added, completing his cigarette in leisurely fashion, "while that wouldn't be any particular inducement—you invited me."

Van Horn stared. "How do you make that out?" he asked quickly.

"You asked me to take in this barbecue when you tried to get me to line up with you at the Mountain House."

Van Horn took alarm. "That was put up to you in confidence," he said angrily.

"So was the barbecue," responded Laramie. "I couldn't take in the first proposition, so I'm enjoying the second." He turned away from Van Horn, and, ignoring him, spoke to Kate. "You remember you said you were going to show me your ponies."

It was Kate's turn to stare. "You must be mistaken."

He did not press the subject. "Perhaps you've forgotten," was all he said indifferently.

"When or where did I ever say that?" Kate asked, resenting the intonation.

He looked down, then looking up his eyes rested on Kate's. He was not disturbed. "Is that a challenge?" he asked.

"If you wish to make it one," she returned coolly.

"The 'when' was one day at Sleepy Cat Junction, the 'where' was up the Falling Wall river below the canyon."

"O," she exclaimed, collecting herself, "I had forgotten."

"Do you remember now?" he asked, and she thought there was resentment in the question. "If you don't," he added, "we'll let it go."

"Why, I suppose I must have said something like that. Anyway," she added, "we'll go see them to make sure I've kept my promise. Come, Mr. Van Horn," she suggested, turning sweetly to him; "don't you want to see the ponies?" To include Van Horn it was plain to be seen would spoil the trip for Laramie, but she cared little for that. "Wait just a minute," she continued. "I must tell John Frying Pan before I go to give the Indians something to eat."

The feeling between the two men she left together flared up at once. "Does this mean you're going to hitch up with the cattlemen, after all?" demanded Van Horn. Laramie, who had lighted his cigarette, stood looking after Kate.

"I hitch up with nobody."

"Then don't spend your time hanging around Kate Doubleday."

"So that's where the shoe pinches?" Laramie threw away his cigarette as he spoke. "I've taken a good deal from you, Van Horn."

Van Horn egged him on unabashed. "You've got your nerve with you to show up here at all."

"A man needs his nerve, Van Horn, to do business with crooks like you."

Doubleday, passing near the two men at that moment, heard the last exchange. He called out in his heavy, raspy voice to Van Horn: "Look here, Harry." Laramie walked away and Doubleday took Van Horn in hand. "You messed up things once with Laramie, didn't you? And you didn't get him, did you?" continued Doubleday, choking off Van Horn's words. "Now we've got him here, let me run this thing."

"I can tell you right now you won't line him up," blurted out Van Horn, very angry.

Doubleday had a way of raising his chin to override objection, and his voice grew huskier with stubbornness. "Just let me run this thing, will you?"

"Do as you please," retorted Van Horn, but with a stiff expletive that irritated Barb still further. Then swinging on his heel, Van Horn marched away. Barb was so incensed he could only keep his raised finger pointed after Van Horn, and as his eyes blazed he shouted through a very fog of profane throat scraping: "I will."

On the level stretch between the ranch house and the creek the cowboys staged after dinner a Frontier Day show and a Fourth of July celebration combined. The fun began mildly with the three-legged races and the business of the greased pig. From these diversions it proceeded to foot races, in which Indians shone, and to keenly contested pony races between cowboys, Reservation bucks, and sports from Sleepy Cat. Money was staked with freedom and differences of opinion were intensified by victory and defeat.

While the spirit ran high, rodeo riding began with the master artists of the range and the pink of American horsemanship in the saddle. In each succeeding contest the Sleepy Cat visitors, headed by Sawdy and Lefever with big, loose bunches of currency, backed their favorites freely, and men that counted nothing of caution in their makeup took the other end of every exciting event. Flushed faces and loud voices added to the rapidly shifting excitement of the scene as one event followed another, and the betting fever keenly roused called, after every possible wager had been laid, for fresh material to work on.

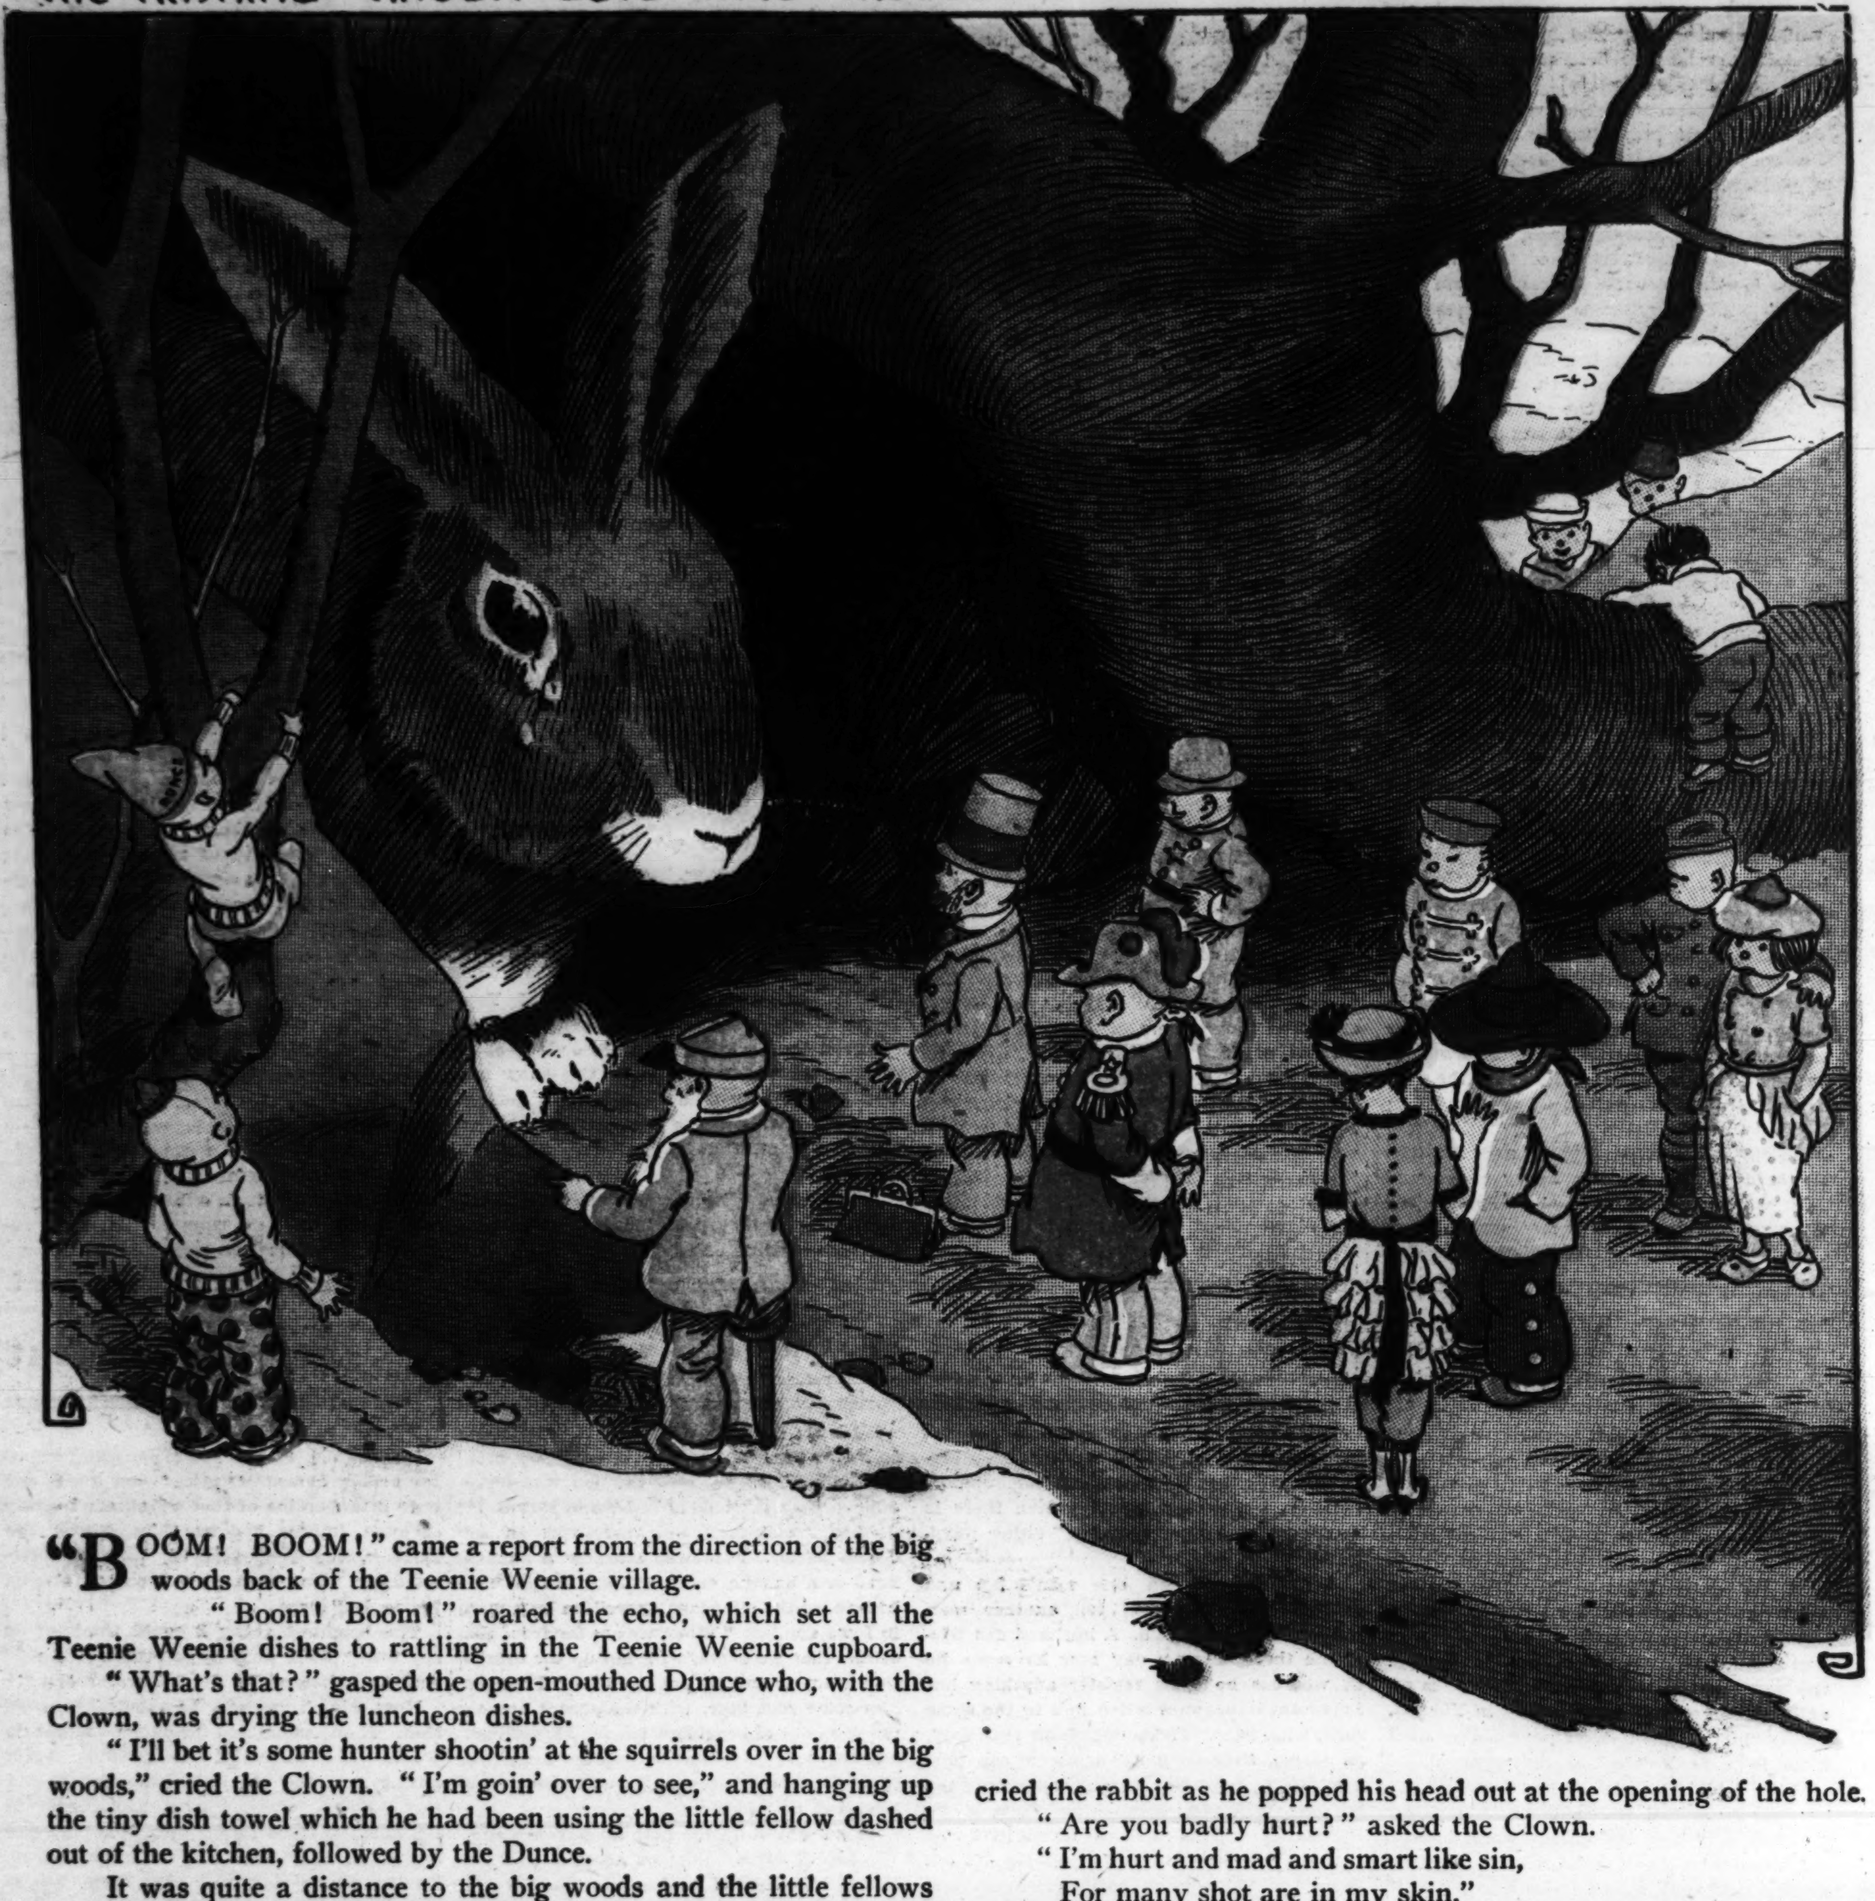
It was at this juncture that the shooting matches began. In a line and in a country in which many excelled in perhaps the most important regard, rivalry ran high and critics were naturally fastidious. The temptation to belittle even excellent work with rifle and revolver was, in Sawdy and Carpy, partly due to temperament. Both men were bad gamesters because they bet on feeling rather than judgment. They would back a man, or the horse of a man they liked, against a man they did not like, and often knew what it was to close the day with empty pockets.

On this Fourth of July at Doubleday's both men, as well as Lefever, had been hit by hard luck. Their free criticism of the horse racing and the shooting did not pass unresented, and the fact that Tom Stone and his following had most of the Sleepy Cat

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE RHYMING RABBIT GETS INTO TROUBLE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



"BOOM! BOOM!" came a report from the direction of the big woods back of the Teenie Weenie village.

"Boom! Boom!" roared the echo, which set all the Teenie Weenie dishes to rattling in the Teenie Weenie cupboard.

"What's that?" gasped the open-mouthed Dunce who, with the Clown, was drying the luncheon dishes.

"I'll bet it's some hunter shootin' at the squirrels over in the big woods," cried the Clown. "I'm goin' over to see," and hanging up the tiny dish towel which he had been using the little fellow dashed out of the kitchen, followed by the Dunce.

It was quite a distance to the big woods and the little fellows were nearly out of breath when they arrived at the foot of a huge tree where their friend the squirrel lived.

"What's all the noise about?" asked the Clown as he saw the squirrel run out on a limb of the tree.

"Hunter," answered the squirrel running down the tree trunk and jumping to the ground beside the two Teenie Weenies. "Mean old hunter around here shootin' buck shot. Pluck my tail if I ain't as mad as a blind robin."

The two Teenie Weenies could see that the squirrel was thoroughly angry, for the hair stood up on his back and his eyes flashed like a couple of electric lights.

"Did the hunter shoot at you?" asked the Dunce.

"No, he didn't shoot at me but he shot at the rhyming rabbit, and I think he hit the poor fellow, too," growled the squirrel.

"We'll go over to the rhymin' rabbit's house and see if he was hurt," cried the Clown, and the two Teenie Weenies set off towards the rabbit's hole as fast as their short legs could carry them.

The rhyming rabbit lived in a hole under the roots of a large tree, and when the Dunce and the Clown stood at the entrance of the hole they shouted with all their might.

"Anybody at home?" they cried.

"Yes, I'm here, and also got
In my side a lot of shot," cried the rabbit as he popped his head out at the opening of the hole.

"Are you badly hurt?" asked the Clown.

"I'm hurt and mad and smart like sin,
For many shot are in my skin," answered the rabbit.

"We'll go and get the Doctor to come over and give you some attention," cried the Dunce.

"Get the Doctor with all speed,
For his help I surely need," cried the rabbit, and the two Teenie Weenies set off for the hospital at the top of their speed.

When the Doctor heard the news he caught up his tiny medicine case and, followed by the rest of the Teenie Weenies, he soon arrived at the rabbit's hole.

After a careful examination the Doctor found that seven shot had lodged in the rabbit's side, and these were soon cut out.

Although it must have hurt the rabbit to have the shot removed, he never cried once, and the Doctor afterwards said that the poor fellow was the bravest chap he had ever seen.

As the rabbit was unable to go out in search of food, the Teenie Weenies kept him supplied with green grass, and once they found a great lot of carrot tops which they carried to the grateful fellow.

"You're very kind, my little friends,
To bring me grass and carrot ends;
And every day I'll think of you
Until I'm shot to make a stew," said the rabbit.

LARAMIE HOLDS THE RANGE by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

ILLUSTRATED WITH A PAINTING BY HERBERT MORTON STOOPS

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father.

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before, and whom the girl has never seen. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he shows a furtive affection for the girl and establishes her in a cottage at Sleepy Cat Junction with

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood whom he has engaged to run his eating house in town. Kate hears mystifying references to her father's affairs from

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman, whom she likes, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seem to be sharp differences of opinion. Laramie, she gathers, is a figure of some importance in a war which is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country. One day at the eating house, meeting a stranger whom she believes to be a marshal with papers to serve on her father, Kate lures him away into the plains on the pretext of taking a ride with her, only to find to her chagrin that the man is not a marshal at all but Jim Laramie himself. Soon afterward Doubleday closes his eating house at Sleepy Cat Junction and Kate goes to her father's ranch. Then, at a celebration staged by the proprietor of the town hotel, Van Horn approaches Laramie with the proposal that he line up with the Doubleday outfit in the feuds that are under way. Laramie refuses defiantly, and the incident has a dramatic climax when Tom Stone, half drunk, tries to murder Laramie and is knocked down by the latter's ready fist. The next day Laramie drops in at an eating house which Belle Stockley has opened on her own account, and here, after dining with JOHN LEFEVER, the deputy marshal, he strolls into the kitchen and confronts Kate Doubleday, confusedly trying to get out by a back door that will not open.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Fourth of July at Doubleday's.

JIM walked to the door, explaining as he took hold of the knob. "The door wasn't locked; I could tell that from the way you handled it. You locked it, yourself——"

Kate could not hide her resentment. "It wouldn't open when I first took hold of it," she declared hastily. "I tried it before I touched the key."

"I know, but when you did take hold of the key you locked the door and then you couldn't open it; so you unlocked it and tried it again. After that you worked so fast I lost track." He pointed to the back of the lock. "The catch was on." And pushing down the catch he opened the door.

Kate was thoroughly incensed. "You are doubtless better acquainted here than I am."

"To tell the truth, I have to be acquainted with rooms I go into. If I ever tried to get through a door and failed, it might not be pleasant. And there's a board fence, six feet high, all around this yard, so unless you're a good climber you couldn't have got out, anyway."

Kate felt she looked very silly standing staring at him, and perhaps looking frightened—as she really was—for he went on as if he were explaining to a child; "I'm not permitted to tell you, but I'm going to——"

"Don't bother, please——"

"Yes, I'd rather. There is a way to get out without climbing the fence; a loose board I'll show you some time—but you must handle yourself fast to make your getaway."

"I never expect," she said contemptuously, "to have to make a getaway."

"Then I was wrong," he said frankly, "for I kind of thought you were trying to make one a minute ago."

His composure irritated Kate. "You are very much mistaken," she declared with spirit in her words, for she saw—indeed knew—how persistent he was. "I was only trying to leave for home quietly and quickly."

His eyes were a study in silent laughter. "That's all I've ever claimed to be doing, any time in my life."

"But I can just as well leave by the front door—which, perhaps," retorted Kate, "you haven't always been able to do."

"Before you go——" he was standing directly in the archway, so she had to listen—"tell me about things at the Junction; I hear the lunchroom was closed up a while ago."

"It was. But——" Kate thought the time for explanation had come—"I was not working at the eating house when you came in there. I am Kate Doubleday and I wanted to save my father that day and I'm not a bit sorry for it."

"I suppose, then, I ought to speak out, too. I knew you were Kate Doubleday soon after I got into the lunchroom that day and I'm not a bit sorry for it. And I knew pretty soon you were trying to save your father. And I helped you."

"O——" Kate suppressed an incredulous exclamation.

"Believe it or not as you like, I helped you. And I'm not a bit sorry for it. Though he is no friend of mine, you have been from that day on; and if you ever give me a chance I'll prove it. The worst thing you did was to go back on your word——"

"My word was not freely given," Kate was speaking furiously.

"It shouldn't have been given at all, then. But it's all right. Will you be friends with me?"

"No man that speaks of my father as you spoke of him a moment ago can be my friend."

"It was Lefever spoke of your father. I couldn't shut him off. Of course he didn't know you were here. I did know after I'd been here awhile. I heard you whisper. That's why I asked for the ink—I had no letters to write. There's a lot of hard feeling in this country right now. Every man in it has friends and enemies. You mustn't take it seriously when you hear hard words—I don't; and I hear plenty. Hadn't you and I better be friends to start with, anyway?"

"No," she exclaimed angrily. "Please let me pass."

He stepped promptly aside. "I never dreamed of doing anything less."

Kate started rapidly for the front door. Whom should she run into just as she opened it but Belle coming back from her wretched telephoning! Kate inwardly blamed her for all her trouble, and she was on edge, besides. "Where you going?" demanded Belle.

"Home," answered Kate, shortly.

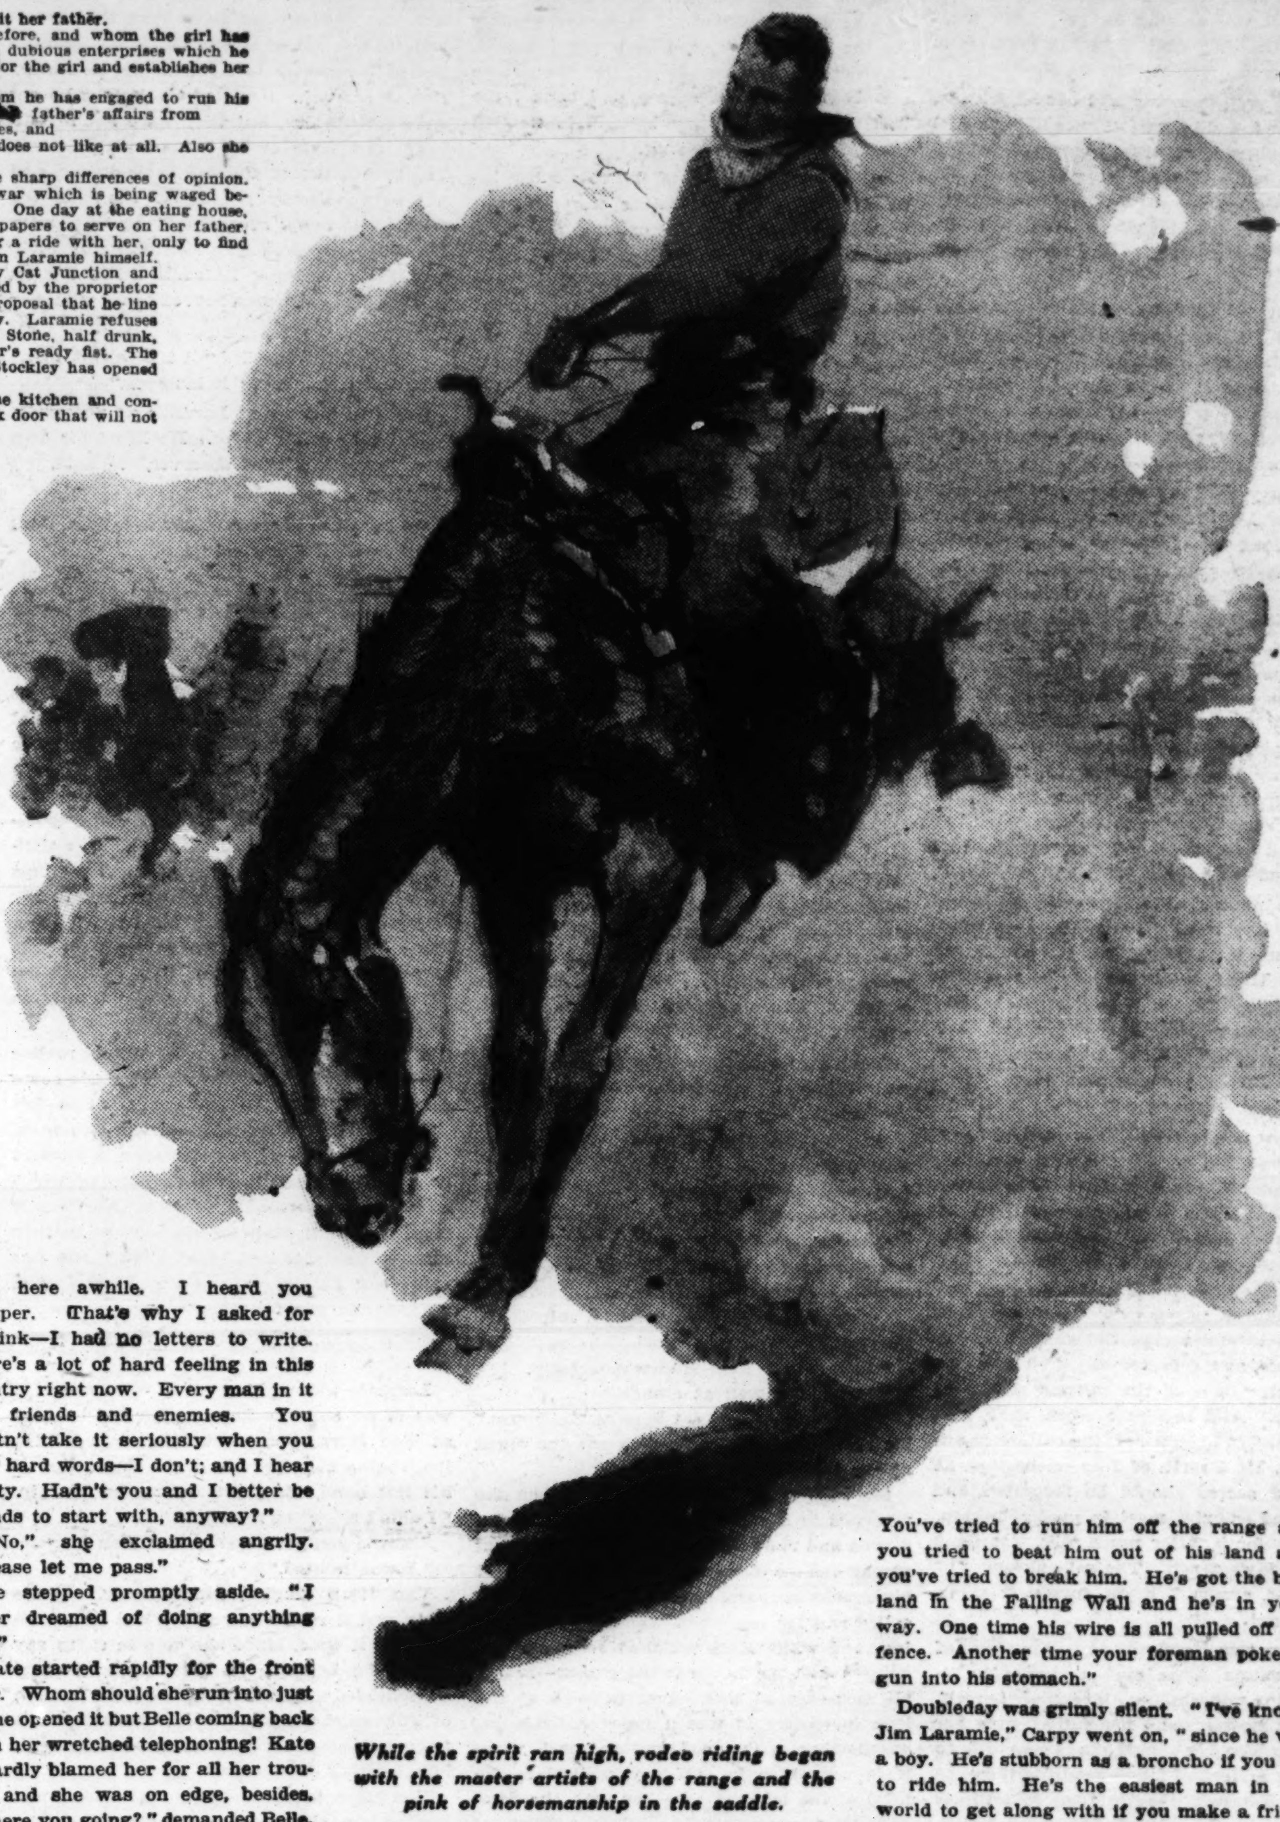
"Home? You haven't had your lunch."

"I don't want any."

Belle caught Kate's arm. "Now you just hold on. What's the matter? Is it Laramie?" Belle must have read her face, for she answered nothing, only tried to get away. "But, child!" she exclaimed. "Where's your coat—wait till I bring it—and your gloves!" Nancy paused at the door. In a minute Belle came running back. "He's gone, absolutely. There isn't a soul anywhere about. Now you shan't go till you take a cup of coffee. Here's the cream—he left it at the wrong door, the stupid!"

Kate could not get away. And Belle had told the truth: Laramie was gone.

Whatever the shortcomings of the American frontier code, there never was a time in its history when a man could violate the principles of fair play and keep public opinion on his side. In this instance, Stone's conduct reacted unfavorably on the cattlemen. The townspeople that made money out of the trade of big ranches always stood up for the cattlemen, but they were put most unpleasantly on the defensive by the incident. Even had Stone's attempt on Laramie's life succeeded it would have been easier, for the partisans, to handle than the failure it proved. As a fait accompli it would have been regretted, but forgotten; as a failure it settled nothing.



While the spirit ran high, rodeo riding began with the master artists of the range and the pink of horsemanship in the saddle.

Among the few townspeople that sturdily retained independence of opinion on all matters, none stood higher than the surgeon, Doctor Carpy. And encountering Doubleday on the street shortly after the Stone incident, he took it on himself to talk to him.

The Doctor had his office at his home, but back of the prescription counter in his little drug store—no bigger than a minute—he had a small room for emergency consultations. To this he invited Doubleday, and having ushered him in, seated him and closed the door. Carpy sat down: "There's few men, Barb——" The Doctor began by qualifying the adjective profanely—"few men in this country that dare to talk to you the way you ought to be talked to; of them few I'm probably the only one that would take the trouble. Your enemies won't talk and everybody friendly with you is afraid of you. You've got so d——d much property and stuff here they're plumb afraid of you. I'm a poor man, Barb—don't never expect to be anything else, and I don't give a hang for anybody," averred the erratic surgeon with more profanity, "and nobody gives a hang for me."

Doubleday, chewing the stub of a cigar, eyed his medical adviser with an unsympathetic stare, but this in no way disturbed the self-appointed critic. "For a long time now, Barb," he continued, "you've been in the nastiest kind of a fight on Jim Laramie. You've tried to run him off the range and you tried to beat him out of his land and you've tried to break him. He's got the best land in the Falling Wall and he's in your way. One time his wire is all pulled off his fence. Another time your foreman pokes a gun into his stomach."

Doubleday was grimly silent. "I've known Jim Laramie," Carpy went on, "since he was a boy. He's stubborn as a broncho if you try to ride him. He's the easiest man in the world to get along with if you make a friend of him. No matter what's said of Jim Laramie there ain't a crooked hair in his head; but he's no angel and when his patience quits—look out. What I'm going to tell you now, Barb, is on the square. It can't go no further. I tell you because you ought to know. A while back, just after this wire pulling, Jim Laramie walked into this room, shut the door and locked it, and sat down right where you're sittin' now. He told me the wire story; he told me he was through. He'd tracked the men to your ranch and was going to square accounts with you and Stone and Van Horn. He was on his way to the Junction and he told me he might not come back and wanted to tell me how to dispose of his property. He was after you and he meant, before he fell down, to get some or all of you. He asked me where you were, because he heard I knew. I did know, but I didn't tell him. I lied, Barb. I told him, the mines, but I knew you were at the Junction. He started for the mines. What happened to turn him off your trail I never yet learned. I never asked.

"Now you saw, or you heard anyway, what happened when Stone tried to kill him the other night. That man never can get Laramie. And don't depend on Stone and Van Horn to play you fair, for if they had to save their hides, Barb, they'd sell you. My advice is this: Put back Laramie's wire. Let the cattlemen, you and Pettigrew to lead 'em, do it to clear their own names. Say you

A SPRING OF FIREWORKS SUITS : : :

By Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—If Sir James Barrie took to designing suits instead of writing plays, he would probably put on things like what we're now getting. For these present day suits are to be described by just one word—whimsical. They're up to all sorts of pranks; they do the most unexpected kinds of turns; they're always saying, "How do you do," when you have every reason to anticipate a good-by.

But before I said this I wanted to say something else. Some weeks ago there stepped off one of the trans-Atlantic steamers a certain widely known buyer. She had been over to attend the spring openings of the French designers to buy models for the shop with which she is connected. She was attired in a severely tailored suit of striped Oxford cloth.

"Yes," she said, "I am wearing a suit—a real suit—and I find that it is what the most fashionable Frenchwoman is wearing also. The smart Parisienne is tired of these firework tailleurs, these jackets bursting in air, and has returned to her mannish suit—preferably of striped material."

That was all very well. But one is willing to wage that this same buyer brought back for her customers the rejected "firework" suits. At all events, these spectacular garments are all over the place now. And even if you're a lady Ph.D., you are not safe for a moment.

The prevailing suit of this year is perhaps of the paletot variety. Paletot is the word which the French give to the loose, unbelted coat, and you feel awfully superior when you can use it carelessly like that. The paletots are of various lengths, but they are snappiest when they come just to or below the hips. Also, they frequently lapse into the cape back, which is so widely employed this season.

At the left we show a foreign model of the paletot order, which has embraced the creed of the cape. The transition between cape back and coat front is accomplished slyly by means of a band into which the rearward fullness is tucked. This band is a mere continuation of the front, and is emphasized by the antique silver buttons which terminate the cire braid applied to the wrap. The garment itself is a rose colored poplin, and most ingenious is the tunic with its knife plaits. Ruffles of the suit material at neck and sleeves are also knife plaited.

This paletot has refused the services of the waistcoat. Many others, however, have featured the fancy gilet strongly. Indeed, no matter what kind of a coat we choose, we are almost as much given to waistcoats as Beau Brummel or Charles Dickens. These waistcoats are often of figured silk of brocade or of metal cloth. And quite as often our philanthropic old friend organdy lends a hand. White pique, too, is a favorite among the foreign designers.

Well, as has been said, the short, loose coat is perhaps the most ubiquitous feature of the suit year. And yet there are other models that dispute the supremacy of this text. For my own part, I prefer infinitely to this easy going old line the dapper, nipped-in-at-the-waist effect which Jenny in particular provides.

It is a Jenny suit illustrated next to the left of this page, and here in this model of beige twill the famous French designer has given her favored effect by two darts at the side of the coat. These darts are insert with the gold and white metal cloth that form the vestee. The vestee provides the collar in the back, while in the front its surplice closing is abetted by a girdle of orange on jacket and gold ribbons ending in a huge poinsetta bow. The embroidery on jacket and skirt is in gold thread.

All the waistcoats—and in fact all the blouses—expect every jacket to do its duty. And what is the responsibility of that garment nowadays? Chiefly—in the front, that is—the same one of the poor relative. It is to get out of the way. Many of the coats this season hang open. Those that do not depend upon that one-button fastening of the fall.

Thus the suit adjacent to this Jenny model—a copy of an imported model—provides only one sentry against the figured silk waistcoat shown above. This suit of navy blue twill also gives the nipped-at-the-waistline jacket, as is the case with the suits of Jenny and other French designers; however, the restriction here achieves no universal fullness below. This spring the fullness of the jacket must be at the sides. In other words, the pep of the peplum has been locally applied. Front and back must be quite flat.

The suit we have just described is trimmed with cire braid. It is merely a comment—not a definition. For of all the suit trimmings, braid—Hercules and soutache, cire and plain—esems to be the most insistent. Even waistcoats find it hard to free themselves from this influence, as is witnessed by the fact that one of the French houses binds the outer edges of its mannish birdseye pique waistcoats with black cellophane braid. Even when embroidery is used, it is often carried out by means of colored braid.

There is some ribbon used on the new suits and some cutwork. But everything gives way before Caesar braid. Just to illustrate how whimsical are its uses—the other day I saw at one of the openings a Jenny suit of navy blue with panels formed of wide Hercules braid placed close together. These panels, starting at the bust line in front, went over the shoulders to cross the back of the jacket diagonally. Another suit—this from georgette—crossed alternate strands of tinsel braid and raspberry raffia straw in a plaid to form the skirt pockets of a navy blue suit.

As for the sleeves, sometimes these are roomy as an old colonial house. Other times they make the eighties look profligate of sleeve material. Nothing could better illustrate this latitude of principle than the two models in the center of the page. The Jenny model, for example, has wide sleeves with the deep armholes which she favors, while the next suit seems to have caught the idea that sleeves should act like an adhesive plaster.

The same range of emotion is visible in the execution of the neckline. Many of the new suits—particularly those with paletot coats—have the standing collar. Others have the tuxedo finish. Others don't seem to have any finish at all—except that which the blouse or waistcoat provides them.

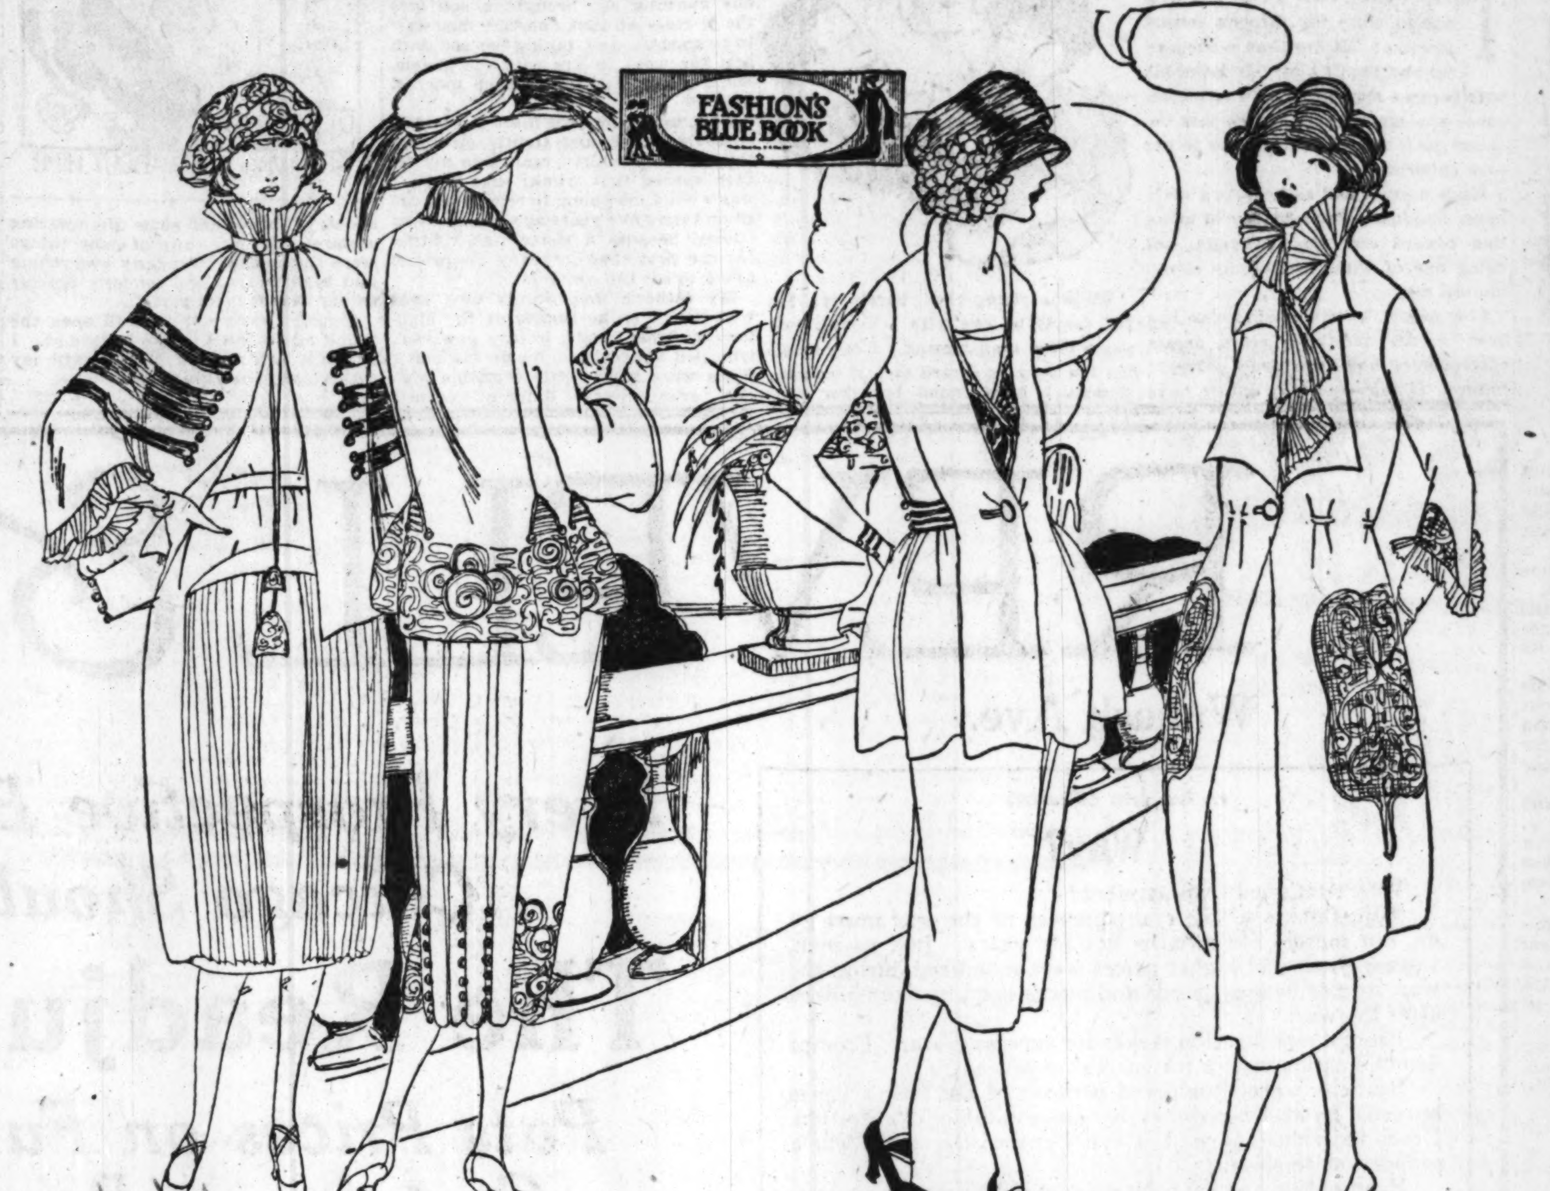
Speaking of the neckline, it is interesting to note that some of the more youthful of the short loose jackets make use of a round or square yoke under which the fullness of the bask section is tucked away. One of these yoke effects staged by Lanvin binds the slot seam which defines it by brilliant yellow patent leather, the same leather being plaited together for the girdle.

Panels, plaits, tucks, and tunics are all used on the skirts of these new suits. Also, the circular flounce!

It must not be thought that all of the suits of this spring are short and loose. Some are long and loose and some are long and tight fitting. The long coat of the Directoire period has been emphasized in most of the foreign collections, and here in New York the same variety of wrap has been tried out by a number of houses.

We are showing at the right of this page a distinctively Directoire suit from the French house at Martial et Armand. This suit is of navy serge—many of them are—and its typical line with deep revers is softened by the voluminous frills of a white organdy blouse. The trimming of this suit is most arresting, for it consists of medallions of red net embroidered in navy blue silk floss. The same treatment is used on the cuffs.

And, by the way, for the tall woman there is nothing quite so stunning as one of these Directoire coats!



ETERNAL vigilance is necessary in order to go on being a coat these days. Unwary garments are most apt to have a cape slipped up on them in the back. Such was the fate of the imported suit at the left of this page—a rose colored wool poplin trimmed with black cire braid, antique silver ribbons, and knife plaitings of self-fabric. The nipped-at-the-waist, full-at-the-sides style of jacket brought out this year is illustrated here by a suit from Jenny which is made of beige color twill, embroidered in gold, and possesses dart insets of the gold and white metal cloth that achieves the waistcoat. The same silhouette is varied in the following model—a navy serge with trimming of black braid and gilet of figured silk. Last a Directoire suit of navy blue with medallions of red net embroidered in navy blue.

Bird Lore

by DORIS BLAKE

IN the far east the swallow is still called the bird of God, because it was the third messenger sent out by Noah from the ark to see whether the flood had abated, and it is an omen of good luck to have these birds alight on the housetop or in the trees near the house, for they bring good luck on their wings.

It is lucky if a swallow builds under your eaves. Shakespeare notes this in "Antony and Cleopatra":

> Swallows have built
> In Cleopatra's sails their nests; the augurers
> Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly,
> And dare not speak their knowledge.

It is a lucky sign to see three martins light on a roof at one time.

It is a good omen if a swallow flies over a christening party.

In some countries the swallow is called the messenger of life.

The coming of swallows and the making of their nests in a new place is looked upon as an omen of coming success.

Treasure is to be found where the first swallow is seen.

When the swallows fly low above the ground, it is an indication of a storm.

Whoever bids farewell to the swallows will be free from chilblains for the ensuing winter.

It has long been considered lucky for a swallow to build on a roof, but just as unlucky for it to forsake its nest, if once built.

When swallows are going across the sea they are said to carry bits of sticks with them, and from time to time place them on the water and rest on them.

Swallows will carry away from you all troubles of the eyes, if the first time you hear them in the spring you go to a stream or fountain and wash them, praying God to let the swallows carry away your trouble.

If you throw a stone and break the wing or leg of a barn swallow or house martin, you will surely have a corresponding limb broken.

Swallows building on the house bring riches.

At Valbert an omen tells us that when swallows return from their annual migration and will no longer build on a house, it will burn down during the year.

If thirteen swallows come in a line at sunset it is a sure sign of death.

The swallow hovered around the cross crying "Svale! Svale!" (Cheer up! Cheer up!), and hence received its name, "The bird of consolation."

It is said that a martin never builds a nest, because, when Noah came out of the ark, he passed by the martin and said: "You are good enough for man to provide you a home for your services to him."

When chimney swallows circle and call it is a sign of coming rain.

The tail of the first martin is worn on the cap of the young Labrador hunter to assure his successes. Otherwise he will not be fortunate.

In some parts of Germany the peasants tell you to look under your feet when you see the first swallow and that you will find there a hair, which will be of the same color as that of your future wife or husband.

If swallows gather and sit in long rows on the church leads in Norfolk people say that they are seeking who is to die before they come again.

If a person washes his or her face on beholding the first swallow he or she will be preserved from sunburn during the year.

In Ireland the swallow is called the "devil's bird." There is also a superstition that every man has one hair on his head which, if plucked out by a swallow, will doom the man to perdition.

A farmer's wife told how some young men, sons of a banker in her town, had pulled down all the swallows' nests on and near a little farm which he possessed. "The bank broke soon after," she went on, "and, poor things, the family have had naught but trouble since."

> When the swallow's nest is high, summer is dry.
> When the swallow's nest is low, you can safely reap and sow.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE MEMORY WIFE.

TWENTY-SEVEN years have passed since my father's second marriage. It has been a successful and happy one. He loves his wife because she is a good woman, because she makes a fine wife, and because she is an excellent mother to her four children.

He is a quiet and rather stern man, never making a great display of affection toward any one, although not being one of those awkwardly silent, morose men.

Few people, knowing him as he has been for the last thirty years, dream that once he had an entirely different nature. Glimpses of that nature have come to me during the twenty years of my life. Piece by piece I have fashioned out the story of his first marriage.

He was young then, barely 20. He fell deeply in love with a woman two years older than himself. I can imagine her only as a rare sort of woman, though I have found but few who knew her. She was tall, being only slightly less tall than her 6 foot husband. For her great height she was remarkably well proportioned, however. Her hair and eyes were raven black.

My father loved her as few people have ever loved. For two years they lived perfectly wonderful lives. Then one morning she brought a son into the world. At dusk she bade her husband good-by, and, taking her son with her, she went to live with the angels. Some years later my father married again.

Now, up in our attic there is a trunk, securely locked and tightly strapped. Only twice in thirty years has my father opened that trunk; once when I was a child too young to remember, the second time five years ago, when it was opened because a sister was visiting for the first time in many years and asked to see the contents.

My father's fine, steady blue eyes were misty as he tugged at the bindings, and his hands, always powerful, trembled noticeably. Inside the trunk there were many little feminine articles, even several different colored spools of thread and some fine wearing apparel. Several rows of baby things were there also. Tenderly everything had been packed and tenderly did my father look at them now.

Perhaps some day he will open the trunk again, but I do not believe so. I think it will remain closed until my father has joined his memory wife.

Why?

Why continued readjustment?

Adjustments of the consequences of the war must go on, not merely for months but for years. Just as men, wages, goods and higher prices were mobilized during the war, so men, wages, goods and prices must be demobilized after the war.

Prompt mobilization makes for success in war. Prompt demobilization makes for success in peace.

Burdens were shouldered because of the war. These burdens must be reduced by an equitable distribution. Every individual, as well as every enterprise, must bear a proportionate share.

Even nations which took no part in the war must bear their share. Certain economic laws are fixed—rigid.

Hundreds of billions of dollars of waste must be digested and taken care of before normal conditions can come about.

Many are slow. They will suffer most. The quicker it is done, the better for each and for all.

Hence, continued readjustment is the one order that is best.

A GOOD COMPLEXION

Waste your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them—to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. "WE are such stuff as dreams are made of and our little life is rounded out with sleep," wrote one well known Mr. Shakespeare. But that was speaking poetically.

Speaking prose-aically, "we are such stuff as the food we eat, the water we drink, the air we breathe, and the God given force that starts the life processes into motion and keeps them going," says Dr. William Henry Porter. "So definite is this relation between food and the organism that feeds upon it that, among those whose opinion carries weight, it has become an accepted axiom that the organism itself is a most excellent index of the quality and quantity of material that has entered into the nourishment of that organism.

"The food problem is simple enough," he explains further. "It consists merely of giving a completely balanced diet in proper amounts and of getting rid of the debris."

Beware of Chronic Constipation.

Today we will deal more with the latter feature as it applies to the upkeep of a good complexion. You know undoubtedly from experience the general feeling of sluggishness that accompanies the nonelimination of waste products from the system.

You may have known the gray complexion, the dull, nonelastic tone to the skin, the lusterless eyes as a result of this trouble. And, with relief, such a complete toning up of eyes and complexion as to be convinced of the actual beauty damage constipation can work.

"Accumulation of these waste products in the system is one of the most certain of all means of lowering vitality and the normal resistance to disease," continues Dr. Porter, "so that innumerable dangerous and even fatal disorders are enabled to gain lodgment, and find, already prepared, a fertile field for development. Perhaps the head and front of all offenses against the body's vulnerability are chronic constipation and the putrefactive fermentation that accompanies it, for the toxic putrefactive products generated by decomposition of food substances in the intestines are absorbed through the intestinal walls into the blood stream."

Ten Glasses of Water Per Day.

Water drinking is recommended because it is a powerful aid in removing debris from the bowels. It passes immediately into the intestinal canal and stimulates action on the muscles there, and it renders the contents of the bowels more fluid. From eight to ten glasses a day are none too many to keep your internal organs clean. Watery vegetables help to increase the daily quota of water, and, by reason of their bulk, they have additional value in this connection.

A first step in correcting digestive troubles and subsequent troubles of elimination and complexion is thorough mastication of food. However, this does not mean you have to stop work and make chewing food the business of your life. The delusions of the Fletcherites need not be entertained, as they apply to the "fluidizing" of food before swallowing. Good honest chewing, until the food is reduced to such shape that the saliva and the gastric juice can act upon it, is sufficient.

Particularly in the springtime that muddied or possibly broken out skin and a woebegone, tired feeling on investigation may prove to be but the inelegant ailment described above, due to the previous season's indulgence in starchy foods, white breads, greasy meats, pastries, and concentrated foods generally.

Roughage in the Diet.

A certain amount of cellulose (or roughage) is necessary to a healthy diet. This is contained in largest measures in fibrous fruits and vegetables, such as lettuce, celery, spinach, asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower, corn, beets, onions, parsnips, figs, prunes, and other fruits, with their skins and seeds (especially apples), cereals such as rolled or cut oats or wheat, and bran in any of its various forms (bread, muffins, or crackers). These rough foods make bulk and stimulate the contractions of the muscular fibers of the intestines that push the contents on their onward course and provide for the necessary elimination of waste.

In treating complexion ills, the liberal use of water, externally as well as internally is necessary. Get the twice daily bath habit. Warm water at night, with a good soap and brush scrubbing, and in the morning either a plunge, a shower, or sponge. As I have said before, you rarely ever see a woman with this excellent habit troubled with blackheads or pimples.

Don't Neglect Exercises.

A certain amount of exercise is necessary to proper elimination of the bowels and a healthier blood circulation. Walking is about the best form. Setting up exercises, squatting, stooping, bending, twisting, stretching, are excellent for those who have the vigor to indulge in them. Swimming, horseback riding, rowing, and gymnastics are all healthy contributors to a clear clean, wholesome complexion.

The three following exercises to be taken morning and night after emptying the bladder are highly corrective in constipation cases:

1. Lie on back on floor or bed with legs straight. Bend right knee quickly to chest, keeping head and shoulders on the floor. Replace. Repeat, bending left knee. Do alternately five times—repeating to twenty or thirty.

2. Same position as above in exercise No. 1, only pull both knees to chest forcibly—at the same time. Replace. Repeat five times, gradually increasing to twenty or thirty.

3. The squatting exercise is especially beneficial in cases of constipation, and is done thusly:

Stand erect with the feet nearly together and hands resting on your hips. Rise upon the toes, then sink the body to the floor in a squatting posture, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the entire body is supported by the toes. You must keep your trunk perfectly erect throughout the movement. Return to the original position and repeat twelve times to begin with, gradually increasing to twenty or thirty times.

Better Resign Quickly.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 16, employed in an office as stenographer, typist, and bookkeeper. I have been working there for about a year, and during that time I was always treated business-like. Lately I was asked for a kiss by my employer, and I refused. After being told by my employer that I am selfish, I directly answered him that I came to the office for work and not for kisses. He then told me that a little recreation once in a while won't hurt and that, besides, if I do not approve of it he will not take it by force. Many times the subject has arisen. What do you advise me to do? ANXIOUS."

I advise you to get another job and lose no time about it. Tell your father about it. He will take you out of that place in quick time. He would know the employer was not a fit business associate for you.

Foolish to Mourn.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am madly in love with a young man who at one time cared a great deal for me, but this last month, his love has faded completely. Another friend of mine has invited me out. Now, Miss Blake, I am puzzled as to whether I should go or not, as I still care for the old one more than my own life. ALICE A."

Well, Alice A., why mourn in your heart for one who wastes no tears or sighs on you? Isn't it foolish when you come to think of it? You just go out with the other young men with the intent of having a good time—and you will have it.

One Wasn't Enough.

One Sunday evening I was returning home from church with my escort. We were sitting well up in front of the street car, which was crowded. At one stop a group of young women got on and one of them sat directly across from me. Shortly afterward a young man who was a good friend of mine came down the car. I supposed that he had been to church, and as he almost always went alone I thought it would be nice for him to sit with us. I smiled and, moving over a little way on the seat, said:

"Here, Jim; I've saved a seat for you."

Jim, however, smiled and said: "No, thank you, Ida."

To my horror and mortification and my escort's uncontrollable mirth he crossed the aisle and sat down beside the girl. It seemed to me the whole car must have seen my willingness to annex the young woman's escort. I. T.

Got the Idea.

One evening while my small cousin from the country was visiting at my home, I took him to the movies. The play was thrilling and Max was enjoying it. Toward the end of the play the heroine was shown looking angrily across the room at the hero. The tense atmosphere of that room had been communicated to Max. He suddenly exclaimed in a loud voice:

"Now she's saying, 'If you don't look out, I'm going to bat you over the bean with a rolling pin.'"

Everybody laughed, even I, though I longed to spank him. O. B.

The Thing to Do.

I was occupying a deck stateroom on a large lake steamer. One morning, after I had dressed my hair, I put my head out of the porthole to see who was on deck. When I tried to withdraw my head the edifice of hair caught in the opening, and, as my hands were inside, I was quite helpless. A young man strolling by saw my dilemma, and without a word did the only thing that there was to be done. He carefully took out all my hairpins, removed the roll, and then—after I had withdrawn my head—handed them to me through the porthole and passed on. I did not enjoy meeting him for the rest of the trip. E. R. K.

You Never Can Tell.

It happened at a slumber party. One of the entertainments of the evening was a game which caused me the most embarrassing moment of my life. Each of us was given a slip of paper upon which was written some request. Upon my slip of paper was written: "Imitate one of our local singers." Seating myself at the piano, I began the introduction of a popular song and said: "I will now sing you a selection, imitating Mrs. Cannon." I broke out in the most ridiculous mockery of a coloratura soprano who resides in our town. Imagine my embarrassment when at the end of the outburst one of the girls whispered in my ear: "Don't you know Mrs. Cannon is Adele's aunt?" Adele was the hostess. L. D. K.

COOKING THE CEREAL.

IN a recent short story the statement is made that the hero found his cereal "desirably smooth." He was certainly in luck. How many people do have cereals to eat that are desirably smooth? And how many people are there, do you suppose, who never eat cereals at all because they cannot get them desirably smooth?

Once knowing how to cook a cereal, there is no food under the sun that can be prepared with less effort. We will suppose we have a double boiler of aluminum and of the right size for the one, two, three, or any number we have to cook for. Waste space is a disadvantage. After a few trials one may find that one cup of oatmeal will cook well in a rather large boiler, but three-fourths of a cup will not do as well—top gets too dry. Too much spread!

By an accident, or a little accidental reasoning, I discovered that supremely smooth rolled oats must be first cooked in the double boiler and then finished in a rather hot oven but not in the same dish. The utensil they are cooked in should be closely covered.

Easily Cooked Rolled Oats.

Measure out one cup of oatmeal and put it in the top of a double boiler. Add two cups of cold water and a teaspoon of salt, cover, and set into the bottom part of the boiler containing hot or boiling water. As soon as the water boils, turn the fire low so that the water will not evaporate in hours but will keep boiling hot and cook the rolled oats two hours.

Scotch oatmeal would require a much longer time, and rolled oats so cooked will be desirably smooth and better than what is served in thousands of homes. Cook the rolled oats at night.

The next morning, Mrs. Housewife, as soon as you jump out of bed, go to the kitchen, put hot water from the faucet into the bottom of the double boiler, set the top in, and put the utensil over a small fire. In twenty minutes you will have a smooth nice cereal for your breakfast, so well cooked that you can imagine it flavored with a drop of vanilla. Note that you have not used a spoon nor stirred it once.

Now to make a smoother cereal, and one which will look as smooth and creamlike on top as a cornstarch pudding, pour this cooked oats into a covered baking dish, preferably one of glass, so you can see what happens, and bake for an hour. For an invalid or for a single dessert this is fine with cream and sugar, and some fruit, if you will, but let the invalid take no chances and eat the two separately.

Easily Cooked Cornmeal Mush.

Put one-half cup of cornmeal into the top of a double boiler, add two cups of cold water and a scant teaspoon of salt, and put on to cook. Do not stir once. You do not need to. Cook from one to four hours, or after one hour pour whole into a covered baking dish and bake in hot oven. A tall glass baking dish with a cover will show you what happens.

What does happen is that the mush bakes full of air, and the characteristic corn flavor is so modified that those who dislike it will hardly recognize it in this pudding served hot, with cream and sugar. Swelling any corn improves its palatability whether we pop it, fry much in deep hot fat, or bake cornmeal as described.

Old cooks undoubtedly understand in part how much cornmeal would swell, because we find in mush recipes the direction: "Stir the meal in gradually." That slow stirring prolonged the hot business, and the making of quarts of mush at a time, with the stirring of so large a quantity all the time it was cooking, was a hard piece of work.

Now does it not seem a pity that so many thousands, perhaps millions, of women have gone to so much trouble cooking cornmeal mush or "hasty pudding"? And cooking it in that fashion, of stirring into boiling water, they always ran the risk of getting a lumpy article. There they stood, our grandmothers, with one hand wrapped in a towel, gripping a wooden stick or long spoon, the other hand sifting handfuls of cornmeal into a kettle of boiling water. Almost always they guessed at the quantity and often guessed wrong, so got too stiff a mush. Many a cook of experience to this day uses too much cornmeal in Johnny cake, and all the other cornmeal breads.

Four Times Its Measure of Water.

In using cornmeal, whether we cook it in water or in breads or puddings, it is important to remember that it will take up four times its measure of water, and it can be cooked so as to take up six times its measure of liquid. Of course, it swells as its absorbs the liquid and it must have time to do it. In starting the meal to cook in cold water, which heats gradually, the meal swells in the same gradual fashion.

Some people think that the mush cooked in cold water has not the same flavor the old fashioned mush had. It has not, but the difference is in the meal.

Jellied Cornmeal Mush.

One way to jelly cornmeal is to start it to cook in cold water over the fire with six times as much water as meal and salt to taste. Stir constantly, since it is over the fire directly and might catch on; cook for twenty minutes; then put it into a fireless cooker over night. Cornmeal diluted as much as this or swelled as much as this, is an agreeable and safe breakfast cereal.

Big Hominy.

Pearl or big hominy is about the only cereal which we can cook directly over the fire without stirring, but the fire must be at the lowest or simmering point. We pick over a cup of hominy, wash it, add to it eight cups of cold water, and put it to cook in a covered aluminum kettle from three to eight hours. If perfectly cooked, the whole will form a jelly when cold. When it does not do this, remember that it has not been cooked to perfection.

We can cook any cereal to a jelly, and when the product is of the mush or porridge order, that is the perfect results of right cooking. When they are cooked in the oven the question is a different one, even if the proportions of the cereal and liquid are the same as those of a mush. As in the case of the cornmeal, a great deal of air is baked into them by having the heat such that much of the liquid is turned to steam.

For instance, the cornmeal mush ready to go into the oven, as mentioned in the recipe above, if poured into a mold, will come out of it with a smooth almost jellied surface, but after the same mush is baked for an hour the surface when it comes cold out of the baking dish is a broken one, yet it is more completely cooked by an hour's work in a hot oven.

Cooking Rice.

People used frequently to grind rice, as we can easily do in our food choppers, in order to get its pleasant flavor in desserts that required but a small amount of some thickening agent, or as a change from sago, tapioca, arrowroot, cornstarch, flour. The old cooks appreciated baked rice, and plain old fashioned rice pudding was little more than baked milk thickened with rice—one tablespoon of rice to a cup or sixteen tablespoons of milk. The baking in part condensed the milk, and freshly condensed milk—home work—is delicious, and in part swelled the rice as much as it could be expanded, yet did not leave it soggy.

When rice is cooked in exactly as much water as it will take up, it is ideally cooked, and the cook can control this in the case of rice better than with any other cereal, varying proportions according to the method used.

Milk Rice.

Pick over a half cup of rice, wash in several waters, and finally pour boiling water over it and drain off. Because milk sometimes curdles when rice is cooked in it, or rather separates, an old fashioned precaution was to use a pinch of soda when scalding the rice.

Butter a brown bread mold of a pint size with a close fitting cover which should also be buttered. Put the rice into this, and fill nearly to the top with milk and add a little salt, cover, and set on a trivet in a kettle of boiling water, the water coming two-thirds the height of the tin and cook for two hours. The tin might be pushed into one of the convenient holders used for glass jars in canning and then be more easily handled when done.

At the end of two hours dip tin into cold water and turn the rice out immediately. It should hold the shape of the tin. Rice so cooked is delicious without any flavoring, but some candied orange peel powdered might be used.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

DISCHARGED FOR CARELESSNESS.

THERE was an air of dejection about Marion the other day, as she sat down to lunch with us, which became more evident after Minnie had taken our orders and marched off in the direction of the kitchen. At last Ann was prompted to inquire sympathetically as to the cause.

"I'm not feeling happy today," Marion admitted. "But I don't want to spoil the lunch you've just ordered by regaling you with my troubles. Let's talk about something else."

She made no attempt, however, to introduce another topic of conversation. Besides, putting us off like that only served to increase our interest in her affair—whatever it was—and Dorothy gave her no peace until she finally consented to tell us. It had to do with the office, of course. We had all suspected that.

"I've told you before about Helen, the 17 year old girl who's been working in my department, haven't I?" We all nodded silently, and she went on: "You know I've grown fond of her. She's really a dear little thing—bright and cheerful as can be. But she's been incorrigibly careless about her work; careless in little things. I've tried my best to reform her, but it's hopeless, I'm afraid. I had to let her go?"

"You mean you discharged her?" asked Dorothy.

"Well, it came to the same thing," Marion answered. "I had to report her as unsuitable for the work, and the general office manager did the rest."

She looked positively tragic as she sat back in her chair while Minnie silently and deftly served us. After the waitress had gone off to give her attention to another group of hungry people Marion continued:

"If I'm ever to be a good executive—and of course, that's what I do intend to be—I'll have to harden myself to incidents like this. There are times like now, however, when I wish I was just one of the girls in the general office having no responsibility for the work or actions of anybody but myself."

She gave little attention to her lunch and fell into a reflective mood that lasted until Ann recalled her to us by reminding her of the story.

"Helen never worked before coming into my department," said Marion, "so when I found that she was careless about little things like forgetting to report telephone messages taken in the absence of people from the department, addressing envelopes incorrectly, and failing to inclose papers necessary to certain letters, I took great care and spent considerable time trying to impress on her the importance of getting these details right. Each time that I found her out in some careless mistake she would promise never to commit that particular error again and to be more careful generally about her work. But next day she would repeat the mistake and when it was brought to her attention she'd be just as contrite as she was the day before.

"She isn't stupid," Marion went on, "and I have some hope that by losing her job she will be taught a lesson she won't forget. She'd take dictation accurately enough—even difficult dictation. But I couldn't trust her to send out a few form letters without having some of them come back for complete or correct addresses. Sometimes she'd even guess at the address of a person she'd written to before and would let the letter go into the mail without taking the trouble to verify the address. Then, when the letter'd come back to us for correct address after several days, or maybe a week, she would be overcome with embarrassment at the mistake. But after a few days the same thing would happen again.

"A few days ago," Marion continued, "in sending out the mail she transposed the envelopes on two letters. One was an important and confidential letter, the other wasn't of great importance. They were returned to us, of course, and were sent down to my department from the mailing room without having been given much attention there. We might all have lost our jobs—the manager, myself, and the rest of the people in the department—if those letters had been sent up to the executive offices. The responsibility for Helen's careless mistakes became more than I could bear, so on my quarterly report Helen was listed as incompetent. It was a blow to her, I know, but in justice to the firm, as well as to the girl herself, I'm convinced it was the only thing for me to have done."

Here Ann reminded Marion of a story she had told us before—how she had lost a job, some years ago, because she made just one small mistake in sending out some statements. "I've always felt," Ann said, "that the loss of that job is directly responsible for whatever success I've had up to now. I made up my mind at that time that I'd never lose another job through my own fault and I set about schooling myself to accuracy. It's probable," she went on to reassure Marion, "that Helen never would improve much if you kept her, while it's more than probable that losing a job, like this, will have the same effect on her that it had on me."

How to Use the Patterns

THE long waisted house dress, No. 9970, may turn out to be an economical pattern for some who use it. For two materials can be combined with good effect, the waist part being of one and the skirt of another material. Of course, skirt and waist will also look well if only one material is used for both; but how often one has quite generous lengths left from some wash dress, not enough for an entire dress, but quite enough for part of one.

For instance, if you happen to have some plain blue percale or gingham, perhaps you can cut the skirt part of this dress from it, and use a blue striped or figured shirt of your husband's that he can no longer wear, to make the waist part. Oftentimes people recommend various uses for shirts, skirts, and other half worn wash materials. This is sometimes economy, although it is more often a waste of time. For if the cloth is no longer strong it won't wear long enough to pay for your time and trouble.

New materials will not cost much and the dress can be made so attractive Wash clothes that are well made and laundered are always decidedly attractive and becoming—always provided they are not crumpled and soiled.

The skirt is in two pieces and quite gored, which makes it possible to be set on to the lower edge of the waist without any fullness. But you will notice that the upper edge of the skirt is somewhat curved, and in basting it to the waist be sure to hold the skirt next to you. Pin it to the waist at the ends, in the middle of the back and at the under arms. Do this pinning before any basting.

The dress is not at all difficult to make, and if wash materials are used, it will be a good idea to first shrink them, setting the color at the same time. Make the dress an easy fit around the waist and have the belt a loose measure also.

Isn't No. 9959 a simple, attractive model for a dress for a small girl? It will look equally well made of wash or other material. There are wonderful plaid woolens that are used for sports skirts for women, and one of these could be used for the skirt of this small dress, using for the waist pongee in the natural color, and lining the skirt tabs with the silk. Or serge could be used for the skirt and the waist could be made of a checked or plaid silk.

If wash materials are chosen, there are chambrays and ginghams in plain, beautiful colors, that can be combined with the small checked ginghams or the more striking plaids. Whatever the materials chosen, the dress will need to be carefully made, lining the tabs, basting "stays" under the places on the waist where the buttons are sewed that hold the tabs in place and the joining of the waist and skirt.

After the skirt seams are finished the hem should be put in around the bottom, always having it perfectly straight, and measuring the lengths from the bottom up.

After the sash ends have been seamed together, before turning them right side out, put each one over a large pencil or any other sort of round stick that will slip through, and press the seam open flat. Turn to the right side and have the seam come down the middle of the width instead of at one side. Dampen and press these pieces before sewing together at the ends.

No. 9000 is an attractive model for stout or slender figure, and would be ideal for warm weather made of foulard. This is a silk that is bound to be a favorite the coming season.

Blue with white dots is always lovely, and where the surplice fronts button at the waist line there could be rather large silver buttons, and with white organdie cuffs and collar there could be no need for any further trimming.

The surplice fronts, where they extend into tabs, should be nicely lined with the silk, and the lining can be hemmed separately across the top where it ends. It will not be necessary to catch it to the outside there, as the hemming down the sides to the outside will hold it in place.

The skirt is a four gored one and measures one and three-quarter yards at the bottom for size 36 inches bust measure. The opening in the skirt is at the left side of the front gore, and the placket should be finished with one long strip. This is called a wash placket, as it is used on many wash garments.

The straight strip is sewed in a seam on the wrong side, beginning at the top on one side of the opening, basted down to the turning, and then on up the opposite side. Hold the end of the opening out flat when sewing around the turn, being careful that no puckers are sewed in. Clip the seam almost to the basting exactly at the turning, and one each side, leaving a space of about one-quarter inch between clippings. This allows the straight piece to be sewed around the turn without sacrificing its smoothness.

After the seam is stitched the opposite edge of the strip is turned in and hemmed down by hand. One side stands out for the extension hem, and the other side is turned under for the faced hem.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

For the first time in the history of New Jersey thirty-two women were empaneled for two juries in East Orange recently.

Miss Annie R. Maxwell of Boston, appointed second deputy state auditor, is the first woman in Massachusetts to receive appointment to such a position, which carries a salary of $3,000.

Mme. Devourge, in charge of the Normal school at Grignon, France, is now in this country with a view of studying the home demonstration work conducted by the United States department of agriculture.

Miss Margaret Ridgely, socially prominent in Baltimore, and for the last sixteen years a missionary in Liberia, has returned to her home to recuperate from an illness received in the far-off country.

The New Hampshire house of representatives has decided by a vote of over a hundred majority against the bill which was introduced establishing a forty-eight hour week for women and children in industry. The present law permits a fifty-four hour week for this class of workers.

The first woman's club in the United States was founded in Boston by Anne Hutchinson in 1638.

There are now 110 women doing police duty in London.

Women are allowed to sit on juries in civil and criminal cases in Michigan.

Utah has three club women in the state legislature.

One automobile in every twenty-four is owned and operated by a woman.

More than 100 women serve in national parliaments throughout the world.

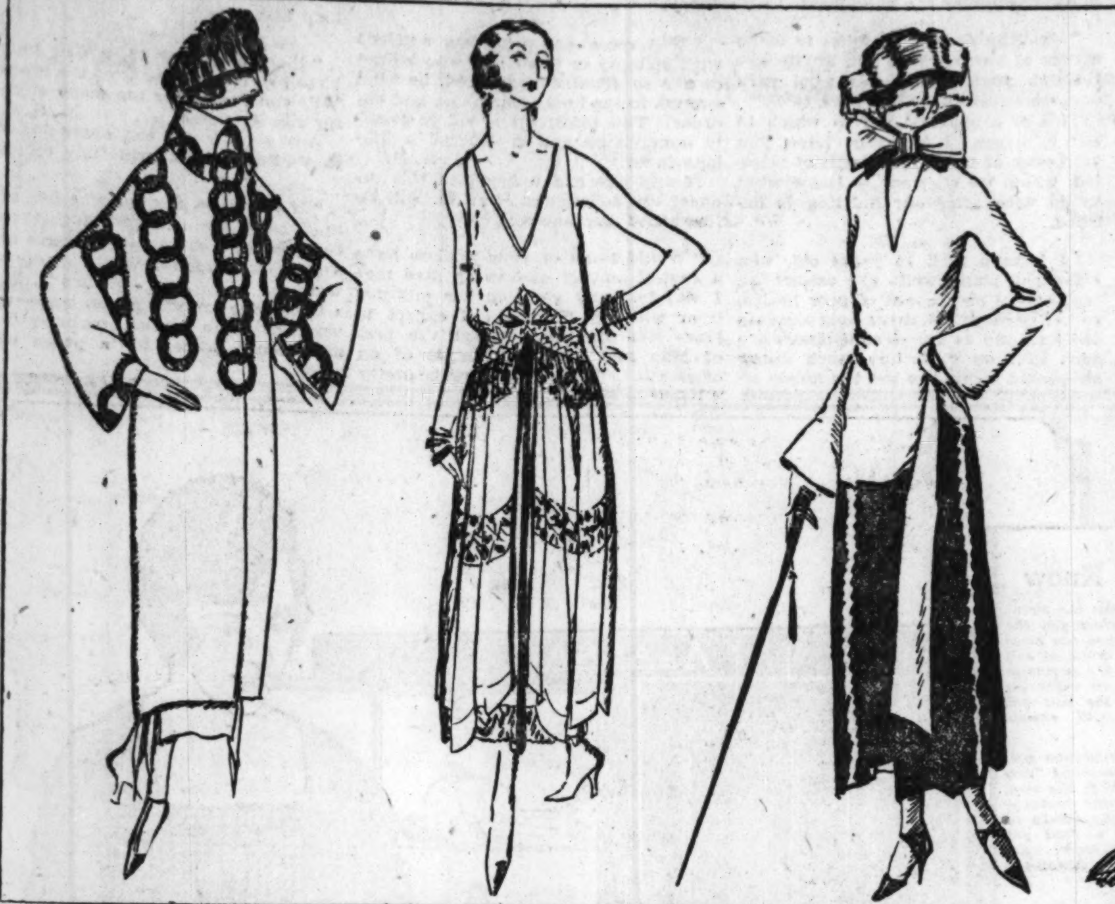
The Last Word in Paris Fashions



Dark blue serge coat lined with beige velour de laine and embroidered in rings of beige wool.

Orchid crêpe georgette banded in silver lace and trimmed in streamers of old blue ribbon.

One piece dress of black and white reversible cloth; hat of old blue taffeta.

Black tulle over white satin in form of skirt drape, scarf, and train.

A COAT LINE OF SPRING.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Do you need a vendeuse. That is to say, do you need somebody to sell you something when you come to Paris? There will probably be plenty of people to do that, but if you wish a real classy one I can give you her name. She has recently taken up "that sort of thing," and she is bringing to bear on her job all of the competency of enthusiasm and inexperience.

Her name is Mme. Wanda, and she is with Jean Patou, of the big dressmakers of Paris, and my difficulty is that I do not know whether to begin with her or with him. She is a Russian woman of high standing—the niece, indeed, of the Count Witte, one of the greatest statesmen of his day. I knew him in Petrograd and heard him interpreting international situations. He said, what I hope is one of his mistakes, that Russia would be fighting England in six years. But let me remind myself that this is a column dedicated to the art of dressing well.

His niece was one of the rich women of Russia; she used to come to Paris at least twice a year on the crack express train, stop at the smartest hotel in Paris, and run a charge account at Cartier's on the rue de la Paix, where she would buy a string of pearls or some other little thing to which she took a fancy.

They are living in a boarding house in the suburban districts of Paris, and the other day she came to see me to say that she had been so fortunate as to get a post as salesgirl at Patou's and what she would like so much would be for me to let her sell me a little beige frock—she knew she could do a better job than some of those sold me in smart houses last year.

"Perhaps you would not mind telling the American women how the Russian women are going out to make their own way now?" This girl, who lived in an extravagance that we of America cannot picture, was not ashamed, but glad that she was going to take up the long task of fighting for a living by herself and her little boy. She is awfully chic and Parisian, and if she will make me look anything as she does I should give all of my custom to her.

The establishment of M. Jean Patou is becoming a smart rendezvous. He is a good looking young Frenchman who set up this place just as war was declared. He endeared himself to all France by letting it and his personal affairs take their own uncertain course while he laid down his sketching pencil to pick up the sword. Now, with peace, he is on the job, and, to use the words of Mme. Wanda, which sound funny when pronounced with a Russian accent, "works like a nigger." All the establishment takes two hours for luncheon except he, who gives but some fifteen minutes to his.

Everybody is complaining about how hard it is to get a good looking coat this spring. More than one woman is threatening to wear her last year's, although, of course, she won't when it comes to a showdown.

The line I was describing as the one of the day is represented in the first sketch, and there are a number of M. Patou's which will follow this silhouette. A certain model in dark blue serge with a trimming of ecru lace, embroidered over with black wool. Usually a lady of fashion thinks she is going some to have either lace or embroidery, but to have one on top of the other goes all others one beeter.

The one accompanying is named D'Artagnan, after the hero of the Three Musketeers. . . . It is of blue serge, lined with beige velour de laine. The large rings, that look like what the sailors knit out of rope for you to play qoits with on ship board, are of beige wool. The sleeves follow the kimono effect on the shoulders and descend into the bell-shape still in vogue from last fall. The high turnover collar is a feature of many garments besides this one, and the coat is further representative in its long straight line down the front and sides, without fastening.

The wearer is supposed to devote her life to holding it on. Many times she pulls it over to one side, as you do your kimono when you are being really formal.

The second is the piéce de resistance of the house. It is an evening dress that I have seen buyers purchasing rather widely for America. The color is mauve orchid—or orchid purple—in color, and is of crêpe georgette and crossed round the skirt with silver lace embroidered in deep purple. There is a "stomacher" of the same trimming. Old blue faille ribbons, like streamers, fasten at the foot of the bodice in front, the back, and on the sides, from which points they fall to the bottom of the skirt.

Black and white, you know, is the color of the day. Here it is in service. The dress is of white cloth down to where the skirt begins—which is along way below the waist line, and then the material turns to black. I was awfully surprised when I got close up to the dress to find it was all the same piece of goods and the white revere on the skirt came about by the mere device of reversing the material. The bow at the neck is new and awfully smart. Note the bell sleeves—they really succeeded.

The hat is of old blue taffeta, turning up slightly, as most hats of the day do, first, however, taking a scoop downward in brim, to shade the eyes becomingly. It is softened with an embroidered veil of dark blue.

The fourth dress starts with a white satin slip. The next piece of construction work consists in laying a belt of black jet. Over the right side of it, you sling the end of a bolt of tulle. You let it fall to the bottom of the skirt, and then you hike it up along the right side of the skirt again to the jet belt, where you anchor it, then lift the remaining end to the shoulders, round which you throw it in the form of a scarf, which descends down the left side into a train.

Billy had a terrible time with his pronouns, and in speaking of a little girl, of whom he was most fond, said: "Her has such lovely hair" and "Her wears such pretty clothes."

In an endeavor to correct him, Billy's father said: "She has such pretty hair." "She wears such pretty clothes." "Her hair is pretty."

A smile illuminated Billy's face as he replied: "O, daddy, you am as crazy about the hers as I am, aren't you?" C. L. D.

Dick, who would rather fight than eat, came in the house with a big tear in his new suit, and when reproved by his mother, who told him he ought to have waited until the other had commenced it, said, "O, mother, you don't understand. Why, then there wouldn't be any fight." V. V.

William goes after the mail each day. The other day, when the postmaster told him that there was no mail for him, he hesitated a minute, then said: "Well, can you tell me of any other postoffice around here where I could get some mail?" Mrs. W. G. G.

Tom had a small topcoat of a small checked design. His mother decided to have it dyed. When asked if he had a new coat he answered: "No, it is the one I had last year, but my mother sent it to the undertaker's and had it all fixed up." S. F. L.

Johnny was out calling one day with his mother. The friend they called on had just finished housecleaning and had a highly polished staircase. Johnny went upstairs without any trouble, but coming down, when his mother reached the last landing, there was Johnny sitting on the first landing and crying out: "O muver, tome and det me. I tan't walk, 'tause they dot ice on their tairs." M. D.

The Meaning of Nemo Corset Service
MILLIONS OF WOMEN DEPEND ON IT

Nemo Corsets comprise many hygienic features of great scientific value and are divided into three distinct services:

Hygienic Service---Style Service---Economic Service

Their Hygienic Service has become invaluable and indispensable from a humanitarian and health point of view. The medical profession fully recognizes its preventive and curative qualities.

Their Style Service is necessarily different from that furnished by other corsets. The scientific and hygienic results can be obtained only when Nemo Corsets fit the figure accurately, comfortably and properly.

Their Economic Service, on which the first two depend, represents the long-wearing qualities of Nemo Corsets. No amount of ingenuity in conceiving these valuable inventions would avail if the corsets themselves were not extremely durable. Their intrinsic value is based exclusively on the production cost of the corsets themselves. Their Hygienic Features, although worth much more than the corsets are given entirely free.

This Triple Service is greatly enhanced by being skilfully applied by Corset Hygienists who are graduates of the Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute of New York. In this Institute they received a thorough scientific training which makes them eminently fitted to render this semi-professional service.

Every genuine De Luxe Bedspring bears the trade-mark on the side rail of the spring. Look for it—it is your guarantee

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

All Your Life Depends Upon It

You cannot know the full enjoyment of living, unless you sleep well and you cannot sleep well on an uncomfortable bed. Any bed is uncomfortable unless it has a comfortable bedspring.

The ordinary coil, woven wire or national spring is not comfortable. It sags—it holds the body in a strained position. It presses prominent parts of the anatomy too severely, because it does not support other parts at all.

Complete relaxation—perfect rest under these conditions is an impossibility. When you have a nightmare, don't always blame what you've eaten. It may be due to the uncomfortable bedspring you are using.

So be careful in selecting your bedspring. Investigate the advantages of the De Luxe—the spring that molds itself to every curve of the body, gently supporting every part of the anatomy. Then you will know what complete relaxation means. The proof is in the use.

Two people rest on a De Luxe as comfortably as on two separate springs, because it can't sag. Each row of coils acts independently.

Examine the De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the De Luxe with any spring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior, luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-Mark, which identifies all Rome products. For wood or metal beds.

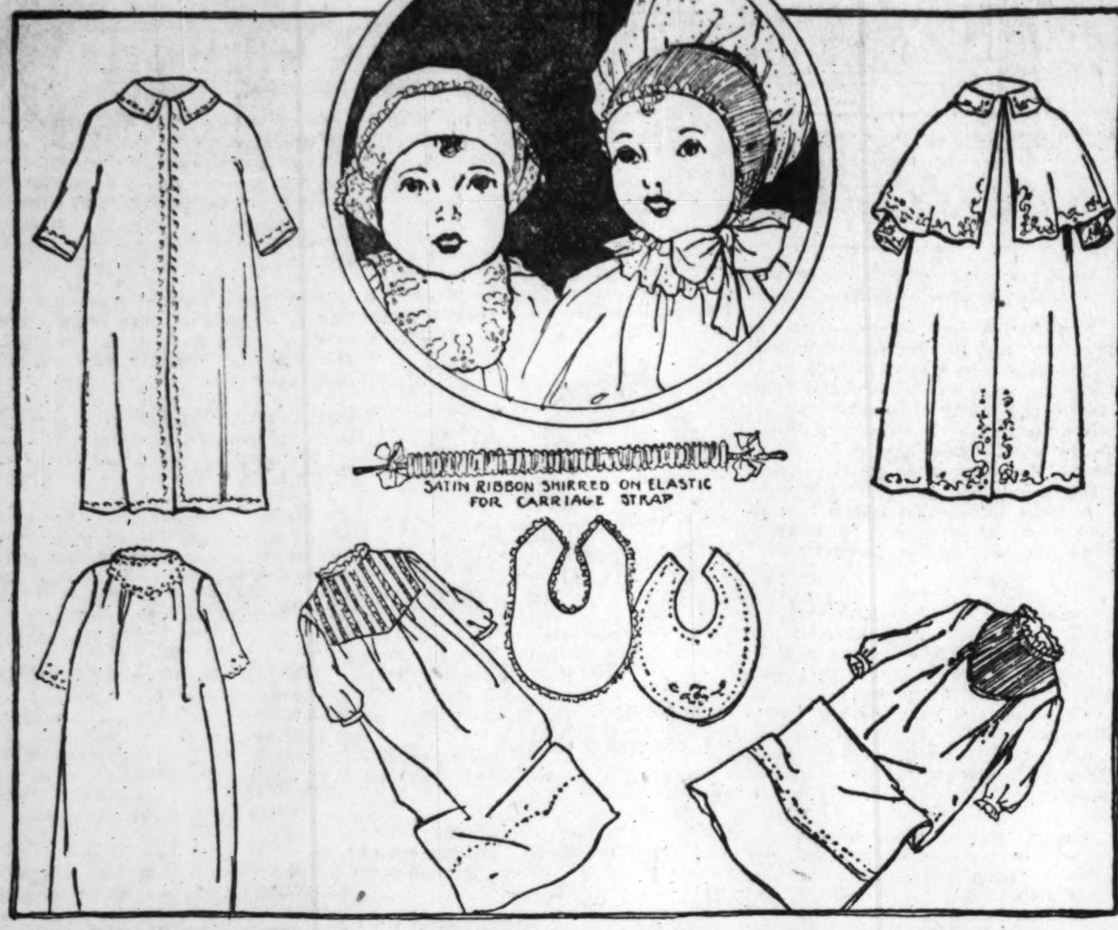
Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



SATIN RIBBON SHIRRED ON ELASTIC FOR CARRIAGE STRAP

LAYETTE FOR A SUMMER BABY.

[Concluded from Last Sunday.]

As fine materials as can be afforded should be used for the dresses; sheer batiste, Persian lawn, French nainsook, and other similar materials, any of them are suitable. A considerable saving can be realized by buying remnants in long enough lengths for one or two dresses. There is hardly ever a time when the white goods counters do not display an attractive looking pile of remnants of various lengths and degrees of fineness.

A dress should depend in a measure for its beauty on the fineness of the materials and the beauty of the work, rather than on much elaborate trimming. A 5 inch hem, either hemmed beautifully by hand or hemstitched, is a perfect finish for the bottom. A narrower hem, several alternate rows of valenciennes insertion and strips of the dress material, also make a lovely finish. Still another way is to lay a deep hem, mark off the upper edge in scallops or points, turn the hem in on the wrong side, following this outline, hem as finely as possible, and then on the right side outline this edge with one row of fine single feather stitching.

The yokes may be made in a variety of ways—square, round, pointed, or some fancy shape across the lower edge, solidly tucked, or with alternate rows of insertion and tucking, or insertion and the plain material, showing a tiny briar stitch, or the plain material delicately embroidered.

In planning the yoke, allowance must be made in the back for the hems. All the yoke edges are generally finished with the narrowest French beading. This either has its edges cut off and is whipped to the yoke, or is attached by a French seam. The lower edge is overhanded to the gathered and rolled edge of the body of the dress.

The lower edges of the sleeves should be rolled and gathered to narrow beading, to which is sewed a narrow lace edge. Roll the upper edges of the sleeves, and overhand to the beading which is around the armhole. The neck is finished the same way as the sleeve edges. It is wise to make the dress really loose in the neck and sleeves, and have the beading the kind that a ribbon can be run through, so it can be made to fit; for a healthy baby gains pretty steadily every week, and will outgrow things too soon if proper allowances are not made.

Two wrappers of outing or French flannel should be made, open the full length of the front; the fronts and the bottom finished with featherstitched hems. The plain sleeves are finished in the same manner, also the turnover collar. These should do also for a baby's first outings, and a cloak be made a little later.

If possible, plan exactly what is to be bought or made, buy as nearly everything as possible, get all the garments cut that have long seams, stitch these long seams on the machine, and then at your leisure do the rest of the work by hand.

Of accessories there is almost no end; each separate thing seemingly prettier than the one before. While bibs are regarded as a necessity, they can be ornamental as well, and are made in a variety of shapes and styles. A dress shield, covered with fine cambric or silk—the kind that washes—should be slipped in the neck of the dress in front under the bib, so that half is outside and half inside the neck of the dress. This will keep the dress dry, and only make a change of bibs necessary instead of the dress as well.

Genoese Peach Roll—

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"Knowing the splendid work that you do, I come to you for aid. My husband is not strong, and we are in poor circumstances. I have two girls—one 4 and one 1½ years—and I am expecting the stork soon. I would be so happy to receive any clothing for children or myself. Mrs. M. H."

This appeal carries its own story. Who will help?

"Will you please ask in your column for a fishing outfit for me. I enjoy fishing, but an outfit costs quite a bit and I am unable to buy one. If it is possible I would like to get a steel rod in preference to bamboo. I would gladly call or pay postage for it. Arthur."

I print this, thinking it may meet the atention of some one who has lost his zest for fishing and is now willing to afford another the enjoyment.

"My little daughter wishes to make a robe of yarns. Will you kindly ask through your column for wool yarn or worn sweaters. Mrs. G. F."

This is a splendid use to which to put leftovers. I sincerely hope you get many of those little balls of worsted which we all want to know what to do with after our knitting is finished.

"I have a girl, 14 years old, who plays the piano well; she cannot attend school on account of poor health, so her music is about the only pleasure she has, and as our circumstances are such that we can't buy much music she would be glad to get the music offered in your column. I will gladly pay the postage on it. W. C."

The music offered had been given to an earlier applicant. I promise, however, that your little daughter will not be forgotten at the next music donation.

"Will some one who has suffered with epilepsy or some one who knows of one so afflicted and cured, be kind enough to send me their name and address? This information will be greatly appreciated and considered a lifelong favor. J. H. H."

If any one can respond to this request the address of J. H. H. will be forwarded immediately.

"Would some of your readers have a castoff suit of clothes to give me? I will call any place in the city for it or will pay postage. I expect to leave the sanitarium about the first of May and have a promise of an office job. The suit I have is pretty well worn. I hope some of your readers could help me out. I wear size 36 coat and waist 33 and am 5 feet 7. "J. M. L."

This request comes from the Municipal tuberculosis sanitarium. Write to me for J. M. L.'s address if you can help him out.

"I am a girl of 18, a shut-in, and have just come home from the hospital. Will you remember me when clothing my size is offered. S. B."

Any clothes you can spare for Miss B. would be most gratefully received.

"If you have any one who has made application for silk pieces that could be used for quilt making I have quite a number, which I would gladly forward. Miss T. M."

This donation will please some eager worker. Who knows, perhaps there are enough pieces for a patch work quilt?

ALASKA
HONEY

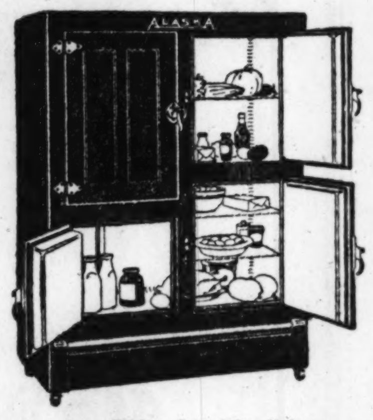
Do You Know

that in an Alaska the circulation is so perfect and the air so dry that you can place matches and a crock of salt side by side in the provision chamber close up under the ice and both the salt and the matches will remain bone dry.

This perfect circulation plus the "cubed" cork and "confined" air WALLS, the most perfect refrigerator insulator known, make the Alaska incomparable as a food preserver and ice saver. Ask your dealer for a demonstration.

For the Best—Buy a Seven-Wall Cork Insulated Alaska

Alaska-Iced Butter Makes the Safest "Spread for Bread"



Seamless White Porcelain linings with highly glazed surface and round corners, or sanitary White Enamel linings, make Alaskas easy to keep sweet, clean and immaculate.

The food compartments are practically odorless and because of the wonderful dryness of the cold circulating air, they can be kept so with a minimum of cleansing effort.

Your ice bills cut out of all proportion to common expectations—your milk, butter, meat and other table delicacies refrigerated as possibly never before—and endless amount of work saved—all assured—if before buying any refrigerator you will but think, will decide to see a demonstration of the famous Alaska Cork Insulated Refrigerators.

Refrigerators are refrigerators. But the famous "cubed" cork and "confined" air walls of the Alaska make this refrigerator absolutely unique—lift it completely out of the realm of the commonplace. With the Alaska tight-locking doors, and air-tight joints and top, these walls keep in the cold and keep out the heat to an unequaled degree—chill correctly at a daily ice cost which hundreds of tests and over a million enthusiastic owners say undercuts all known records.

Made to fit all spaces; durably, beautifully constructed—lined throughout with seamless round-cornered Porcelain; or with white Enamel—sanitary, easy to clean—labor saving. Prices exceptionally reasonable—guaranteed in every way.

At your dealer's see the many convenient sizes—send for attractive booklet.

Insist on seeing the name Alaska on the front of the refrigerator before you buy. Don't accept a substitute.

Carloads of Good Furniture at Sacrifice Prices

From The Dry Goods Economist of April 2d: "The public will buy merchandise if it is offered at the right price and in the right way. For instance, Rothschilds in Chicago have just held their Annual Furniture Day sale, and despite lower prices . . . the sales total greatly exceeded that of a year ago. The figure is indeed a record-breaker as far as this annual event is concerned."

If a great publication like the Economist considers this fact important enough to tell merchants all over the United States, how much more important is it to the men and women of Chicago who are trying to buy good furniture at low prices. Rothschilds offer you another unusual opportunity tomorrow.

A CELLARLESS BUNGALOW.

GUSTAV STICKLEY declared that he never knew anybody who really enjoyed going down cellar for anything, and built his house without a basement, putting the heating plant in a small structure outside. For the north, this is a practice of doubtful value, except in communities which have progressed far enough to do what all will do, some day, and furnish heat for their citizens as they furnish light and gas. But for the south—and a good many millions of people live pretty well south—such a plan is delightful.

This stucco-on-hollow tile bungalow adopts the Stickley idea. It has no basement, a fact which permits it to snuggle cozily to the ground, and makes easy the horizontal lines which mark the homiest dwellings. It has other features, too, quite as attractive as the absence of a basement, though perhaps less unusual.

The front porch, 19x10 feet, is flanked on either side by a grass terrace, and is constructed to harmonize with the best traditions of southern and semi-southern architecture. In addition to the square stuccoed pillars in the outer corners, the porch is supported by eight wooden columns of classic design, just as in the best and strictest colonial. This is not only a beautiful and dignified feature in itself, but makes the bungalow fit in perfectly among houses of more conventional design.

Two pairs of French doors open from this porch. One of them leads to the living room. This is 18 feet 4 inches by 13 feet 4 inches, with a handsome fireplace at the end. At either side of the chimney is a fair sized window, and another pair of French doors opens on the grass terrace flanking the porch, so the living room does not lack for light.

The other doors from the porch lead to the dining room, a little over thirteen feet square, and communicating with the living room by a broad archway. Built-in china cabinets furnish as well as ornament this room. At the left of the entrance is the kitchen, 12 feet 8 inches by 9 feet, lighted and ventilated from two sides, not counting the door opening on the service porch. The kitchen is equipped with the usual range, cabinets, and sink.

There is no pantry, but the service porch is so well utilized that it takes the place of one. It contains a recess which houses the ice box and a bin for fuel.

This porch also contains the laundry trays, a most pleasant variation from the usual washing quarters in the cellar.

Returning to the living room, directly opposite the entrance is the door to the hall, which gives access to the three bedrooms and bath. All of the bedrooms are of good size, two of them are better than 11x15 feet, and all have closets. Two of them have fireplaces as well, or rather flues which can be used either for fireplaces or for stoves. The bathroom is of good size, and there is a linen closet.

At the back of the house are two sleeping porches. This is a delightful arrangement. Only in exceptional cases can the whole family use one sleeping porch with comfort, and this plan takes account of that fact. Each porch is 7 feet 8 inches by 11 feet 4.

One of the features of this bungalow best worthy of note is the abundant lighting; yet care is taken that the light shall not be too glaring. The roof has a generous overhang which affords shade in the hottest part of the day. The hollow walls, too, act as insulators. The wall structure has been described; the roof is of asphalt, asbestos, or metal shingles, and the interior gypsum plaster is laid on metal lath.

Such a house will last for generations, proof against fire and time; cool in hot weather, warm in cool; always looking well, and costing the smallest possible amount for maintenance. Which is the only kind of house one can afford to build these days.

Answers to Queries.

D. E.: I should advise you to use casement cloth at all of your windows, making the curtains on rods and rings so that they will be easily drawn back and forth. The transomlike upper parts may have narrow draw curtains of the same material. You might repeat this treatment on the French doors. Weight the lower hems with little casings of tape having flat lead weighting inclosed. This weighting material you will find in the places that sell dress linings, etc. Old ivory is a good color. Use the same material for your sleeping porch windows. If this is feasible make the curtains on the sleeping porches into upper and lower sash curtains. You do not mention the type of window in your letter and it does not show in the picture.

T. E.: Yes, without doubt a bedroom set could be satisfactorily painted at home. Do not use lace for your lower curtains, but either silk or mercerized cotton gauze.

V. C.: Unless the walls are in exceedingly good condition, paper is preferable to paint. Artists' canvas painted is the best of wall coverings. With the brown woodwork keep to the tones of fawn color.

N. C.: You can hardly go wrong if you will use ivory casement cloth at your windows throughout and have your side walls a pale French gray, either plain colored paint or two toned paper.

S. B.: Your best choice would be for wistaria damask. Have one or two rose colored silk cushions in the rooms.

FACING LIFE TOGETHER.

DEARLY BELOVED: The sun is setting, and the hour of twilight has settled upon the earth. The day's conquests and failures are at a close, and now I come to you to whisper what my heart would say.

It has been a joy to me every day to know that the same sun shines upon us both; that the same rising moon lightens with silvery radiance our pathways that the same stars shed abroad their cheering light into your heart and mine.

I wonder, heart of mine, what today has brought to you, for our future happiness is builded upon this daily unconscious welding of our souls into one.

Soon will come to us the realization of our dreams, when I shall lay my hand in yours and we shall walk together through the spring into the autumn, and, if God wills, down the wintry slope of life, finding our supreme happiness in facing the same storms and living the same joys together.

You can never know just how much you have meant to me in a thousand different ways. I have loved you so long that love has become deeper and deeper every day.

Beloved, when with noiseless tread the years shall lead us down the westward slope and through the gates of life's sunset, I only ask that we may go hand in hand into that eternal realm of happiness where God is love.

Yours in devotion, ALICE.

MY FUNNIEST TRAVELING EXPERIENCE

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Traveling Experience." Address Traveling Experiences, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

It Was So Sudden.

Three years ago when I went home for my Christmas vacation, I had an unusual experience. When I got on the train I found that it was crowded, due to the Christmas rush, and the only vacant seat was at one end of the car, where there sat a well tanned, bright eyed young man. Seeing my perplexity in not finding a seat, he asked me to sit in with him. Having no choice, I did so.

After he had comfortably tucked my Christmas bundles away, he immediately started up a conversation with me. I had always been told by my mother not to talk to any men that I did not know and here was I with a fine looking, intelligent appearing young man beside me. I felt conscious of my mother's warning. What was I to do? Was I to stare out the window and not say a word? I did not have a book or even a paper to bury my face in. I proceeded to get acquainted with this young chap. I decided that if he were not the right sort of man I could easily ask the conductor to provide me another seat.

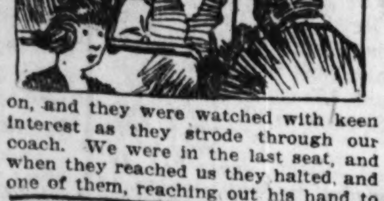
I found that he was a rancher from the Canadian west. This sounded rather romantic to me, so I proceeded to ask questions about that great country and the life out there. It was not long before he was pouring out his hardships and desires, and while I was desperately interested in his story, he reached over and put his hand on mine before I had a chance to draw it back. He told me that I was the one he had been dreaming of all the years that he had been a bachelor, and asked me if I would be his wife. Of course I declined. Having known him for less than three hours I could do nothing else. Then he asked me for my address and said that he would like to see me again when he passed through the city in the spring. I refused to give it to him.

I have not seen or heard from him since he waved me good-by from the train platform, but I have often thought of his vivid description of that great western prairie with its little shacks dropped here and there among the wheat fields, and the sun a great ball of light sinking beneath the horizon.

M. D.

Burned to Bronze.

Father is tall and slim and has dark hair and eyes. He loves the north woods and always returns home burned a beautiful brown. We were on our way home from a holiday in northern Minnesota when the train stopped at a town where there was an Indian school. Three stalwart Indians got on, and they were watched with keen interest as they strode through our coach. We were in the last seat, and when they reached us they halted, and one of them, reaching out his hand to father, said heartily, "How goes it?"



"Fine," said father, affably.

And then they strode on to the next coach. Father gave himself great airs and said he was certain they thought he was one of them.

K. Q.

Misunderstood.

My husband went into the smoker which was the first compartment of the car in which I was. After a time I began to wink at him and make signs indicating that I would like to join him. A man came out of the smoker, approached me, and began to talk. He had mistaken my communication with my husband as a flirtation with him. My fellow travelers realized what had happened and had hearty laughs.

Clammy Feet

One of the commonest of foot afflictions —and a very disagreeable one—is clamminess. It is caused by poor circulation.

And poor circulation is inevitable when you wear ordinary shoes with rigid shanks, in which your foot is held as if in a straitjacket, so that the arch muscles grow flabby from disuse. The Cantilever Shoe promotes full, free circulation. Impurities are carried off in the blood instead of exuded through the pores, and normal tained.

The natural lines and flexible shank of Cantilevers allow every part of the foot and all its muscles to function like the finest mechanism—which they are.

There is no distortion, no restriction. You walk or stand with less fatigue than you would have believed possible. Foot ills disappear, and you can dismiss any worry you may have had about weak arches.

The new Cantilever styles would satisfy the vainest of women. Widths, AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

No Corns Today

unless folks let them stay

Millions of people nowadays keep completely free from corns.

At the first sign of a corn they use Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster. The pain then stops. In a little while the whole corn loosens and comes out.

People who pare corns keep them. People who use old treatments—harsh, unscientific — do themselves injustice.

There is now a scientific corn ender. A famous chemist perfected it. This world-famed laboratory supplies it through druggists everywhere.

It is at your call. A touch will apply it. Its use seals the fate of a corn.

At least 20 million corns yearly are now ended in this easy, gentle way. Apply it to one corn tonight. Watch what it does.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

SOON after this column was put under the auspices of its present sacristan it obtained a notoriety for the use of long, billowy, and mysterious words. It appears that in a single issue early in its career two such cryptic polysyllables as "opprobrium" and "indubitable" were inadvertently employed; and at once the department's readers began to regard it as a somewhat suspicious adventurer among the verbal Marquesas.

Shrinking from a fame so dubious, the editor sought to escape from it; it was as a tin can tied to his tail. He ran miserably up and down the thoroughfares of every day utterance, and he hid with trepidation in the lanes and alleys of simple expression. Once he determined to use no word that had not been used in the Saturday Evening Post of the day before. Again he confined himself rigorously to the vocabulary of the news, editorial, and comedy sections of THE TRIBUNE. It was of no avail; the can remained to humiliate and harry him. "What do you mean, 'sarcophagus'?" his readers would write in to inquire, and "Where do you get that 'insularity' and 'decrepitude'?" After years of suppressed yearning to say that something was "eupeptic," he said so, having the sanction of no less a glossarian than Smith's Mr. Gump. But while Mr. Gump got away with it pleasantly, nobody liked it as an implement of theater reviewing. A judge of the Cook county Superior court (really) telephoned peevishly one day to investigate the term "homiletics," saying that four of his friends on an I. C. suburban train that morning had asked him what it meant and that he did not know. I found it as quickly as I could and rescued him.

A hard lot is that of the long wordsman. Those who understand his uncommon trysyllables resent as a vulgar invasion his publication of them to the multitude, and those who understand them not, regard him sullenly as a gilded hedge, separating the public from information. He loses both to and fro. Though his phrases may be, as they often are, the picturesque ivy which hides the intellectual ruin, his readers see not the senile beauty of the subterfuge. Good advice to young litterateurs is that they fashion their manner of composition after that of the platitudinous bungalow of a Bartlett suburb, preferring, as Mr. Cohan says in "Mary," the stereotyped shack, wherein understanding exists, to a baffling palace with a gilted dome.

However, with the christening of Mr. Woods and Mr. McCormick's new Apollo theater, the despised vocabularian finds a reason, even as does the essential wart-hog, for his existence. Many prospective patrons of Mr. Woods' sumptuous looney-box, nonplused by its strange caption, inquire of THE TRIBUNE the meaning of the term "Apollo." They can fathom the significance of the Tivoli or the Rialto, the Balaban, the Garrick, the Katz, or the Central, but the Apollo is rather a perplexity. They have been educated, of course, as to the bronze Apollo; but the Apollo theater causes them anxious speculation. What position, if any, they are eager to know, did Apollo ever play?

I may be able to explain. Mr. Woods, having entitled a theater for himself in Chicago, and one for Julian Eltinge in New York City, sought some name worthy of a similar glorification. First he chose "McCormick," a noble patronymic in these and other parts, a name synonymous with all there is that is dignified, austere, admirable, and beneficent in philanthropy, journalism, diplomacy, legislation, sowing, reaping, binding, and the opera. The McCormicks, however, sidestepped the honor, and asked Mr. Woods to refrain. So Mr. Woods reluctantly did the next best thing and called his new playhouse the Apollo, for one who, in his time, cut no inconsiderable figure. Apollo was, it seems appropriately, a prairie god in ancient, pagan days; and (outside the Homeric hymn) the Olympic fellow who superintended the flocks and herds, the pastures, the meadows and the fertilizing dews. He protected the corn and destroyed the locusts, and he was then to tillage and vegetation what Mr. Woods is now to Gertie's garters and the chemises of Mabel. He stood for the farmer and the sultry fields, the tired sickle-men and the harvest's soft profusions. Rumors of lesions in his parentage and of other misconduct Mr. Woods regards, after studious investigation, as the cheap calumny which the whitest virtue strikes. At any rate, the title appears to Mr. Woods as seemly for a rural playhouse.

"What George Cohan has done for 'Mary'," says Mr. Woods, "I'm going to do for 'Apollo.' Apollo is a grand, old name."

Tyrone Power, whose majestic rumblings have been lost for years in the cinema's silences, will speak again in a dramatization of "The Wandering Jew," soon to be done under the direction of Messrs. Belasco and Erlanger. . . . It seems to be settled that John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter will appear in the American production of Somerset Maugham's "The Circle." . . . Richard Sterling has succeeded Gregory Kelly as William Parker in "Dulcy." Mr. Kelly will manage and act in an Indianapolis stock company with Miss Ruth Gordon, his wife.

. . . "The dramatic triangle," said Miss Laura Nelson Hall in a lecture last week, "is caused by some of the characters not being on the square."

Miss Ruth Draper will appear in original character sketches at the Blackstone theater Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. . . . Owen Davis, the indefatigable, is the author of another drama, "The Mask," which Oliver Morosco is preparing to produce in Los Angeles. . . . Franz Molnar's "Liliom" will have Miss Eva Le Gallienne as its principal actress when the Theater Guild of New York produces it.

This week's beginnings: Tonight, Miss Helen Hayes in "Bab" at the Blackstone; Ernest Truex in "Pitter Patter" at the Playhouse, and Miss Charlotte Greenwood in "Linger Longer Letty" at the Olympic. Tomorrow night, "Gertie's Garter" at the Woods. Mr. Gay's quaint delight, "The Beggar's Opera," comes back to the Central this evening after a week's absence in Canada.

Max Malini, the magician, will appear Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the Florentine room of the Congress in intimate exhibitions of his skill as a wizard. Francisco Daddi and Steindel's orchestra will make the music.

By Mr. Kaufman in this morning's New York Times:

It is something more than a year since Winchell Smith's "The Wheel" was announced—and the fact that it is only now reaching production testifies to the patient care with which Mr. Smith brings one of his dramatic entertainments to the desired state. "The Wheel" treats of gambling, as the title indicates to a degree—but just what it has to say about it is being carefully concealed. It may be inferred, however, in view of Mr. Smith's homely and wholesome precepts of other years, that gambling as an institution does not fare any too well in the new play. "The Wheel" will be produced in Atlantic City on May 2,

A One Man Play 'The Emperor Jones,' and Gilpin, Negro Actor, Is the Man

By Mabel McElliott

NEW YORK, April 9.—[Special.]—It was a silver bullet that finished the Emperor Jones. Not the silver bullet he had been treasuring, himself, for his own glorious fadeout, but one his aboriginal subjects had specially cast for him as he wandered, in a frenzy of fear, about the woods by night.

Mr. Eugene O'Neill in his play study of the workings of the tortured mind of a Pullman porter who has made himself, by means of gold braid, epaulets, and spurred boots, the emperor of a West Indian island, twangs two distinct chords in raising the temperature of his audience to fever heights. One is the insistent, sullen, menacing beat of the tomtom in the distance; the other is his stressful recurrence to the topic of that silver bullet.

Five others, formed of lead, are in his holster. They are wasted, through the black hours of the night, on formless fears, on ghostly folk who rise up out of the shadows to mock him in his unreasoning agony.

The prison guard whom he had killed back in "the states" keeping watch over a phantom band of convicts; the wild eyes of some wood thing, looking out at him greenly between tree trunks; the giant silhouetted figure of an auctioneer of some bygone day—all these lure him to rid himself of his prized ammunition, and when the terrible jaws of the crocodile god conjured up by the witch doctor open to affright him newly, the silver bullet goes the way of the others. The Emperor Jones is left to his enemies.

People who journey to see Charles S. Gilpin, the Negro player who so ably performs Mr. O'Neill's character at the Princess, behave in either one or two ways. If they are given to nerves, like the two pretty ladies who shared our box the other night, they shiver and shake, and vote it a disagreeable affair. If they sleep well o' nights and have excellent consciences, along with well trained imaginations, they applaud the excellent Gilpin so madly that he is forced to forego his supposed demise, in the final scene, and, draping himself in a striped bathrobe, make low obeisances for their pleasure.

The facts are that it is a tremendous bit of writing, searching and intimate and intensely sympathetic in its interpretation, and that its dialogue or monologue (as most of it is in the form of imperial soliloquy) is surprisingly pungent and honest.

Gilpin carries the play on his own broad shoulders all of the way. The other members of the cast are silent partners, representing only the creatures of his agonized thoughts. He runs in crazy circles through the dark woods, throughout the night and eight scenes; in the end his pursuers track him down to the self-same spot whence he started. But they are unimportant, and and, presumably, if "Lightnin'" can be persuaded to go away from New York, it will be installed at the Gaiety some time in August or September. It is the first play since "Lightnin'" to bear the name of Mr. Smith as author.

The more conservative theatrical observers refuse to generalize about such things as theater ticket prices. They realize that the theatrical producer will reduce his wares only if he feels that he cannot successfully charge the higher rate—there are a few altruistic exceptions to this rule, but most managers are people—and so long as plays vary so widely in quality it is recognized that prices also will vary, and justifiably. A play finds its own price level once its degree of merit has been determined, although there are times when a widespread downward price movement can even carry the successes along with it.

John Hunter Booth, whose dramatization of "The Masquerader" continues to be one of the two or three most successful touring atractions, has written a comedy, yclept "Like a King," which Adolph Klauber is holding in leash. Like so many offerings now in prospect, it will be tested in the near future, but the New York premiere will be reserved for the fall or beyond.

Mr. Hammond, writing in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, mentions "Eugene O'Neill, whose plays are more talked about and less attended than those of any other modern playwright." Unless one remembers "The Emperor Jones," which has been running in New York since Nov. 1, and to ever increasing audiences, to say nothing of "Different," which has been going along at matinées since December, not to mention even "Beyond the Horizon," which did a goodly trade in New York, even though Chicago would have none of it.

"That's all right; there's always room at the top."

Step Aside Maloney
Mr. Maloney:—
In your letter of March 8th in which you state that until Elgar's Band would meet Harvey's Band you would still continue to rate Elgar below par.
We felt at that time you were only bluffing and we not only called the bluff of [illegible] meeting Harvey, but offered $30.00 per man to Harvey and $200.00 to you to make good on your bluff.
Now Maloney, it is too bad that you are not an "O" Maloney from the good old sod, for if you were an "O'MALONEY" there is not a question that you would have delivered Harvey's Band at Dreamland if you had to bring them on your back, for A REAL "O" OR "Mc" WAS NEVER KNOWN TO BE BLUFFED. SO—STEP ASIDE "PLAIN MALONEY."
Step in Harvey
Mr. Cope Harvey:—
We do not quite understand why you have not accepted our offer of $30.00 per man which is over three times as high as union scale, unless it may be that our offer of $200.00 to Maloney is standing in the way. We are now forced to publicly announce the withdrawal of the $200.00 to Maloney and offer same to you, which would amount to $42.50 per man.
Mr. Harvey, this offer compels you to play Elgar or acknowledge to the dancing public that ELGAR'S BAND IS IN A CLASS BY ITSELF!

MUSIC

The Art of Song and Vitriolic Opinions Thereof

By Ruth Miller.

ONE day Wagner burst forth at Bayreuth with "We don't want any singing here." And he burned with that acid dripping tongue of his the ways of the bravura singer of the old Italian operatic school. Closing his remarks, he proceeded to instruct his singers in the proper fashion of using the voice as an orchestral instrument.

Would you have another notable's opinion of the practically inoffensive and defenseless lyric art? Perhaps the most bitter gibe that ever slipped out of the mouth of a cynic was Von Bulow's corroding jest that a tenor was not a man, but a disease.

As one reads the professional exponents of the facile critical phrase, one might imagine that the term prima donna was the direst insult in their lexicon, so contemptuously do they refer to the idolized children of song who have earned that title.

It is not so much on the individual that the music commentators vent their spleen. Justice is nearly always done—at least as far as the natural musical astigmatism of the writer permits—to the individual artist. But when writing in the general sense it is the rare critic who sugars with fair words the bitter of their scorn for star singers.

This critical tradition of contempt for the golden voiced that has come down from the time when the first folk song was droned is a bit of esthetic snobbery that does not extend to the world and his concert going wife. When the recording angel of music gurgles over the performance of a half baked orchestra whose chief occupation is exploiting the pocketbooks of its guarantors, or over a quartet that has existed because a rich man made it his hobby in one sparsely filled hall, the Galli-Curcis of the trade are singing to entranced thousands across the way.

And of all the stars who made history in the nineteenth and infant twentieth centuries, it would be difficult, on contemporary evidence, to name one whose fame was not fully deserved. Either the chroniclers of past vocal glories were glorious liars, or else the old time singers belonged to a super race.

Sontag, who had sufficient charm of personality to interest Beethoven, which accrued interest earned her the distinction of being the first to sing the soprano parts of the Choral Symphony and the "Mass in D," did not know, so we are told, what it was to sing out of tune. She was deemed the best Mozart singer of her day, and after a retirement of twenty years she returned to the stage with powers unimpaired. Which reckless statement, at least, sounds well.

But a half century hence will our relating of how Schumann-Heink held an idolatrous 3,000 hushed last Wednesday—how she had the power in her sixtieth year after forty-three years of strenuous service to Orpheus to lash with tears the eyelids of her listeners with such a maudlinity as "The Rosary"—sound more sanely judicious?

We scan the biographies of Jenny Lind, the only known prima donna who was at heart a Puritan and whose many virtues were so many gold mines to her press agents, and learn that she practiced the whole of one morning so as to be articulate on a high B flat. Patently Jenny Lind was as quaintly old fashioned about her singing as her morals. She believed that to sing greatly one must be understood.

But was her zealous consideration for the pleasure of her audience any greater than that of Mary Garden, who denied herself the prima donna vanity of interviews on the day she stepped into one among the few great executive positions ever held by a woman because, forsooth, she must save her strength for her performance in "Monna Vanna" that night?

To the music enthusiast dwelling in the realm of Now—no matter the year or the century—the honest music critic of the Past will always seem to have come from the house of Grimm.

There is another famous facet to this singing business. Consider what Henry Finck has to say under the caption "Is the Art of Song Decaying?"

"Alas for the good old times in music, the golden age of song! Things have come to a pretty pass, indeed, when one of the leading vocal teachers is constrained to tell us that 'the good taste is near lost, and the profession is going to ruin'; that some vocalists 'scream like a hen when she is laying an egg'; that the singers, particularly the Italians, neglect true study, sacrifice beauty of voice to a number of ill regulated volubilities, and neglect the pronunciation and expression of words; that, as for recitative, some overdo it and make it barking, and some hiss it, some hallow, bellow, and sing it out of tune; that there is a scarcity of the best singers and a swarm of the worst; that with some few exceptions 'the modern intonation is very bad'; that indistinct enunciation 'is nowadays more than common'; that persons 'who never sang or knew how to sing pretend not only to teach but to perfect, and find some that are weak enough to be imposed upon'; that the churchmen usually choose not the best but the biggest voices."

Or consider this: Italy hears no more such exquisite voices as in times past, particularly among the women, and to the shame of the guilty I'll tell the reason: The ignorance of the parents does not let them perceive the badness of the voice of their children, as their necessity makes them believe that to sing and grow rich is one and the same thing, and to learn music, it is enough to have a pretty face: 'Can you make anything of her?' (From Tosti's "Observations on the Florid Song," written in the year 1723, that golden age of bel canto, which is always being contrasted with our own.)

Or we read the sage statement from an erudite twentieth century, critical pen that we are "waking up in the matter of songs, but are fast asleep in the matter of singing. If on Monday violence is accepted as power, tremolo for emotion, unbalanced musical temperament for artist's skill, how can we expect the public to recognize the real thing on Friday? An ignorant and undiscerning public," he propounds sternly, "will drag any standard down." He laments "the appalling wastage of voices, most of them doomed to unfulfillment, even to irretrievable ruin, not through lack of natural gift or beauty, but through ignorance and stupidity that is beyond belief."

He elucidates further that "the old art of singing was founded on one true and quite obvious fact, neatly conveyed by Mme. Suggia in her article on the violoncello"—he does not make clear the exact connection between the violoncello and the art of vocalism, but one should not be fussy about details—in which she writes that "a noise is not music; neither can a simple phrase be beautiful which contains any sound other than a beautiful sound."

Which is all highly clear and illuminating, and we don't doubt at all throws the strong revealing searchlight of critical truth upon the blemishes in the singing of our Mary Gardens, Farrars, McCormacks, Carusos, and Galli-Curcis. These short and pithy sentences tell us exactly why and wherein the vocal great of modernity fall far, far below the standard of the Pattis, Jenny Linds, Malibrans, and Jean de Reskes of yesteryear. But I don't think his remarks on the decadence in modern singing were quite so vitriolic and conclusive as those of Tosti on the vocalists of 1723.

To dip into Dulcyism, there has never been through the so-called ages an artistic gift so nearly universal as that of song. Folk song is the most obvious illustration of this. In primitive communities men, women, and children all lift their voices in comparison with their fellows, and in some illogical and unfathomed fashion song arises from these careless and carefree efforts, melodies rarely wanting in a rude sort of beauty by which the musical growing pains are eased. From such songs the whole art of music has sprung, even that maligned vocal virtuosity which ministered to its acolytes with the loud, long, high note, the glittering run, and whirring trill.

The common sense of the matter is that prima donnas contract that affliction of stardom because theirs are the finest voices and they know cunningly the wisest and best use of them. To blame the public for worshiping their greatness is hopelessly illogical. It is merely another manifestation of mortal's groping for life's best.

A pianist or an orchestra may furnish an inoffensive accompaniment to conversation, but at the sound of a voice lifted in ever so tawdry a song there is silence and often silent criticism.

Or perhaps at the first sweet long note we echo the acetuous Von Bulow or Wagner or maylike the old Scotch woman who could not be won to song even by the information that a certain anthem was written by King David, and who greeted the knowledge with the shrewd "Now I ken why it was that Saul threw his spear at the lad who was playin' till him."

A One Man Play

Ellis) who shambles about is also unimportant. It is a one man play.

If it seemed likely that any one would listen to us, we should make the faltering suggestion that it would be well to pad the stage of the Princess these nights with a soft theatrical sod, so that the emperor, in treading his delirious way about the woods, should not clump the boards with such painful realism. Surely the carpet of a West Indian woods is not of the consistency of a plank. This is a timid suggestion, but a vital one.

It appears we were, according to the cognoscenti, slightly wrong in our judgment of "Nemesis," the new Augustus Thomas drama, which was the sole premiere of the week on Broadway. "Nemesis," we said, was a corking show. We still think so, in spite of chilling, superior references to it in the public prints as "a Grand Guignol horror."

"Nemesis" is good. That is our story, and we intend to stick to it.

Yes, weeks from today the scintillant small talk of Mr. Thomas' well dressed lady puppets will be just as brave and gay as ever. Nor will matinée and evening repetition dull the startling effect of the most extraordinary killing this side of the movies. We have, you understand, no special taste for killings. In fact, we shudder away from headlines exposing them. But the one Mr. Emmett Corrigan perpetrates at the Hudson theater is no mean trick, but artistry.

When he has done to death his beautiful and faithless wife, without writhings or groanings, he stands beside her, silent, unremorseful. No gusty gasps escape his tight lips. The thing is done, as he planned it, since the first awful moment when the possibility of her infidelity occurred to him.

This may sound like melodrama de luxe. It will sound more melodramatic, still, we fear, when we tell you that Mr. Corrigan (who is, in the play, a prosaic merchant of silks) cruelly fastens the blame upon Mr. Pedro De Cordoba, the long haired sculptor with whom his wife had planned to fly to Paris.

The fingerprint clew, he argues, is a definite and damning one. Why not have made rubber fingers, with the imprint of Pedro's unmistakable lines and circles thereon? Circumstantial evidence does the rest, and the trial scene which follows is one of the best bits of this season's playing.

"Nemesis," produced under the bright, darting eye of Mr. George M. Cohan, is superior entertainment. Olive Tell, as the ill-fated beauty, is easy to observe; John Craig astonishingly real as the vociferous attorney, and Marie Goff, Roland Bottomley and Eleanor Woodruff well chosen components of a well chosen cast.

THAT giddy-ap-giddy-ap-whoa-pony-boy Tom Mix mixes again to fairly good advantage in "Hands Off." He'll go a long way and breathe a lot of air before he gets another picture like "The Road Demon." "Hands Off" is only an also ran compared to it. Just the same, the latest release is a nice, lively offering that will please the admirers of the dashing Tom.

Like Yankee Doodle, he comes to town riding on his pony, his object being what he feelingly describes as "lip liniment." And what does he see as he enters Main street?

A beautiful blonde!

What is the beautiful blonde doing?

Nothing. Absolutely nothing!

Well, what is being done to the beautiful blonde?

The beautiful blonde is being insulted by a dark gentleman in sombrero and chaps with a villainous little mustache and a brow corrugated with much evil thought.

Then what happens?

This is what happens:

The visiting Texan lassos the dark gentleman, slings him over a telegraph wire, and there lets him hang until he apologizes to the beautiful blonde. The hanging is enlivened by frequent descents into the town horse trough, over which runs the telegraph wire.

This, of course, introduces the Texan to the beautiful blonde. In time he meets her father, who needs a hired hand. He makes his way to the ranch. It isn't long, however, before he leaves there, for the rancher's worthless son manufactures lies about him. Father believes son and the Texan is too much of a man to tell tales.

The Texan then becomes a rancher and undertakes to clear the vicinity of a band of no-accounts and cattle rustlers that has been terrifying it for some time. You're not surprised to learn that the leader of the band is no other than the gentleman of the telegraph wire-horse trough episode.

For a couple of reels excitement reigns supreme. Houses fall, bullets fly, horses stampede, and a lynching almost occurs. Tex, however, is here, there, and everywhere, and right on the job for the happy ending.

There are a number of amusing incidents in the picture. The subtitles are quite well done, though not to compare with those of "The Road Demon." There's a lot of scenery, dust, and western atmosphere, through which move all the players vurr' creditably indeed.

Pauline Curley, a cunning child we don't see nearly so often as we'd like to, plays opposite Mr. Mix.

MISS SYLVIA NELIS AND PERCY HEMMING in "THE BEGGAR'S OPERA" CENTRAL

When "The Three Musketeers" appears you will see in the cast, besides Douglas Fairbanks, Mary MacLaren, Marguerite De Lamotte, Barbara Le Marr, Thomas Holding, Boyd Irwin, Sydney Franklin, Charles Stevens, Nigel De Brullier, Willis Robards, Don Poff, and Adolph Manfou. The Three Musketeers will be Leon Barry, George Siegemann, and Eugene Pallette.

Bessie Love, who has become a member of Hobart Bosworth's company, is setting forth on the first seagoing trip of her five year film career. She will join the rest at the Santa Cruz islands. She is to play the leading ingénue part in "The Sea Lion."

It is said that more than 5,000 American and Canadian churches are now equipped with projection machines and are showing pictures regularly to their congregations.

William Lloyd Wright, head of the short reel feature department of Universal City, is said to have worked twenty years ago as a reporter on Harding's paper, the Marion Star.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

"SWEET SIXTEEN": I'm sorry your Monday was "blue Monday." It's never chilly in this corner. Am glad you like the roto. I have a lot of fun with it, too. There has been a picture of Harrison Ford in that section, but we'll try to put another some time. The following are the addresses you ask for: Johnny Jones, in care of Goldwyn, Culver City, Cal.; Harrison Ford, care of Norma Talmadge company, 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York City; Cullen Landis, Goldwyn, Culver City, Cal.; Casson Ferguson, 1522 Manhattan place, Los Angeles; Gladys Walton, University City, Cal.; Elaine Hammerstein, Selznick, 729 Seventh avenue, New York; Shirley Mason, Fox, Hollywood, Cal., and Raymond McKee, 587 Riverside drive, New York.

JOHANNA: Yes, I think we should use our own judgment. So your sister has to give up the flat, has she? Well, $80 is a lot of money. It is, indeed, something to have handed pie gracefully to the soldiers. I am sure you have plenty of ideas. Some day maybe you will be able to get them in shape, as you so wistfully long to. Thank you for the poem. It makes me think of my own.

S. R. W.: James Cruze is directing at the present time. A letter addressed to him in care of Paramount, Hollywood, Cal., will reach him. Marguerite Snow is on the coast, too. The girl called Florence in "The Million Dollar Mystery" was Florence La Badie. She died some time ago as the result of an automobile accident.

O. WATTS THEUSE: I haven't an idea who your friend in "a gray Prince Albert coat" is. "Visualize, my dear!" you say. Well, I've been visualizing here for a week and I can't guess him yet. Come on, tell mother just who it is you want her to throw a rock at.

K. E.: Norma Talmadge may be reached at 318 East Forty-eighth street. You're so welcome!

MUGGSIE: If there's one thing we're fine at it's giving advice! Send in a stamped and self-addressed envelope and I'll tell you what you want to know.

M. E. C.: I wouldn't publish your letter for anything, but I'll have to have a stamped and self-addressed envelope if I'm to send you a list of the studios.

J. M. N.: Thank you for your lovely letter.

WILLYS-KNIGHT

The car that is good for many years

You do not have to be of a mechanical turn of mind to appreciate that a motor with sliding telescopic sleeves will last longer than a motor whose chief parts are in continuous concussion.

The Sliding Sleeves of the Willys-Knight Sleeve-Valve Motor instead of wearing out—wear in with use, producing a condition of ascending efficiency up to 50,000 miles or more. This means more power and less upkeep, instead of the usual experience—more upkeep and less power.

A GRAND PIANO meeting in every detail the highest standards of piano making—for $350. A grand piano designed by and built under the personal supervision of the world's foremost piano maker—for $350. A grand piano of the best materials, with best construction—with all the tone, quality, durability, and reliability assured by the Osborn trademark, guaranteed in every way with you as the judge—for $350.

Fill out the coupon below. It gives you a position well in front of the long waiting list that will be necessitated because we can make only a limited number of pianos to start with. It will not obligate you to buy; it simply gives you an option—when you have seen the Osborn Grand at your dealer's. This is your opportunity to own a fine Grand Piano—for pleasure and recreation in your home, for the education of your children, for entertaining.

A high class instrument—a beautiful mahogany grand piano—for $350—think of it! Fill out that coupon and mail today.

Why Dealers Must Rush Reservations

Through the editorial columns of several musical publications, the news of the Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co.'s great contribution to the musical world has already reached the dealers. Letters, telegrams and telephone messages are already coming in to us with requests for agencies and territorial rights. Every musical dealer realizes the tremendous immediate demand that is about to come for Osborn Grands, Uprights and Player Pianos.

But practically no sales rights have as yet been given. One dealer only will be permitted to sell Osborn pianos in any logically restricted territory. That dealer will, of course, be carefully selected.

To those dealers who have not yet put in their requests for an Osborn agency, we suggest promptness. To delay may cost you the opportunity to capitalize on this tremendous demand springing from practically every home in America. The Pianos are priced by their manufacturers. You have no price competitors; and you have no troubles because the Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co. makes good any fault or objection that may arise—direct.

Why Osborn Grands Cost So Little

The Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co. is known throughout the musical instrument business as a corporation that, by the introduction of most remarkable patented labor-saving devices, has cut production costs to the absolute minimum.

The Osborn Grand, Upright and Player Pianos are designed and built by the world's foremost piano builder. His wide experience and the adaptation of the wonderful Osborn labor-saving devices, enable us to manufacture at a cost far lower than anything ever before dreamed of in the piano manufacturing business—without the slightest sacrifice in quality of construction or materials.

Last, but by no means least, comes a consideration that will save millions of dollars for those people who appreciate and desire to have good music in their home and clubs. We realize that this is in every sense a quantity production proposition; that the American people do love good music and appreciate the piano as a beautiful adornment to the home, and because we know that, as a result, thousands of Osborn Pianos will be sold—in fact we expect soon to manufacture one million pianos a year—the Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co. is content to sell the Grands, Uprights, and Player Pianos, at a margin of profit far below what has hitherto been customary in the piano manufacturing field.

In $350 for a grand piano, the Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co. has hit the lowest possible price. A grand piano can never be bought for less. There is but one conclusion—accept the opportunity that has arisen, possess that which is with millions a life ambition out of reach, but now easy for you to acquire—fill out the coupon and give yourself the chance to buy an Osborn Grand—now.

Why You Should Own a Grand Piano

There is not a home that should not have a piano, and it should be a Grand piano because the grands are the most beautiful pianos made.

A piano is the quick solution of your entertainment and recreation problem. An Osborn Grand Piano can be had for the cost of a trip a week to the theatre for two people for a year—and yet the piano lasts a lifetime and entertains the entire family and its friends.

You cannot overestimate the educational value of the piano. In addition to bettering the tastes and broadening the knowledge of the grown-ups by teaching them the classical love lyrics and the romances, adventures and historic deeds commemorated in song, the piano helps the little folks by aiding them to learn songs and verses and even lessons. Many a grown-up can remember how the alphabet used to be taught in rhyme and recited in sing-song because it was easier to remember that way; in exactly the same manner the piano is utilized for teaching today.

Around the piano, training in dancing, recitation and all social graces will center.

That woman is justly proud whose living room is adorned by a grand piano. She is the envy of her neighbors and friends everywhere. For with every one of them a grand piano is an ambition. A grand piano is a social distinction more sought than the finest motor car.

To the head of the family there is but one more thing that should be said: Picture your evenings of the future as like the scene shown here; your family happy in the enjoyment of your Grand Piano, while you watch and listen, contented and proud to know that you have provided them with that which contributes so much to the happiness of the home—a Grand Piano.

Why It Should Be an Osborn

The Grand Piano you place in your home should be an Osborn because the Osborn has every desirable quality of the most expensive pianos made and yet costs you at the rate of only $6.75 a week for one year—and you enjoy it throughout your lifetime.

As an instrument it is high class in every way—fine movement, fine materials, fine design. It is made by a company known throughout the musical world for its business integrity and for the high quality of its products. For over 24 years the name of Samuel C. Osborn has stood for quality, tone and durability in musical instruments.

The Osborn Grand is a shimmeringly beautiful thing of mahogany, with grace of line, richness of material, splendor of finish.

Osborn Pianos are guaranteed to the limit. If you are not satisfied in every way, the Samuel C. Osborn Mfg. Co. refunds your money. No dealer is permitted to argue with customers on that score. We make the pianos—we will back them to the last penny you spend.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Slanting Pockets and Shawl Collar on Dinner Coat

By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

NEW YORK.—Some witty Frenchman has likened genuine fashion to a window pane through which you look without being conscious that it is there. Whistler, the great painter, expressed the same thought when he declared "Finished work should show no trace of work." The secret of prepossessing appearance is to make certain that you have on becomingly cut clothes and harmonious colors, and, then, to put yourself out of your mind.

The scourge of men's fashions is the "best dresser" who tries to arrest attention through "originality." If one walked on all fours, or turned handsprings down the church aisle, that would be "originality" of a certain sort. One would undoubtedly arrest attention, but one also undoubtedly would be arrested. There is room for personality in the choice of clothes, but originality belongs in the circus, in cinema or in slapstick comedy.

The 1921 dinner (Tuxedo) jacket of black unfinished worsted or dark gray cheviot has shawl lapels, which are silk or satin faced to the edge. This garment is well waisted and has slanting pockets. The skirts hang trim and close, with no suggestion of a ripple or flare. The collar is the wing and the bowknot tie is the narrow affair worn under the collar tabs.

Knitted four-in-hands are again in fashion. They last long, do not show pinholes, and are now procurable in almost as many variegated colors and patterns as woven silks are.

If cigaret holders get any longer.

A type of derby hat, known as a British Bowler, has gained widespread vogue in the larger cities during the last year or so. One of these derbies is shown. The crown is rather low and the brim is inclined to be snug. Such a hat is not becoming to every face, and as in getting engaged or eating chicken croquettes at strange restaurants, or bragging of a wine cellar, one should practice discretion.

The low cut laced Oxford shoe of patent leather to go with the Tuxedo jacket is portrayed here. It is the blucher shape, having a tapering, oval toe, a flat heel, and a wide ribbon. Such a shoe is tiptop for dancing. Trousers to accompany the dinner jacket are cut fuller width than heretofore, sometimes with a bell.

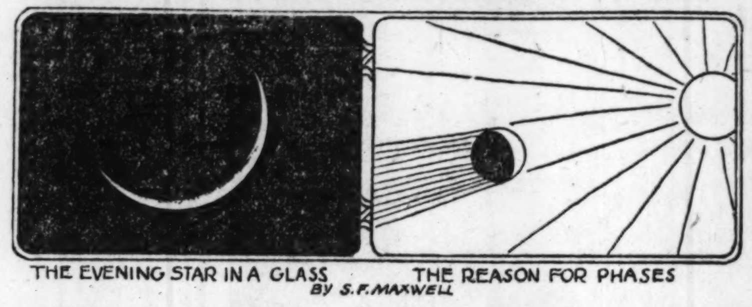
ASTRONOMY



THE EVENING STAR IN A GLASS THE REASON FOR PHASES

BY S. F. MAXWELL

MOONS AND CRESCENTS.

SOME time ago a correspondent wrote in, asking if it were possible for a new moon to be seen rising. Some author had said that in Africa it was done that way. It being, I suppose, a part of every astronomer's reason for being to catch such statements, I replied that the author was misinformed, that a new moon never could be seen rising, and it was doubtless the old moon he had in mind.

All this leads me to think that the subject of moons and crescents in general is not widely understood, and being an astronomer whose duty day and night, even to being awakened by telephone just when I get nicely to sleep in the morning, is to explain the skies, I will begin.

The phases of the moon are caused by sunshine falling on our satellite. The moon is a solid, opaque globe going around the earth. When it is behind the earth, opposite the sun, its whole illuminated face is turned toward us, and our night side incidentally toward it, and so we see it as a round, full disk.

Half way between the sun, either going to the full or past it, it is in the quarter phase, when only half the daylight face is presented to the earth. When the moon passes by the sun its daylight face is turned away, of course, and its night side toward us, and therefore it is invisible. This phase is called old moon, or often, "the dark of the moon."

The moon moves backward in the sky, that is, from west to east. It takes twenty-eight days to complete one trip. As it leaves the dark phase and moves eastward from the sun a narrow hair line of light appears on its sunward edge, reaching half way around the ball. This is the crescent, and if you will think a moment you can see why the horns should point away from the sun, no matter whether the moon runs high or low.

You can also see why a new moon can never be seen rising. The sun always rises before it does, and so drowns its faint light out of the day. New moons can only be seen after sunset, when the sun is below the horizon.

In a similar way the old moon, the last phase in the morning sky before the dark, can only be seen just at dawn.

Full moons always occur opposite the sun. It would be an impossibility to have one anywhere else in the sky.

There are other objects in the sky besides the moon that have phases. One of them is Venus, that brilliant white star you see at evening in the west. I turned my telescope on it the other night. It was a thin crescent, like a moon two days old. It was so large I felt sure a pair of binoculars would show its shape, and sure enough, they did.

The story that convinced a million motorists

Showing sediment formed after 500 miles of running. The bottle at the left shows ordinary oil after use. The bottle at the right contains Veedol after use.

TWO test bottles from the laboratory! They show vividly what happens inside your engine—they show the cause of bearings that pound, of scored cylinders, of fouled spark plugs—they show the cause of 90% of the engine troubles you have to pay for.

The bottle at your left, half black, contains ordinary oil after use in an ordinary engine for 500 miles of driving. The bottle on the right contains Veedol, the lubricant that resists heat.

In the bottle of ordinary oil after use, almost one-half is taken up with black sediment—sediment formed during use. Under the intense heat of the engine—200° to 1000° F.—ordinary oil forms great quantities of black sediment.

Sediment has no lubricating value. It causes premature wear which cuts the life of an engine in two. This is the hidden toll taken by sediment in inferior oil.

Sediment is reduced 86% when you use Veedol. A million motorists who have seen this remarkable illustration of the effect of engine heat on ordinary oil now use Veedol exclusively. With Veedol in the crankcase most serious engine troubles are eliminated.

Have your engine flushed out to cleanse it of grit, sediment and thickened oil. Put in Veedol. Leading dealers have it in stock. Ask for a supply of Veedol to-day.

Veedol lubricants for every part of the car

Use Veedol lubricant for all parts of the car: VEEDOL for the engine (light zero, medium, heavy, special heavy, extra heavy); for the differential and transmission: VEEDOL TRANS-GEAR OIL or GEAR COMPOUND; for the tractor and truck: WORM DRIVE OIL; GRAPHITE GREASE; CUP GREASE.

Mail Planes Cover 1,500,000 Miles in 3 Years

e De Haviland Flies 38,348 Miles at 94 M. P. H.

BY MORROW KRUM.

WENTY-ONE air mail planes in use by the United States air mail service have flown more than 1,500,000 miles and have carried the neighborhood of 40,000,000 let- since the establishment of the ry system three years ago, ac- ing to a statement made by the ation bureau of the postoffice rtment.

e prize ship of these veterans of ir was De Haviland plane No. 76, h had traveled 38,348 miles in hours before it went out of serv- st October. The average speed 94.4 miles an hour. The ship with ext best record was De Haviland 74, which flew 38,381 miles in 420 s and is still in service across the Nevada mountains from Reno San Francisco. Its average speed hour is 89.1 miles during its entire d of service.

xt to these topnotchers stand the Curtiss R-4 planes. Of these No. had a record at the close of 1920 32,944 miles in 378 hours and 49 tes in the air, with an average d of 88.3 miles per hour. The sec- Curtiss R-4 plane with better than miles was No. 35, which covered miles in 397 hours and 25 min- in the air. This is an average d of 77.9 miles an hour. Planes and 35 are now operating between York and Washington, D. C.

he first airplanes used in the air l service on the date of its inau- ration, May 15, 1918, were some Cur- JN4 training planes. The first of service was opened with planes and 12 of this type. Both of these planes are now in operation between Louis and Chicago. No. 11 has ered 31,208 miles in 468 hours and minutes of flying, an average speed 66.7 miles per hour, and No. 12 has 30,090 miles in 447 hours and 25 utes, for an average speed of miles per hour.

he first planes purchased by the office department were eight ma- es manufactured by the Standard craft corporation of Elizabeth, N. J., h was in business only during the Seven of these planes are still existence, two of them flying daily een St. Louis and Chicago.

Two of the Glenn L. Martin twin r planes put into service in the r of 1919 have exceeded 25,000 s of service.

he Junker all metal monoplanes are atest planes put into service. They not had the mileage that should been obtained from them, owing rious engineering defects in their system and engine installations. ause of fatal accidents, which killed seven mail pilots, the Junker ships are not being used on the transcontinental service at present. A committee in Washington is endeavoring to decide whether or not their use shall be entirely discontinued.

STILL FLYING

The fire which leveled to the ground the hangars of the Ralph D. Diggins Flying school at Ashburn field on the morning of April 2 did not stop the work of the school. Ralph Diggins lost in the flames five ships, ten motors, all of his wireless equipment, and several hundred dollars' worth of tools and general accessories to the flying business. However, the twenty students attending the flying school were given their duel rides on the afternoon of the day of the fire in two Canadian Curtiss ships Diggins rushed to the field. Though the ground work of the school was temporarily stopped, the students received their flying instruction regularly.

Parachutes Might Have Saved 30% of Aviation Deaths

SOME interesting data upon airplane accidents and how the lives of pilots might have been saved has been collected during the last five years by Floyd Smith, head of the parachute manufacturing company bearing his name.

Smith has collected newspaper stories of every fatal airplane accident that has occurred since 1916. Each accident is listed under one of three captions, which the collector has termed "useless," "doubtful," and "could have saved," meaning that in the first case the life of the aviator could not have been saved by a 'chute, that in the second case the result would have been doubtful, and that in the third case the pilots would have been saved had they worn parachutes strapped to their backs and breasts.

The surprising part of the theoretical survey is that, according to Smith's calculations, more than 33 per cent of the aviators who have met death in crashes had an opportunity to jump free from their ship and would not have been killed had they worn 'chutes.

Smith, who manufactures the parachutes now used by the army air service, asserts that the actual saving of life by parachutes is not the only function 'chutes will perform in the next war.

"The delivering of men or messages will be done largely by airplane in the next war," said he. "It is now possible to drop men over territories where airplanes cannot land.

"For instance, an officer desires to deliver a message to a unit of soldiers who are in a forest. He gives the message to an aviator. The aviator is pulled from the wing of an airplane, which flies low over the trees. The jumper lands, perhaps in a tree, but he gets down safely and the message is delivered. Forest fire fighters are now being pulled from the wings of airplanes over western forests."

The day will come, the aviator manufacturer asserts, when all flyers will be forced to wear parachutes when flying. He asserted that the feeling of security given by a parachute has saved the life of many an aviator.

Stanley Car

THIS statement is made advisedly in full recognition of the present-day vogue of internal explosive cars.

The reason why the Stanley has the qualities most wanted in a motor car—why it has power at low speeds—why it has the fastest pickup—why it runs smoothly and quietly at all speeds—why there is no clutching nor gear-shifting—why there is no chilling nor balking in winter—why one throttle controls the car—why kerosene fuel is used—is because the fuel is burned, not exploded, and is converted into steam which is stored in advance and may be instantly applied in the required volume to the driving wheels.

We believe that this is power correctly generated, correctly controlled, and correctly applied to the rear axle.

What Do You Know about an Automobile?

YOU may know more than most people about an automobile, but life is too short to learn everything about it unless you intend to be an automobile engineer.

So, after all, the safe way to buy a car is the same way you buy your typewriter, for instance, consider the intent and reputation of the makers.

The Standard Steel Car Company of Pittsburgh entered into the manufacture of Standard Eight cars with the idea of creating a sound, permanent business which would be based on an ever-growing public confidence. This fact is the big feature of Standard Eight Cars.

Other features are power, easy gear-shifting, double ignition, lightning pick-up, effortless hill climbing, extremely low speed possible in high—and other points that make motoring a pleasure. All cars have some of these features; the difference is in degree—and that can only be expressed by a trial.

See for yourself the difference by taking a trial ride in a Standard Eight.

A Safety Appliance for Ford Users

Makes Your Ford Easily Controlled on Rough Roads

Burlington Radius Rods

Ford cars use wishbone radius rods. Every jar or bump is communicated directly back through this wishbone radius rod on to the crank case. The BURLINGTON RADIUS ROD is different. It is attached directly to the frame. Eliminates the possibility of a broken crank case, which causes loss of oil, burning out of motors, breaking of engine arms, and thus we save motor expense.

Eliminate Front End Trouble of Ford Cars

Wheels cannot lock and the car will not turn over. The use of the BURLINGTON RADIUS ROD makes steering easier. Road jars are not communicated to the steering wheel. The BURLINGTON RADIUS ROD takes up the jars.

TEN REASONS WHY

1—Cannot break crank case. Our rod connected to frame.
2—Cannot break engine arm for the same reason.
3—Practically impossible to bend. Most rigid radius rod for Fords.
4—Removes jar on wheels. Wheels absolutely cannot lock.
5—Makes steering easier, improves the control, holds the road better.
6—Insures safe and smooth driving by rough users over rough roads.
7—No holes to drill. All parts interchangeable. Saves labor and worry.
8—Can easily be installed on any Ford car or truck. Requires only three bolts on the side.
9—Made of solid steel. Sold on an absolute guarantee or your money back.
10—Insures safety and normal road shocks are cushioned through the spring device.

Sold on an absolute guarantee. If in ten days not satisfactory, money is refunded. Any one can put it on. Price, $10.00, F. O. B. Chicago. A splendid opportunity for dealers. Used by well known and largest business concerns, Ford fleet owners, in Milwaukee, Chicago and elsewhere, with great success and satisfaction.

Paving Price Battle Brings New Action on Illinois Program for Adequate Highway Maintenance

Advent of Touring Season Takes Gov. Small and State Party on Expedition Into Wisconsin.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

FAIR weather and the lure of April distances drew thousands of motor fans into the country last week and brought renewed demands for immediate action on the Illinois paving plans from all parts of the state. The first taste of the open road also served to recall last year's strong sentiment in favor of the Wisconsin highway maintenance and patrol system and the adoption in Illinois of temporary improvement measures to take care of the main traveled arteries until they can be paved.

Early action on the maintenance question is expected to follow the motor through Wisconsin, which this week will take Gov. Len Small, Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling, C. R. Miller, director of public works: Louis L. Emmerson, secretary of state; S. E. Bradt, superintendent of highways, and thirty-two senators to inspect typical Badger trunk lines.

The official party expects to leave Springfield Thursday, April 14, at noon, for Rockford, where it will be met and entertained by the Motor club. On Friday morning the party will leave Rockford by motor to be met in Beloit by A. R. Hirst, superintendent and guiding spirit of the Wisconsin system, together with other state and Wisconsin Good Roads association officials. The inspection schedule will take Gov. Small into Madison Friday evening in time to attend a second banquet given by the Madison Motor club, and will end the tour Saturday night.

Belief that the paving price deadlock has hopelessly retarded the Illinois highway building program for 1921 makes states maintenance work an immediate necessity, according to Chicago good roads advocates. They have urged the governor to hasten the establishment of patrols on all Illinois bond issue roads following his northern tour, but they have also warned him against earth and gravel roads as a permanent Illinois program. In this they are supported by acknowledged highway authorities of the entire west.

"We are rather proud of the way we keep up our dirt and gravel roads," Mr. Hirst told THE TRIBUNE in commenting on Gov. Small's visit to his state this week, "but we consider it no more than a temporary relief measure. We have graded and graveled as many state trunk lines as possible and placed patrolmen on them every few miles to keep them in constant repair in order to keep the wheels of traffic moving over them until such time as we can pave them. Our whole system is based on the country pavement plan and the practical workings of the patrol system only serves to increase our desire to rush the permanent work. No natural road can compare with a paved road, no matter how well it is maintained, as a transportation artery.

"Comparison of the cost in moving traffic over the natural road and the paved road shows that even the best natural road is poor economy. Wisconsin is still far from the realization of the ideal highway system, but we are working fast to that end, and the patrol and repair system has proved itself the best relief measure until that end is reached."

Last year Minnesota adopted a like system to care for country roads until pavements could be laid. In Nebraska the state spent $4,000 per mile in grading and draining trunk lines preparatory to paving, and established patrols to keep the new grades in shape. Michigan was forced to depend largely on the gravel and stone roads built for permanent use, and suffered a practically complete highway breakdown as the result. Northern Indiana found the same disaster threatening the important highways, which carried almost as much traffic as the railroads, and hastened rushed paving work on all roads as the only relief.

In line with the maintenance agitation engineers of the Illinois highway department have issued a statement to show the cost of upkeep on various road types in the state. For the year 1919 maintenance per mile of the wearing surfaces, exclusive of roadsides, was as follows: Brick, $42.63; P. C. concrete, $54.05; bit. concrete, $244.75; bit. macadam, $254.01; waterbound macadam, $299.45; gravel, $129.24; oiled earth, $63.37; earth, $76,69.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

DIXIE has been welcomed as an unexpected ally in the national campaign for the revival of automobile business. Reports from selling centers throughout the south indicate that 1921 fighters have suceeded in overcoming the predicted slump due to falling cotton prices, and that the spring demand for new cars will compare favorably with last year's record. R. C. Rueschaw, sales manager for the Reo company, brought a detailed report of business conditions south of the Mason and Dixon line to Chicago last week, following a three weeks' tour. In his opinion, the southern automobile demand will reach the normal line in less than three weeks.

Kelly R. Jacoby, formerly vice president in charge of purchases for the Willys-Overland company, has been appointed general sales manager of the Briscoe Motor corporation as the first step in the aggressive reorganization campaign planned by President Clarence A. Earl.

Louis Disbrow, former dirt track racing star, has left the speedway and signed up a permanent entry blank for a long engagement on Auto Row. He will make Chicago his home and has already taken up new duties as district distributor for Rajo Valve-In-Heads and other Rajo improvements. District headquarters are at 2118 Michigan avenue.

Motor Transport Second in Race for U. S. Honors

STATISTICS for 1920 show that motor trucks carried more tonnage than either inland waterways or interurban trolley lines. Motor transport now ranks second only to rail transportation.

In less than ten years' time motor transportation has grown from nothing to its present prominence. A concrete example of the remarkable growth is had in a check taken of traffic between Akron and Cleveland. In two years loaded truck tonnage increased approximately 200 per cent.

The travel and transport bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company points out four problems that are up for solution now. They are: Formation of local associations to eliminate rate cutting and other harmful practices; expanding in the field of junction terminal transfer of freight; to break shippers of the "exclusively railroad habit" and educate them to use motor trucks for short hauls; and to warn truck operators against overloading and overspeeding in order not to antagonize highway authorities.

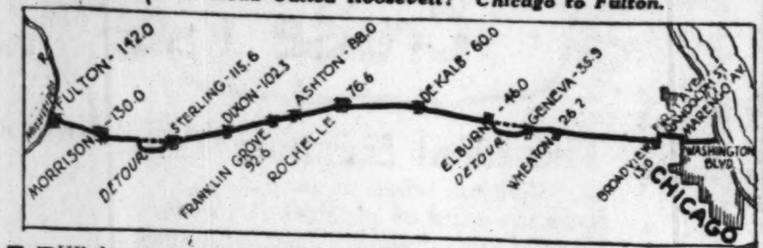
1—The Road Called Roosevelt: Chicago to Fulton.



HUB deep in springtime, Chicago's finest tribute to the memory of Col. Roosevelt winds away across leagues of rich country to pour its highway hoards over the Lyons-Fulton bridge, which spans the Mississippi and taps the great west. One hundred and forty-two miles of practically unbroken concrete, it lies as a lasting monument to the immortal mind that saw in highway transportation the final strong link in his country's certain success.

The north state trunk line, an artery that today rivals the railroad in importance, has played a big part in the life and development of Illinois. It was a line of communication when the first white men pushed down from the north. It carried the first lumbering stage coach as part of the old Kellogg trail and served the grist mill at Dixon when Chicago was still a cluster of log huts.

To find this paved path into Illinois yesterdays, go west in Washington boulevard to its end in Oak Park. Turn north one block to Randolph street and left to First avenue, Maywood. Turn south to Roosevelt road and follow the new concrete through Wheaton to Geneva (mileage 35.9.)

Pick up the Lincoln Highway markers and follow them out of Geneva over the south road to Elburn 46.0, avoiding the first gap in the paving. Continue with the Lincoln markers through De Kalb, 60.0, Rochelle, 76.6, Ashton, 88.0, Franklin Grove, 92.6, Dixon, 102.3, Sterling, 115.6, Morrison, 130.0 to Fulton, 142.0.

Contractors will begin this week to close the three remaining short gaps in the continuous pavement. The Geneva detour is well marked, and is laid over a good gravel road. At Nachusa a macadam road forms the gap and is serviceable until construction starts, when a detour should be made over the gravel road 1½ miles south of Nachusa. In leaving Sterling, go to the end of the brick pavement, turn to the left through Gault, and pick up the concrete again at Agnew.

This tour is the first of a series which will cover all of the federal aid highways under construction in Illinois.

LOOK OVER THE RIMS.

The present is an excellent time to give the rims the once over. These parts should be given a coating of aluminum paint, graphite, or rim paint before they are replaced, to prevent their rusting together.

Wausau, Wis., Asks Tourists to Visit Them This Summer

The action of the county board of Marathon county, Wisconsin, in opening to the touring public free use of Marathon park opens one of the most enjoyable and beautiful pieces of natural camping ground in Wisconsin.

The grounds comprise eighty acres of virgin pine timber located exactly in the center of the state at Wausau. The grounds have been carefully cleared of all underbrush, excellent roadways built through it, and arrangements made for every convenience for campers, including a plentiful supply of clear, fresh, and pure drinking water.

The donation of $30,000 by C. C. Yawkey of Wausau and the late D. L. Plumer of the same city has made possible the extensive improvements.

Largely because of its Ansted Engine, already famed as the "miracle motor."

High valve lift gives the Ansted Engine power efficiency only available for racing cars until the creation of this new motor with its "rocking chair" rocker arm preserved this miraculous power and forever banished the noise.

The importance of this sweeping discovery is beyond statement.

It is one of the modern wonders of motoring.

No vibration at highest speed—no overheating—these are more advancements attributed to the perfected cooling and oiling systems of the Ansted Engine.

BUILDERS OF THE PIKE'S PEAK CHAMPION

It Saves Money On Every Job It Does

The "Caterpillar's" field of usefulness is by no means limited to road work. On farm and ranch, in the mining, oil and lumber industries—wherever power and endurance are at a premium, the "Caterpillar"* has no real competitor*

The road-building contractor who owns a Holt "Caterpillar"* Tractor has tremendous advantage over the contractor who still clings to old-fashioned methods 〰 Cost figures compiled from all sections of the country prove conclusively that the "Caterpillar"* is the most efficient method of moving dirt, clearing the right of way, pulling scrapers, graders and scarifiers 〰 With its mighty power and sure traction the "Caterpillar"* will operate on steepest grades and in loose fills 〰 It will pull a 12-foot blade grader, taking a full bite through toughest sod and rockiest soil 〰 It keeps going without interruption in all kinds of weather and saves money on every job it does 〰 We will gladly arrange, at your convenience, a moving picture exhibition showing the "Caterpillar"* engaged in actual road work 〰 Write, wire or telephone for complete information.

The dollar you will invest in tires this spring deserves the most careful consideration.

It is our task to help you make that dollar do its best for you.

The task is comparatively simple from our viewpoint. We would like you to get the same point of view.

You will if you will let us explain what a Majestic cord tire has to offer in the way of Long Life, Economy, and Mileage.

"I Never Knew How It Worked!"

This remark was made by a prospective buyer after about an hour's examination of the cutout chassis now on our sales floor. He was one of hundreds who, during the last few days, came in to look it over. Let us show you the "insides" of a Stearns—then you, too, will know why there can be practically no carbon trouble. You will appreciate the many advantages of positive valve action. You will understand why some Stearns owners have even asked to have the motor of their old car put in a new chassis. You will fully accept our statement that a troubleless four cylinder Stearns-Knight motor delivers the flexibility of six cylinder construction without six cylinder complications. You will realize that the high percentage of Stearns owners who are driving their 2nd—3rd—or 4th Stearns are guided by service—not sentiment.

A TRINDL-IZED MOTOR IS AS GOOD AS NEW

When your motor has lost its power, lacks compression, pumps oil, fouls its spark plugs, develops a knock or piston slap, consumes gas and oil out of proportion to the miles you travel—it is a sure sign that your motor should be Trindl-ized.

Trindl rejuvenates old motors and absolutely guarantees them to perform with the same "pep" and efficiency as when new.

Hotel Somerset

ECONOMY

EVERYONE knows that life at the Somerset combines the luxuries of a high-class Hotel with all the comforts of a private home. But do you know that it is also more economical to live here?

When you add together today's rentals, maid's wages, laundry, gas, electricity, depreciation on rugs and furniture, and all the other extras that "keeping house" in an apartment includes, you will discover it costs more and you get far less than at the Somerset.

Here one moderate rental pays for practically everything but the cost of your food and personal laundry.

For instance, two persons may secure a delightful apartment at the Somerset for $150 to $200. This includes a big, sunny, elegantly furnished living room with concealed wall beds—a bedroom by night; big dressing room with enormous wardrobe and dressing table; bath with shower; breakfast room, kitchenette, linen, silver, maid service, gas, electricity; spacious closet room.

Are you tired of having all your meals in restaurants? Do you long for a home-cooked meal? Somerset kitchenettes are practical; and economical, too. Two persons will save $75 a month on the cost of food alone when meals are prepared at home. When desired, the Somerset Dining Room with its moderate prices is conveniently at hand.

Apartments without kitchenette are $100 and upwards. Not an ordinary little hotel bedroom, but a big, exquisitely furnished living room, with concealed wall-bed; dressing room with wardrobe and dressing table, and tiled bath with shower. Complete hotel service.

The Somerset is Chicago's newest summer-resort hotel and year-round home. Private bathing beach affords a delightful recreation for our guests. A few apartments are available now and May 1. In some instances the guests may select the decorations.

LOCATED at Sheridan Road and Argyle, on the boulevard, overlooking the lake. Elevated, surface and motor-bus transportation.

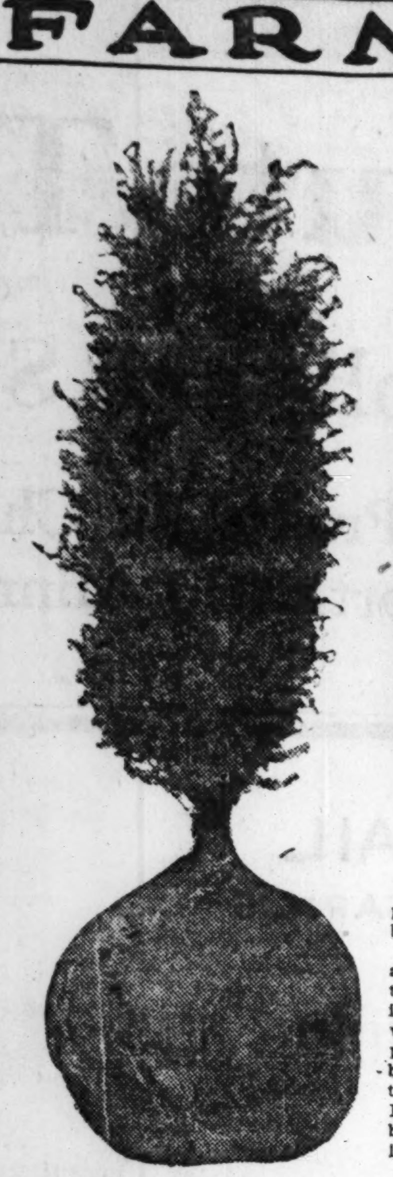
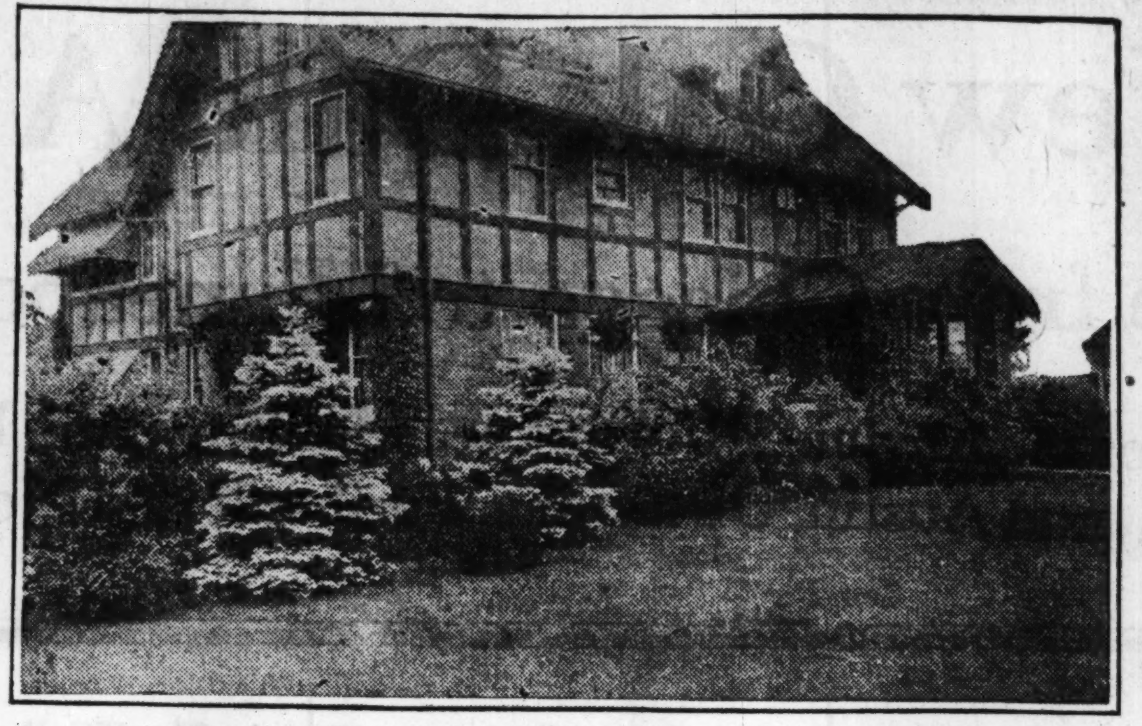
FARM AND GARDEN

First Need of a Landscape Garden Plan Is Shrubbery

By Frank Ridgway.



ROOT PACKING—By packing the roots of shrubs and evergreens with wet spaghnum moss the stock may be shipped long distances without being injured by drying out.



FOUNDATION PLANTING—With a few dollars shrubs and evergreens may be mixed on the lawn in this fashion, adding both value and beauty to the home.

LANDSCAPE gardening ranks next in importance to the building of the house. A house without shrubbery is like a picture without a frame. Shrubs are so inexpensive that they can be owned by the poor and the rich alike. They will add value as well as beauty to every home, whether planted in the dooryards of the least pretentious cottages or on the grounds of large estates.

The planting of shrubs is often neglected because of the supposed expense. They probably cost a little more than annual or perennial flowers at the beginning, but comparatively few are needed to fill a good sized lawn, and since they live over a long period of time, shrubs are considered less expensive in the end. Then, too, shrubbery gives a tidy, livable appearance to the home and takes away the bleakness in winter instead of leaving the house to look as though "the hand of God had flung it down the middle of the world."

Plants That Will Give Color.

There is a long list of shrubs to select from, so long that it is difficult to decide which ones to get, but striking arrangements and combinations may be made with ten or fifteen plants on the average lawn. It has been quite natural for the shrubs of foreign origin to be the most popular in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, and their neghborng states.

In the early days shrubs of foreign origin were planted and the native shrubs were cut out with the old chopping ax. This is still true to some extent, but with the rapid disappearance of the native shrubs along with the undesirable bushes, there is a growing tendency to preserve and even restore and intensify the characteristic native shrubbery in the middle west as well as in other regions.

Whether foreign or native shrubs are planted, or a combination of the two, attempt to choose plants that will keep the lawn decorated with bright colors of blossoms or berries during both winter and summer. Here is a list of twelve shrubs which will give you rich colored blossoms, berries, and bark: Golden bell (forsythia intermedia), Weigela Eva Rathke, Mock Orange or Syringa, Bush Honeysuckle, Japanese Quince, Lilacs, Deutzia, Pride of Rochester, Spiraea Van Houttei, Japanese Brier Rose (Rosa Rugosa), Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, Siberian Dogwood, and Japanese Barberry.

The Forsythia blooms first. This group of shrubs will furnish flowers continuously throughout the summer. As the flowering bushes drop their petals the attractive, bright colored berries and bark come along to take the place of the flowers in the fall and winter. The berries of the Japanese barberry and the colored bark of the Dogwood has helped to rank both of these plants high up in the shrubbery list.

Lilac Is Most Hardy.

This list is made up of old fashioned favorites, because they can be safely and successfully handled, even by the unexperienced gardener. Some of these shrubs will live over a long period of years.

The old time lilac bush is perhaps the hardiest and most enduring. For example, horticulturists say that they believe that the old lilac bushes that are still blooming every year in the topiary garden at Mount Vernon are the plants that Washington himself brought over from England.

Sumac, with its gorgeous color, was among the most dominating plants on the wild prairie. It is still significant in the middle west. The prairie rose is well liked for lawn planting and is particularly favored where it is set beside the front door. Perhaps because the prairie rose is frequently called the Illinois or Michigan rose, it is now being included in many of the new landscape gardening plans.

Many like to mix a few evergreens along with the shrubs named above. For hedges and medium growing specimens, the American arbor vitaea is recommended as the best by evergreen specialists. When used along borders or elsewhere as a hedge it can be sheared into any desired form, and is always green and attractive. As a screen for the flower and vegetable gardens or lawn it is especially valuable because it may be clipped along the sides and made to occupy a small amount of space.

Shrubs Require Little Care.

Where the windows are low, dwarf or low growing plants should be planted. Dwarfed evergreens are favorites where they are to be grouped at entrances, near dwellings, or massed in formal plantings. Among the best for this purpose are Juniperus Canadensis, Juniperus Procumbens, Japanese Yews, and Globe Arbor Vitae. Of the medium large growing sort, hemlock and silver cedar are among the most valuable. But for tall evergreens, white pines and white spruces are ranked high in the list.

Most of the shrubs named will grow anywhere. None of them need any special care; in fact, most shrubs do well if they are given a good soil to grow in and are planted carefully. They may be planted either in the spring or fall. The hardy kinds may be set in the autumn as soon as the leaves fall, except in the northern and high mountainous states, where it is too cold.

Of course, there are some shrubs that do not ripen early enough to be safely planted in the fall. Unless they are ripe three or four weeks before cold weather comes, the planting should be delayed until spring.

Reliable nurserymen are able to give the special cultural requirements of the shrubs that need to be handled with precaution. The planting may be done successfully in the spring, and many prefer spring planting to fall planting. The success with spring planting depends largely upon the condition of the shrubs. Some of them are dug up by the nurseryman in the fall and are allowed to dry out in winter. Plants are often so dry that they will not grow, or if they do grow, the plant is so weakened that it may not completely recover.

Planting the Wild Shrub.

Where wild shrubs are brought in from the woods and planted on the lawn, the small sized ones seem to do better than the larger ones. If wild shrubs are used, dig up a good sized chunk of earth, leaving as much of the dirt and roots intact as possible.

In using nursery stock plant the shrubs immediately after they arrive if possible. If the planting cannot be done within a few hours, the shrubs should be placed in a trench in the garden and the roots carefully covered with moist soil.

Extremely dry roots must be soaked for about two hours in water before they are planted or temporarily covered with dirt.

Nurserymen claim that more plants are killed by exposing the roots than from any other cause. They are often unwrapped and exposed for a day or more during the work of planting. The roots must be kept covered constantly until the plants are set in the ground.

Early Care Is Important.

Shrubs will do fairly well in a variety of soils, but they require a great deal of plant food during the first few years. If you want them to have every advantage from the beginning, it is important to spade the ground as deep as possible several days in advance of the planting, and if the ground is poor, work in several spadefuls of leaf mold or rich garden soil. The mistake of using fresh manure is often made. Use manure on the surface, but never put it in contact with the roots.

A safe rule to follow in determining the depth of planting is to set the plants slightly deeper than they were in the nursery. Dig a large hole where the plants are to be set. Plants will not do well if the roots are crowded. Separate the roots in all directions before throwing in any of the dirt. The principal object, then, is to get the roots in close contact with the soil by packing fine dirt around the roots as the hole is being filled. Shaking the plant slightry will help to get the soil under the crown where the roots branch.

Transplanting and Trimming

The earth should be tamped in so the dirt will be firm around the roots. Leave the surface of the soil immediately around the plant slightly lower than the surrounding surface. Then scatter a layer of loose earth around the shrub to prevent excessive evaporation of moisture. As the plants come from the nursery the roots are usually pruned more or less, and to balance this loss the tops should be cut back severely. Many trim off as much as 60 per cent or more of the top at the time of transplanting.

Pruning after that, if necessary, is done after the blooming season. This is particularly true of the lilac, spirea, and similar plants, where the buds form late in the summer. Most of the flowering shrubs that bloom before midsummer will develop the buds this summer that are to grow into blossoms next season. Late flowering shrubs that blossom after midsummer may be trimmed in the spring.

The Lincoln trials conducted by the Royal Agricultural Society of England are recognized throughout the world as the most thorough and exacting tests in power farming. They were severe and complete, lasting seven days and including every field and belt operation. The jury of engineers was composed of experts whose judgment is accepted as final throughout the globe. These men by their verdict awarded the gold medal and the World's Championship in the three-bottom class to the Wallis, proving its sturdy power and strength.

NOTICE: We want the public to know that the WALLIS TRACTOR is made by the J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS COMPANY of Racine, Wisconsin, and is NOT the product of any other company with "J. I. CASE" as part of its corporate name.

NOTICE: The Supreme Court of Wisconsin has decided that our plows are the "ORIGINAL CASE PLOWS" and that we are entitled to the exclusive use of the word CASE on all plows and tillage implements, and in all catalogs and advertisements of same. Notice by any other concern regarding CASE plows is given because of this Supreme Court order, that our rights, the rights of the dealer and the rights of the public may be protected.

World's Championship Won by Wallis

Wallis—America's Foremost Tractor—won the gold medal of the Royal Agricultural Society of England and first prize in the three-bottom class in the competitive trials held recently in England.

This world's championship is added proof of the recognition given the inbuilt quality and strength of the Wallis by engineering judges of worldwide reputation.

What Wallis Means to Farmers

With prices for his products considerably reduced, the farmer must look to his costs of production now more than ever before. The proved road to profit is power farming, and the Wallis is the dependable means to that end. Wallis means more acres per hour and more production at less cost.

Feature by feature, the Wallis invites inspection. The patented U-frame of one-piece boiler steel makes possible light construction, and enables the Wallis to deliver the maximum of power at the draw-bar. Light weight, combined with brute strength, is originally and typically Wallis construction.

Greatly Reduced Prices

You can now buy the Wallis—World's Champion Tractor—and all genuine J. I. Case Implements at greatly reduced prices. The farmer has taken his loss. We are taking ours in order to help agriculture and industry return to a normal basis. It's to your advantage to see our nearest dealer for complete information on the reduced prices affecting our entire line.

The Wallis motor has the greatest horse-power for its piston displacement of any successful tractor motor on the market. Its economical performance is unequaled by any other tractor of any size, weight or power. The Wallis is the first tractor to develop a draw-bar pull greater than its own weight.

Know Wallis' Features

The Wallis Tractor has all working parts enclosed in dust- and water-proof casings and running in a constant bath of oil; crank shaft of chrome vanadium steel; Hyatt & Timken roller bearings; and nickel steel shafting throughout transmission system. Accessibility is a special feature. Hand holes in U-frame and sides permit you to reach all wearing parts easily and enable you to see what you are doing.

For three generations the builders of the Wallis Tractor have served the American farmer. The quality ideals of the Company's founder, Jerome I. Opening of New Oak Dale Auto Trail

Short Line Scenic Route from Chicago to Minneapolis and St. Paul

Goes Through Waukegan, Ill., Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, Madison and Prairie du Chien, Wis., McGregor and Cresco, Iowa, and Austin, Owatonna, Faribault and Northfield, Minn.

Marking to Be Finished and Guide Book Ready for Distribution Within a Few Weeks

Tourists will now have the opportunity of making the Minneapolis-Chicago trip over the best laid out and best marked trail in the northwest.

The project has been launched, thoroughly organized and completely financed by a group of enthusiastic autoists in southern Minnesota, eastern Iowa and Chicago.

The proposed route starts in Minneapolis, passes through St. Paul, Northfield, Faribault, Owatonna and Austin, Minn., to McGregor, Iowa. There it crosses the Mississippi river, where commodious ferry boats will be provided to convey the cars to the Wisconsin side. Among the principal Wisconsin towns through which the trail will pass are Prairie du Chien, Dodgeville, Oconomowoc, Madison, Sun Prairie, Watertown, Wauwatosa, Milwaukee. From this latter point, motorists may speed into Chicago over the famous Lake Shore Drive, which passes through Racine, Kenosha, Waukegan and Evanston, and then merges into the Sheridan Road to Chicago.

The trail will traverse the richest agricultural section of the states of Minnesota and Wisconsin, together with the eastern section of Iowa, which is noted for its prosperous farms.

The scenic beauties of this route will also prove to be most attractive to motor tourists as they wend their way over the good roads which will be selected.

The scenery is ever-varying. Broad expanses of peaceful and prosperous farm lands, upon which graze the finest herds of cattle in the world, may be seen. The Mississippi river, fringed with restful verdure, becomes more beautiful as it begins to broaden upon its way to the gulf.

The wonderful rock structures of the valley of the Wisconsin are fascinating in the infinite variety of their formations. And through this marvelous trail of a bygone glacial age runs the Oak Dale Trail, straight and smooth.

Onward the trail proceeds through Madison, the capital of Wisconsin, through Milwaukee and onto one of the finest roads in the nation, the famous Lake Shore Drive. This wonderful automobile highway follows the shores of Lake Michigan through Racine and Kenosha, Wis., and Evanston, Ill., into Chicago.

Best Marked Automobile Trail in the Northwest.

The Oak Dale Trail offers to the motorists the ideal route from Chicago to Minneapolis, the Gateway of the Northwest. It offers the best of roads and splendid accomodations at every point. And the markings of the trail will be wonderfully complete.

The officers of the Association are determined that the Oak Dale Trail shall be the best marked trail in the northwest and neither energy nor expense will be spared in making it so.

The striking emblem of the trail will be placed on every eighth telephone pole along the route. The initials O.D.T. in black are surmounted by a broad black stripe, while a broad stripe of orange appears below. The markers will also clearly indicate the streets over which it passes in all towns along the route.

In addition to these thousands of road markers, large, luminous signs will be placed at all curves and at any other points where motorists might, by any possibility, become confused. These signs will be placed during night drives of the marking cars so that the points may be selected where automobile headlights will, naturally, bring the signs into sharp relief. Motorists will not be forced to get out of their cars and use searchlights in an effort to locate the guide signs.

Likely to Be the Official Trail of National Dairy Show.

There is every reason to believe that the Oak Dale Trail will prove to be very popular. It is already rumored that it will be selected as the official highway of the National Dairy Association at the time of their show at the State Fair Grounds, St. Paul, in October. This would be a natural selection as the trail passes by many of the largest and finest dairy farms in the United States. As dairymen always find it most helpful to visit each other's farms it is probable that hundreds of them will decide to take the trip leisurely over the Oak Dale Trail and spend a part of their time visiting around.

Those interested in the formation of the Oak Dale Trail Association are O. J. Benton, R. J. Thomson, I. B. Fox, J. W. Hare and R. P. Crane of Austin, Minnesota; W. C. Murden and E. T. Winship of Owatonna, Minnesota; Chas. S. Palmer of Le Roy, Minnesota; Frank Bergman and Mr. Freeman of McGregor, Iowa; E. G. Aldrich of Chicago, and others of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago.

Big Celebration at Austin.

The headquarters of the Association are at Austin, Minnesota, where a big mass meeting was recently held. A Monster band had been engaged; there were many speeches and a torchlight parade escorted the pioneer car to the city limits. This car will carry a road engineer, a photographer and a feature writer. Saturday the car was at Madison, Wis., and will start on its trip to Milwaukee and Chicago Monday.

This car is painted in orange, black and white, the colors of the trail markers. It will proceed leisurely over the entire route and roads will be selected, photographs taken and material written for the Oak Dale Trail Guide.

The scout car started from Austin, Minn., goes through to Chicago, passes through Austin on the return trip, proceeds to Minneapolis and then returns to Austin. It will be met there by a committee from the Trail Association, who will escort it to the association headquarters, where the representatives who make the trip will submit their final report.

The return trip of this car will be made at night so that the best locations for road signs can be determined upon. Through Prairie du Chien, the historical, and McGregor, the beautiful, the trail traverses lands of Indian lore and the scenes of frontier hardships of a century ago; lands where Black Hawk and his tribe defied civilization.

Pike's Peak, the first, stands as a mighty sentinel at McGregor as if guarding the beauties of the natural wilderness from the commercial inroads of man.

Wonderfully Complete Guide Book.

An elaborate guide book will be published by the opening of the tourist season. This book will set forth every detail relative to the trail and to all towns and other points of interest along the route. It will be illustrated with many photographs and will contain maps of the trail. Hotels and information booths at terminals of the trail and in towns along the route will distribute the guides, without cost, to all tourists.

They may also be had by addressing the Oak Dale Trail Association, Austin, Minnesota.

The New Car and the First Ride.

PROLOGUE.

At last the car has come—the car which Pa was gassed into buying at the show. The Potters thought the witching hour would never strike—with Pa the wish was father to the thought. But Ma, Mamie, Bill, and the Baby are in their glory now—it's their turn to glower at the scurrying pedestrians and yell, "Hey, gethahel outta the way; are yu tired of life?"

Scene I. Street in Front of the Potter Flat.

After a few lessons from the salesman Pa feels qualified to drive solo. True enough, he is not always certain whether his right foot is on the clutch or brake and whether he should move the lever all the way down to the left or the right to go forward, or is it reverse, but aside from that he's as good a driver as ever had a head-on collision. The first time out. (Ma, Mamie, and the Baby are crowded in the cabin. Pa and Bill are out on the hurricane deck. Hold your hats.)

PA (racing engine):
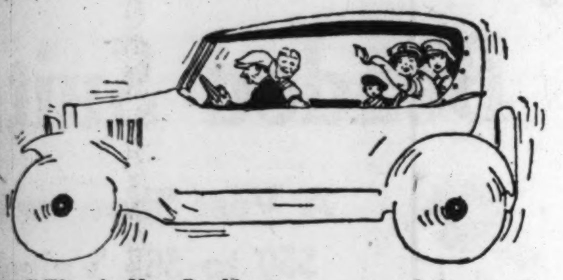
Well, folks, are you ready? C'mon, let's go.
MA: Be careful, now, Pa; be sure you go slow.
BILL: Push your clutch pedal in . . . now put it in low.
PA: Y'don't need to tell me . . . I reckon I know.

(Lets clutch out too quick—car leaps forward like an antelope and kills the motor.)



"There's Mrs. Rankin, too . . . let's wave."

MA: Look out! you nearly broke my neck . . .
I bet we're going to have a wreck.
BILL: Don't let the pedal out so quick;
Just ease it out, and start it slick.
PA: Who's doing this? You make me sick.
If you all keep still I'll turn the trick.

(Starts motor again and gets away this time a little better.)

There! What did I tell you? Slick as a cat!
Oldfield never did better'n that.
MA: Look out for the curb, Pa—Sakes alive!
You make me nervous the way you drive.
MAMIE: Here's a car, coming the other way;
You'd better get over a little bit . . . Hey!
You'll hit the curb . . . you're going too far!
PA: How d'ye expect me to drive a car
With all of you hollering the way you are?
BILL: Hold out your hand if you're going to turn;
That's the very first thing that you orter learn.

(All hold out their hands.)

"C'mon, let's go."

MA: There's Mrs. Yates, who lives next door.
Look at the look . . . I bet she's sore
That we have a car and she has none—
I bet she'll make John get her one.
MAMIE: There's Mrs. Rankin, too . . . let's wave.
BILL: Ma, can't you make that girl behave?
MAMIE: You mind your own business and I'll tend to mine.
BILL: You ain't got no business.
MAMIE: I "ain't got no business"—
Gee, but your grammar is certainly fine!
PA: How d'ye expect me to drive this car
With all of you jawing the way you are?
MA: O, stop! The baby has lost his hat.
PA (jamming on brakes and running into the curb):
Why don't you watch the darned little brat?
MA: Why, what do you mean by such language as that?
(to baby) Him's a mean old daddy to call you a brat.

(The hat is retrieved about a half a mile back, and the Potters are off again.)

PA (who is getting a little confidence and steps on 'er):
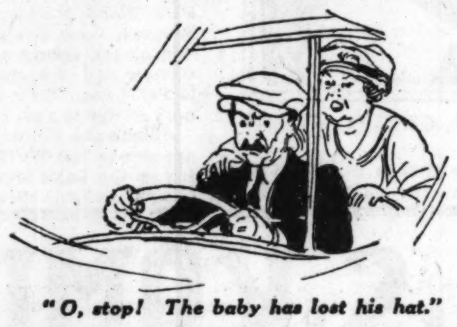
Some boat, I'll say; just watch her go.
She's good for sixty-five, I know;
At least, the salesman told me so.
MA: Hey, not so fast there, take it slow.
BILL: Step on 'er, Pa; let's see her blow.
MAMIE: Yes, step some more, and it'll cost you dough.
BILL: "Cost you dough"! . . . That sure is swell.
Such langwidge from our little Nell!
MA: Slow down; you're going too fast there, Pa.
BILL: Just a little old thirty-per-hour, now, Ma.

INTERLUDE.

How doth the busy motor cop
Improve each pesky minute
By sticking speeders all day long
For all the dough that's in it.



"O, stop! The baby has lost his hat."

MOTOR COP:
Draw up to the curb. What's the rush today?
MA (bristling):
Who do you think you're talking to, eh?
PA: Now, Ma, keep quiet; don't start any riot.
Let's hear what the officer has to say.
COP: If you're going to start racing
Go hire a track,
And if you know what's good for you
Don't sass back.
MA (to Pa):
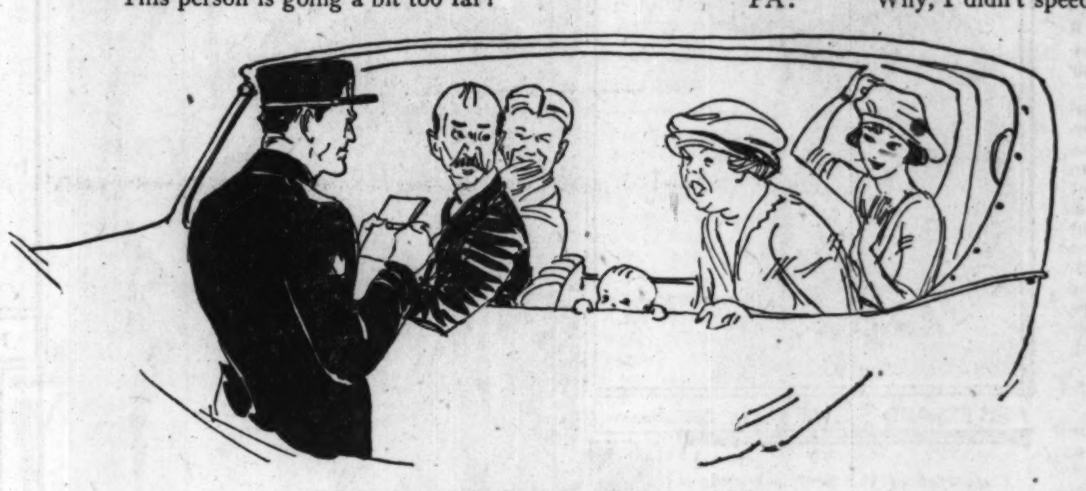
Why don't you tell him who you are?
This person is going a bit too far!



"Who do you think you're talking to, eh?"

PA (to Ma):
Now, Ma, keep still . . . you leave this to me.
(to Cop) Do you think I was speeding?
COP: Do I THINK you was speeding?
No you wasn't speeding—just a mere thirty-three.

(Pulls out summons.)

What's your name and address?
MAMIE (to Cop):
I think you're a mess.
You cops are all out for a record I guess.
We didn't go twenty—I bet we went less . . .
MA (to Pa):
Drive on . . . let's not talk to this man any more.
COP: You'll all drive to jail if you get me real sore.
Cut out all the gab. . . . What's your name and address?
PA: Why, I didn't speed.
COP: What's your name and address?
PA: Only twenty-two miles.
COP: What's your name and address?
PA: Aw, c'mon, have a heart.
COP: What's your name and address?
You want me to take you along now, I guess.

(Well, what can you do with such an impetuous person, who is also a slave to duty? Neither can Pa, who soon gets a neat but serviceable summons admitting him to a reception at the city hall the following morning at 9 o'clock. After which, like the well known bee who has left his sting in escrow, so to speak, the motor cop buzzes away.)

BILL: Well, Pa, we was speeding, at that, you know.
MA: Didn't I tell you you ought to go slow?
MAMIE: How much will they fine you, a dollar or so?
PA: What did you and Ma want to sass him for?
Thanks to your gab it'll cost me more.
The first trip out, and we're pinched, we are . . .
I knew I was going to hate this car!

Where Is Expert's Touch Needed More Than in a Garden?

By Mme. X.

I slept and dreamt that life was duty.
I woke and found that life was beauty.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Thus sings the visitor to southern California, paraphrasing—who was it—Emerson? This region is certainly the especial paradise for gardeners. Overnight they can see their design materialize. There is no waiting a lifetime for results. A privet hedge, which with us would take twenty years to grow to a respectable altitude, if it didn't decline to grow at all, here attains a desired height in three or four years.

But what inconsistent folk we mortals be. Who among us would undertake, willingly, to try to build a house, or paint a portrait, or set a broken bone without calling in expert advice? And yet there are numerous self-confident souls who undertake, without counsel with experts, to design and plan that most subtle, important, difficult adjunct to a country home, the garden, that is, that creation which we call a landscape garden, which is, after all, what every garden, however small, should be.

Gardens That Lack Harmony.

What, after all, is a garden? It is an expression in miniature of nature, or of some phase of nature, just as a house is a development from the aboriginal cave or the shelter the neolithic man built of branches and stones. We have advanced further in house architecture than in garden architecture. This is probably because we recognized sooner the necessity of making a study of this form of art. We earlier abandoned the belief that we could express ourselves in stone and wood without special instruction in the underlying science of such expression.

On the other hand, many an owner of large and elaborate gardens boasts with pride that he, and he alone, is responsible for the inchoate, ill designed mass of flowers, the paths leading nowhere, the aimless arbors, the ill placed groves, the often ridiculous fountains and abashed statues which he displays as his garden.

If you undertook to carve a statue would you hew out a torso first of a type of manly beauty you admired; then add to it arms of quite another style, which struck your fancy; stick on the legs of a runner, and top it all with the head of a Greek goddess?

Not likely, and yet that is precisely what many an amateur gardener does in fatuous belief that he or she is creating a thing of merit and charm. There are even uninstructed mortals who will admire the results of such infatuated efforts.

To others as uninstructed, however, there comes an undefinable sense of unrest in making the acquaintance of such a garden. They don't know why it lacks that satisfying quality that another, possibly less pretentious, less expensive, smaller garden conveys even to the uninitiated. It is because there is a balance, a harmony, an underlying and definite form to the latter which makes the superstructure of shrubs and flowers of secondary importance.

Flowery Wastes—Not Retreats.

This science of form was first and best expressed by Italian garden architecture in the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries. They realized the importance of a central axis, of radiating vistas which should lead the eye to some definite view or point of excellence. They evolved the garden from the daily lives of the people for whom the garden was designed; with the result that their gardens were really lived in. Ours are often merely something to show visitors, flowery wastes, at which we look from house porches or windows, not places to which we retire for contemplation, or for social distraction.

Even when we study the gardens of other civilizations than ours, gardens of the orient, of Spain, of Italy, of France, of England, we fail to grasp their underlying lesson and meaning. We think that by copying them "au pied de la lettre," we are accomplishing something praiseworthy, whereas we are as inartistic as the sculptor who should clothe his portrait statue of an American statesman of the nineteenth century in a Roman toga, in which his subject would have blushed to be seen dead.

Bridge in Tune with Nature.

No Boccaccio will ever entertain and distract a terrified company of plague haunted men and women in an American garden. No Petrarch will ever see his Laura walking at sunset along a cypress shaded walk in Cook county. No Watteau will ever paint a company of fair ladies and cavaliers dancing a gavotte underneath the trees in Lake Forest on a summer afternoon.

For one thing, we don't dance gavottes any more. Instead, many of us sit indoors on summer's fairest days playing interminable games of bridge. Why doesn't some garden designer make it his or her business, in planning a garden, to create a pavilion in the most beautiful part of it so perfectly adapted to the benighted bridge devotee that the latter should never again be contented with the narrow confines of a room as a setting for this absorbing game?

This pavilion should be so placed that through its white columns one could get glimpses of distant water, or of some mossgrown statue at the end of a green vista. The exquisite fragrances of sleeping flowers should steal on the dormant senses of the players. Songs of hidden birds should break the stillness which envelops the playing of a ticklish no-trump hand. Summer breezes should cool brows of those whose bad luck was inducing fever. The music of a nearby fountain should soothe those angry with an unsatisfactory partner (the fountain would have the hardest job in the garden, believe me).

In short, a demoralizing, ennervating, time-wasting pursuit could, by the landscape gardener, be turned into a restful, healthful, unconscious communion with nature. In time the perfume of those flowers, the songs of those birds, those visions of distant loveliness might break the unholy spell that holds daytime bridgers in such a seemingly irresistible clutch.

The Famous Gillespie Garden.

All this apparently endless dissertation is inspired by a fortnight spent in the introspection enforced by the mending of a broken rib in the beauty soaked region adjacent to Santa Barbara. Nothing more active than visits to some of the lovely gardens hereabouts being possible, a superficial study has been made by the writer as to why some gardens are subtly satisfying while others, more pretentious, are less so.

The most famous in this part of the world is the creation and passion of a bachelor, a Mr. Gillespie, a Yankee hailing from the Green mountain state. His must be, from all accounts, a most unusual and original personality. Certainly it is so, if his garden speaks for him.

The house might have been the home of a Roman senator. Its white walls, gleaming terraces, the Pompeian court, with its big interior pool (careless guests sometimes step back into it), the vine-covered arbor on the flat roof, and a certain severity in its general air all suggest that austerely luxurious age.

The gardens, however, speak of Spain under the Moorish spell. A descending vista of dripping masonry with a central rivulet breeding moss; the carefully planned views carrying the eyes to some distant, solitary, soaring palm, or to a transcendant glimpse of sea or mountains; the marble flagged pools set in clipped hedges, whose tailor-made perfection shows off in the general careless disorder which is one of the chief charms of the place; the tangled gray and green jungles threaded by wandering footways are as utterly unlike any expression of a descendant of the Puritan fathers as it is possible to imagine. Some pensive, poetic Moorish potentate might have evolved it all.

That its owner is of a wandering fancy is attested by the fact that he divides his time between this estate, one in Vermont, and one in Cuba. When here he is reported as living alone with one Japanese servant, and usually occupying little more than one or two rooms. He has few to help him in the development and care of his gardens, doing much of the work himself. This means a great deal of manual labor as he has an extensive system of piping as well as much planting and floriculture, masonry, and road building.

He is away in Cuba, and Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Ames of Boston and New York have rented his place for the season.

Chicago Women in English Life.

Just as no matter where he takes out his citizenship papers, an Englishman or a German never loses his citizenship in his native land, so no matter how far afield she wanders, no Chicago girl ever goes beyond our ken or interest or loses her relation to Chicago. Some of Chicago's daughters have achieved great distinction and high positions.

The most conspicuous instance of this was, of course, the late Lady Curzon, who was born and spent her childhood in Chicago as Mary Leiter, daughter of one of our pioneers, Levi Z. Leiter. Through her marriage with Lord Curzon of Keddleston she became in time Vicereine of India, the highest rank ever reached by an American woman, unless Mrs. Leeds, by marrying the brother of the King of Greece, has a better claim to a nearer relationship to royalty, once supposed to be the "sumum bonum" of mortal existence.

Two among the most popular and socially successful women in the English great world today are Chicago born women. One is Mrs. Gerard Leigh, who was a daughter of the late William J. Goudy, and the other is Lady Lavery, wife of the well known portrait painter, Sir John Lavery, and formerly one of the great belles of her time when she was Miss Hazel Martyn.

A third to achieve a remarkable place in English high political life is the former Miss "Mimi" Wheeler, daughter of the late Samuel Wheeler and granddaughter of one of the best known pioneers of a half century ago, Julian Rumsey. She is now the wife of one of the most popular and promising men in the British India service, Col. Crawford Stewart. He is right hand man to the present viceroy to India, and has charge of all the chief activities of the vice regal establishment. Which means that his wife is one of the most important women in that stately, semi-oriental court.

War Service in Egypt.

Although she was one of the quietest, most retiring girls in the set in which her Chicago family moved, she has had a more adventurous life than most of her contemporaries. Some nine years ago she eloped with a Capt. Collins, an English officer of more or less lively history in this country. His first wife was, if I am not mistaken, the lovely Miss Natalie Schenck, a well known New York belle and beauty. This first marriage of his was not a happy one, and was finally ended by divorce.

Miss Wheeler was a young and inexperienced girl when the dashing captain met her and courted her. Their marriage took place some time before the outbreak of the world war in 1914. Soon after England entered the great conflict he returned to his regiment, which was ordered to Gallipoli in the course of time.

His wife had been stopping with his family, very nice people who lived in the north of England. When he was sent to that perilous peninsula she decided to go to Egypt, so as to be near him. Arrived in the land of the Pharaohs, she volunteered for service in a military hospital at Alexandria. There she met many of the celebrities of that strenuous time, among them Rupert Brookes, the soldier poet; Winston Churchill, the moving spirit of the ill fated campaign, and her present husband, then Capt. Stewart.

Her first husband survived the terrible Gallipoli fiasco and lived to make her regret her marriage to him sufficiently to seek and get a divorce. Her marriage to her present husband took place a year or so later, and now she is in a governmental environment which brings her in close personal association with the great in British socio-political circles.

As she is the simplest, most unaffected of mortals, with no interest in the intricacies of rank and social position; the fact that at dinner she sits next to such men as Lloyd George, Asquith, Lord Cecil, or that she has to take part in the complicated ceremonials connected with the receiving of the Prince of Wales on his recent visit to India, makes little or no impression on her. She greets every one with the same unaffectedly kindly, quiet manner. She has apparently that rare and desirable quality of being genuinely oblivious of factitious differences in the standing of people who come her way. So equipped any one can make a real success of life.

Home for the Spring.

Mrs. Crawford Stewart's four aunts, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Treat Campbell, Miss Emily Rumsey, and Miss Eliza Rumsey, have closed the family mansion on the corner of Huron and Cass streets, and are spending the winter in Pasadena. They are planning a trip next winter to visit their niece in India.

Among the Chicagoans who, ere this appears in the W. G. N., will be strolling on the Lake Shore drive or swiftly pacing the Boul Mich, are Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGann and their daughter, Miss Grace McGann; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Baker and Miss Mary Baker, Mrs. Alexander Smith and her small daughter, Miss Fay Smith, Cyrus H. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bennett and their young son, Edward Jr.; Mrs. John Spoor, and Mrs. Henry Keep and her child.

Thus passes the unwintry winter of 1920-21 for those who fled the possible inclemencies of that season in Chicago.

I. F. W. C. to Meet for Election and Annual Reports

By Kate Webber.

THE Second congressional district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will hold its annual meeting on Thursday at St. Paul's on the Midway, Dorchester avenue and Sixtieth street. The morning session, opening at 10:30 o'clock, will be given to reports of officers, and chairmen, business of the district, and the selection of the following officers: President, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, and two directors.

Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock, following which there will be an address of Mrs. William H. Hart of Benton, president of the I. F. W. C. The club presidents' forum will be led by Mrs. George A. Burget, vice president of the district, and presidents of the various clubs will present their problems. The program will close with the presentation of new officers. The meeting is open to all members and friends of the district.

The officers of the Second district, who are representatives from the clubs registered as members, have worked together during the last season to secure the highest rating for the district and its individual members.

Under the leadership of Mrs. A. Ralph Johnstone, art chairman, there were thirteen art programs and twenty-four gallery tours, also two industrial art exhibits by individual clubs. The West Pullman Woman's club erected a memorial monument to soldiers who fell in battle, and the Kenrose club has planted a poppy bed in memory of soldiers. The Arché club, which buys a picture each year from the Chicago artists' exhibit at the Art institute, now has thirty-three pictures hung in their club rooms. The club also has purchased four pictures for the Chicago Public School Art society, and has hung them in the Seward school. The Chicago Woman's Aid is also a supporter of the society.

Mrs. Charles Trainor, chairman of the civics department, arranged two classes in citizenship, the last series closing on April 6. Mrs. Trainor also spoke before twelve women's clubs in different parts of the city, presenting the problems of citizenship and leading in their discussion.

The civil service department, Mrs. William Brady, chairman, made personal investigation of the Juvenile Detention home, the county jail, and the Juvenile court. They are watching the progress of the several bills now before the legislature affecting the efficiency of civil service.

One of the most interesting activities of the district is the annual birdhouse exhibit, which is conducted every spring. At the last exhibit, held in March, there were almost 600 entries, also a large number of posters made by school children. Following the exhibit the birdhouses were placed in the forest preserve, where the makers may go and see them in use by the bird families. Mrs. Theron Colton already has plans afoot for the exhibit next year.

The education committee has arranged a list of books for children's reading, which has been adopted by many large department stores as a guide to selling children's books.

Mrs. Webb L. Gibbs, chairman of the home economics department, secured the services of lecturers and demonstrators from standard schools, who met with the department once a month and gave instruction on the domestic arts which attracted a large number of members.

The legislative department has studied bills now before the house concerning federal, state, county, and city betterment. The department is now working on bills which have been introduced at this session of the state legislature.

The education, conservation, library extension, social, and industrial conditions and public health, and the civil service department all have presented one or more bills upon which they will work until the legislature adjourns. Mrs. John T. Donahoe is chairman of the legislative committee.

The library extension committee, Mrs. Charles Cornelius, chairman, has never before functioned in the district, but in spite of that has accomplished much toward the opening of stations and collection of books, as well as assisting libraries that had been forced to close owing to shortage of funds.

The Arché club and the Chicago Woman's Aid have been foremost in support of the Civic Music association. Both of these clubs have departments of music and, with the Woodlawn Woman's clubs, have done much to further interest along this line. Mrs. E. J. Murray, chairman of the music department of the district, conceived the plan of having the music for programs come from artist members, and some sixty musicians answered her call during the year.

The work of Americanization has been carried on in many clubs through the work of the literature and reciprocity department, of which Mrs. F. R. Voorhees is chairman. This is one of the most extensive and interesting departments of the club, but lack of space forbids mention of its many ramifications and the good it has accomplished.

The public health work committee and the committee on social and industrial relations have accomplished much for the good of the young girls in whose interest they are working. Mrs. Arthur Stein and Mrs. J. S. Maurer have worked in conjunction with chairmen from various clubs in the district for the perfection of their departments.

The Second congressional district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will be guests of the Woodlawn Woman's club at a meeting on Thursday at St. Paul's on the Midway. This will practically close the district's activities for the current club year, during which time the president, Mrs. Charles F. Ross, has succeeded, with her chairmen, in putting the district on a sound financial basis, and also has introduced many new and interesting phases which have been worked out with success by the several clubs which are members.

Mrs. Rudolph S. Blome is a member of the woman's auxiliary of Grant hospital, and is active in plans for a gala concert to be given on May 5 at the Auditorium, when Lucien Muratore will sing. The proceeds are to go toward the maintenance fund of the institution. The auxiliary, which is eight years old, adds thousands of dollars each year to the hospital to aid in caring for charity cases, which represent 30 per cent of the work done there. Special attention is given to the children's ward and to keeping up the linen supply. Mrs. Henry Bartholomay is president of the auxiliary.

Your Complexion

No complexion can remain beautiful unless the pores of the skin are kept clean. Dust and dirt get into the pores and mix with the natural oils of the skin. This results in clogged pores, and a muddy, irritated skin.

Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream penetrates deep into the pores where soap and water will not go. The soothing oils in it loosen and remove the waste in the pores and leave the skin clear and fine. Clear because the skin can breathe, fine because the lemon softens and tones the complexion.

SOFT FOR WARREN

By Guy Lee.

When a president is chosen it is wisdom
For him to sorter figger now and then
On what method to pursue, when his current term is through,
To get himself elected once again.
Mr. Harding needn't worry on this angle.
If he climbs aboard the platform I denote
It's already cut and dried for our Warren G. to slide
Back to office with an overwhelming vote.

Mr. Harding won by over seven million
And he'll easily repeat if he will heed
The humble hunch I offer—the advice I freely proffer
Will supply his every ballot-coaxing need.
He doesn't have to do a thing but follow
The line of conduct in this piece revealed.
He can cop without a bicker if he'll bring us back our likker
And have the pesky income tax repealed.

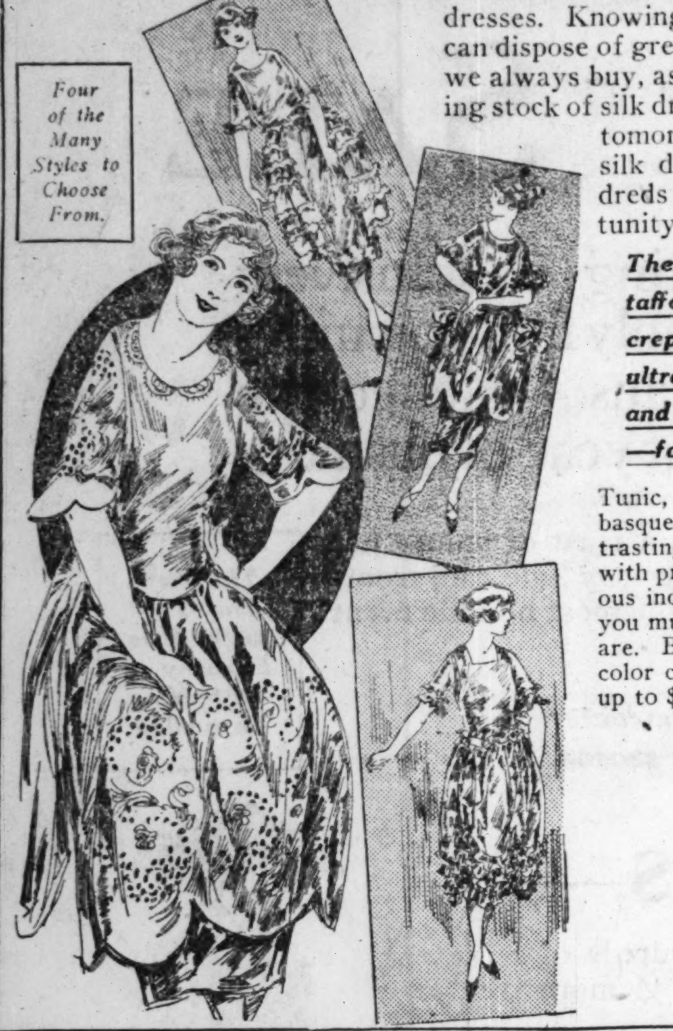
The Most Charming of the Season's Silk Dresses: A Most Unusual Purchase and Sale

—Fifth Floor—



Four of the Many Styles to Choose From.

An Eastern manufacturer had to make room for his summer wash dresses. Knowing how tremendous is our outlet, how quickly we can dispose of great quantities of merchandise, and knowing that we always buy, as we sell, for cash, he sold us his entire remaining stock of silk dresses—at a very low figure, so low, in fact, that tomorrow we are able to offer you one of the best silk dress bargains you've seen in years, and hundreds of Chicago women will be glad of this opportunity—coming just at this time.

There are dresses for women and misses—fine taffetas quaintly puffed, ruffled and frilled, soft crepe de chine, handsome crepe back satins, the ultra fashionable canton crepes, georgettes, plain and figured—all in the latest spring styles. —four are illustrated.

Tunic, tiered and panel effects, scalloped bottoms, modified basques, beautifully embroidered, some with piping of contrasting colors; many with motifs of self-material—others with pretty lace and embroidery collars; to mention the various individual touches would be quite impossible, therefore, you must see the dresses to know how charming they really are. Black, navy, Hindustan, gray and Harding blue is the color choice; excellent dresses, indeed, and that should sell up to $45; specially priced for tomorrow at only

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Bankers Support Church Campaign for Attendance

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

SO much has been written and said in the past five years, during and since the great war, concerning the so called failure of the churches, that it is refreshing and stimulating to find a concrete instance of the appreciation of the churches by a group other than the executives or directors of the religious bodies in a community.

Few men would deliberately start in business and seek to bring up their children in a town or village where there are no churches, and many men who do not go to church are willing to testify to the value of the churches to their community, but it is rare to find a group of men not directly connected with the churches, paying for advertisements in the local papers urging their fellow citizens to go to church and pledging their support because they want their community to grow and become a better place in which to live and raise a family.

The five banks of Portsmouth, O., by a recent ad in the local papers, set a new standard for bank advertising as a result of the enterprise of the department of publicity of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America. In an ad five columns wide the banks invited their employés and every citizen of town to attend some church on the following Sunday.

The invitation was signed by the banks and headed, "Why the Bankers of Portsmouth Support the Churches." It contained this statement:

"Every banker in Portsmouth knows that if churches had not been here since the beginning of the town the banks could not stay a week—would never have been. Law and order must precede safe banking. Churches induce law and order.

"We support the churches, each banker and employé, according to his choice, because we want Portsmouth to grow and become a better place in which to live and raise a family. We know that along the path of righteousness, and this alone, lies stable, continuous prosperity. We want to put our influence on the side of right every time.

"The bankers of this city know that the church is the sole institution which has for its chief business the inculcation of the principles of honesty and right dealing.

"Churches develop faith, and faith is needed before a man is willing to risk his savings and his labor in a project which he hopes will mean much to the city and its workers.

"Churches are the ally of everything that is good and the enemy of everything that is wrong. The banks of Portsmouth stand solidly beside the churches on this platform."

The ad closed with a cordial invitation to attend church, urging people to be on time and to go every Sunday. The announcement was made on behalf of the Portsmouth Federation of Churches, composed of twenty-five congregations of seven denominations, which had been carrying on a campaign of paid advertising, urging church membership before Easter.

The seventy-five Missouri Synod Lutheran churches of Chicago and vicinity are making special arrangements for the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of their first church in Chicago, on Sunday, the 29th of May, at the mother church, the First St. Paul's Lutheran church, 1301 North La Salle street, and all the other Missouri synod Lutheran churches will celebrate in their own churches. On the following Sunday, June 5, a mass meeting will be held at River Forest, the speakers to be the general president of the Missouri Synod Lutheran church, the Rev. F. Pfotenhauer, D. D. of Chicago and the Rev. E. Eckhardt of Pittsburgh, Pa. The preparations for the festival will be made by a special committee, consisting of the pastors, P. Luecke, L. Hoelter, Henry Kowert, and Karl Schierf, all of Chicago.

THE REV. ALBERT J. McCARTNEY.

"Ten Years in a City Parish" will be the subject of the Rev. Albert J. McCartney's sermon this morning in the Kenwood Evangelical church, Greenwood avenue and Forty-sixth street, upon the completion of his first decade as pastor of the Kenwood church.

"While there has been an evident moral decadence in that decade," says the Rev. Dr. McCartney, "I am convinced that the tide is turning and that the next ten years will find us much farther along in moral and spiritual progress. Greater changes have taken place in the last ten years in the moral and spiritual outlook of the church than in any similar period since the Reformation."

The Rev. Dr. McCartney, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and the Princeton Theological seminary, spent a year of graduate study at Oxford and Glasgow before his ordination to the Presbyterian ministry. After two pastorates of four years each at Mount Jackson and Sharon, Pa., the Rev. Dr. McCartney was called to the Kenwood Evangelical church. The father and three brothers of the Rev. Dr. McCartney are also members of the Presbyterian ministry.

A rally of Christian workers to consider opportunities and plans for open air evangelism during the coming season will be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, 19 South La Salle street, Monday evening, April 18, at 6:15 o'clock, under the auspices of the Church federation, the Rev. Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston presiding.

A demonstration open air address will be given by the Rev. Dr. Norman B. Barr of Olivet institute on "Evangelization and Americanization," and the Rev. Charles L. Goodell, executive secretary of the commission on evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will give an address on "Why and How to Preach the Gospel to the Nonchurchgoers."

Three minute statements of plans for the season will be presented by representatives of the following institutions: Buena Memorial Presbyterian church, Englewood Christian church, Church of the Nazarene, Moody Bible institute, the Salvation Army, the Night Church, Volunteers of America, Central Y. M. C. A., Pacific Garden Mission, and the Bible Rescue Mission. Music will be furnished by the Y. M. C. A. secretaries' quartet.

The sixty-second annual convention of the Chicago Sunday School association will be held in the Belden Avenue Baptist church, Belden avenue and Halsted street, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 14, 15 and 16. The convention embraces 1,000 Sunday schools of all denominations, 25,000 teachers and officers, and 250,000 Sunday school members. Sixteen separate sessions and conferences are planned for workers with children, young people, adults, and Sunday school officers and pastors.

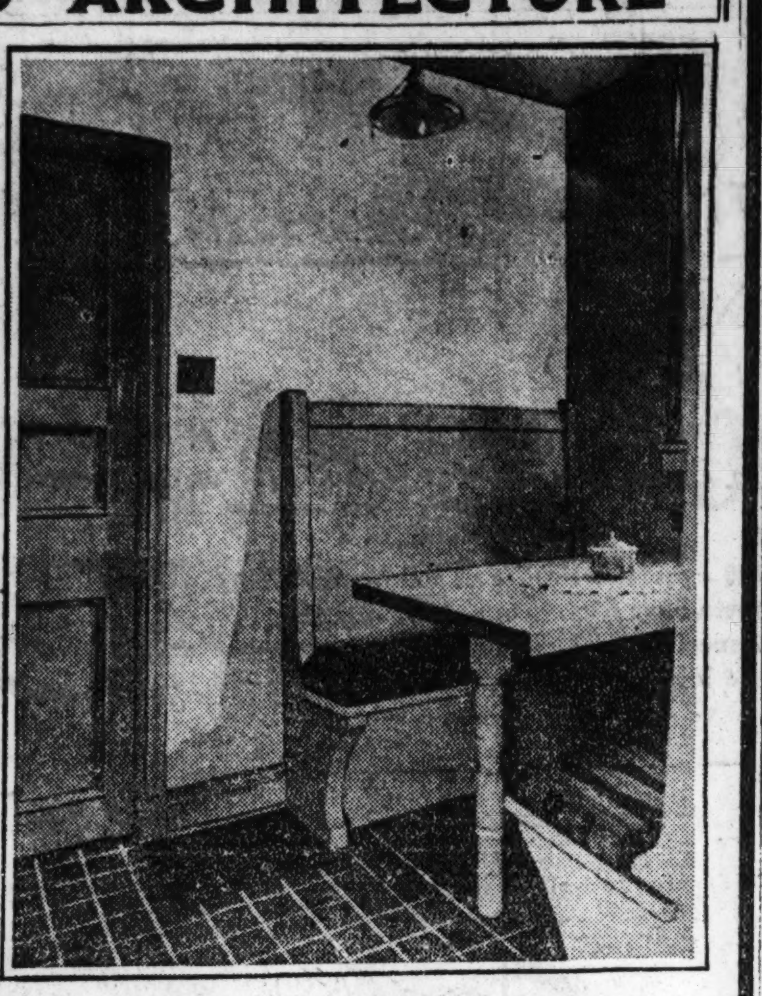
ART AND ARCHITECTURE

Square Root of 5 Root of All Art, Says Jay Hambidge

By Eleanor Jewett.



Would the "square root of five" apply to this simple dining room in the "Do Your Own Work" house, illustrated at the architectural exhibit, which closed this week at the Art institute?

It is always a puzzle how much theory has to do with practice. Often it seems impossible to segregate distinct principles, which apparently fathered a certain achievement. A thing is done; a book is written; a picture is painted. You ask how or why? Sometimes you are answered; more often you must make what you can of a shrug of the shoulders and the implied rebuke that inspiration is not a thing of dotted i's and crossed t's. It is unaccountable and cannot be explained.

Perhaps there is truth in this version of the affair. Genius certainly is a matter of the spirit more than of the flesh, but in how much of that which surrounds us is there genius? In how much more is merely talent, highly developed to be sure at times, but not genius, found?

Leaving aside then the particular cases for which ready explanations fail, suppose we consider for a little the more numerous occasions on which talent, dexterity, adaptability, and practice are displayed.

Undoubtedly theories may be applied practically, though their success is not always assured before time. When theories are based upon actual demonstrable fact their success seems more credible. To follow a theory back to its basic fact, and find that fact what you had hoped to find it, is vouchsafed to but few men. One man who has been so favored by the gods of chance is Jay Hambidge, a man who began his career as a painter and who is this April to deliver the Scammon lectures at the Art institute.

To put into a few words the essence of Mr. Hambidge's theory, the thing which he believes lies back of the great art of all time and can control the great art of today is to say that art depends not on the commensurability of line but on the commensurability of area and volume. All great art is based on a simple shape which we know by its mathematical ration—the square root of five.

Last year Mr. Hambidge went abroad for Yale university. He went to Greece, there to discover and fix the Greek temple planning methods. The Parthenon was the first building which he undertook. The Parthenon is made up of curves, of a subtle, peculiar system of curves, and Mr. Hambidge satisfied himself that its erection had been an experiment on the part of the architect, Iktinos, in which the sculptor Phidias had been associated.

The plan of the temple at Bassae was found to be extremely simple, and corroborates the Parthenon, both structures having been built by the same architect. The plan of the Zeus temple at Olympea was recovered, as well as that of the temple at Aegenae. Each of these buildings strengthened the theory of the relativity of volume and area, not that of line. It was in harping on the commensurability of line that the Romans made their big mistake, exemplified particularly in the ten volumes on architecture written by Vetruvius in the first century B. C.

Not one Greek building conforms to the Vetruvian principles. This is rather calamitous for us because, using the Vetruvian principles as gospel truths, we have become accustomed to assume that members are commensurable with the whole. To state a fact, no human exits whose parts are commensurable with the whole; the stress the Romans laid on line was a mistaken stress; commensurable area should be substituted for line to recover the Greek method.

To bring Mr. Hambidge's theories into a little more concrete shape it may not be amiss to quote this line from him: "Design could not exist without conscious or unconscious symmetry. The unconscious type is the static; the conscious type, the Greek type, is the dynamic, which must be thought out and could not, from its very nature, be unconscious. The mathematical ratio—the square root of five—clears this. Given the definite limitations, which may be easily established through dynamic symmetry, the artist is free to put himself into his work."

The name "dynamic" symmetry is given because the symmetry is a moving, growing symmetry, such as that of the plant, in contrast to the static symmetry of the crystal. Just here it might be interpolated that Hr. Hambidge has fixed definitely, beyond danger of refutation, the truth that the same principle which is found in plant growth is also found in Greek architecture. It is visualized in the formula—the square root of five.

Last summer in England Mr. Hambidge and his theory of dynamic symmetry was the sensation of the London press. Artists, craftsmen, and architects in New York have also become deeply interested in his discoveries and in his principles of art production. Robert Henri, George Bellows, Lawrence Giles, Leon Kroll, Eugene Speicher, and other noted painters are making use of the theory in their pictures and designs and in their teaching.

Two interesting facts in regard to the use of the principles in teaching are these, that by teaching this method students are enabled to cover ten years' work in a comparatively short time, and [a fact which has a more extended scope than that covered by simply teaching], it is impossible to do anything in arts and crafts without these principles.

Books, even, are now being designed according to Mr. Hambidge's theory. The principle which was the basic fact in the making of a Greek pot has been applied with equal success to the manufacture of a chair. The magic ratio—the square root of five—is potent in creating pots and dishes, bronze figures, and models of the human form. The principle expounded in the Parthenon may today, worded by a modern architect, an aesthetic descendant of the ancient Iktinos, give you a beautifully proportioned, graceful, and charming country house.

But, to return for a moment to the sentence which opened this discussion, how seriously this new theory will affact the practice of painting and architecture is yet to be seen. Or whether, if the modern artists and architects imbibe it unconsciously, they will be willing to give it its due its fame is also yet to be seen. They may vote their future successes all to inspiration, and, when you speak of the square root of five, shrug their shoulders, smile, and imply with a gesture that the dotted i's and crossed t's of the mathematical ratio may be all very well in some cases, but in theirs—no—the inspiration of their achievement lay deeper.

Such it is to be a discoverer. A prophet in his own country, etc., is as true a homily as ever was preached.

Meanwhile, undismayed, Mr. Hambidge is to deliver his course of lectures in Fullerton hall of the Art Institute on the dynamic symmetry in design during the present month. Two of his lectures have been already given, those on "The Nature of Design" and Natural Symmetry and Formalized Art." April 12 at 4 o'clock he will speak on "Surveying in Its Relation to Design;" April 14 his subject will be "Craftsmanship, Proportion, and Symmetry;" April 9, "Symmetry in Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting," and Aprile 21, "Symmetry in Modern Design."

An exhibition of the Cyrus Hall McCormick collection of the etchings by Millet has been promised for April. It will be hung in the print room in the Art Institute. This collection is unique and of remarkable interest.

From April 15 to May 15, inclusive, there will be shown in the east wing of the Art institute the first annual international exhibition of water colors, paintings by Nicholas Roerich, paintings by Will Foster, paintings by Maurice Froemkes, and photographs by members of the Chicago Camera club.

From May 21 to June 12, inclusive, an exhibition of Polish art will be shown and paintings, drawings, and studies for decorations by Frederic Clay Bartlett.

The annual exhibition by students of the Art institute school and the twenty-eighth annual exhibition by the Art Students' League of Chicago will be held from June 17 to July 15.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Society of Artists was held last Monday evening and the following artists were elected for the coming year: President, Rudolph F. Ingerle; vice president, Carl R. Krafft; secretary, Marie Blanke; treasurer, Charles W. Dahlgreen. The directors are Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Frank V. Dudley, and Gerald A. Frank.

The society is contemplating the purchase of a building where it can make its permanent home. Perhaps "contemplating" is too indefinite a term to use, for word has come that a house has been settled upon and when the purchase is completed and necessary alterations made on the property the artists will move in directly, announcing their at home condition by the opening of a one man exhibit, this to be followed each month by another, so as to make a complete succession of attractive exhibition in their new quarters.

Announcement has been made by John W. Beatty, director of fine arts at Carnegie institute, of the international jury of selection and awards for the coming annual international exhibition of paintings at Carnegie institute, which will open April 28. William Nicholson and George Clausen, two of England's foremost painters, have been elected as the foreign representatives on the jury.

Slams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

A BAFFLING PHENOMENON.

DOROTHY MARY: You don't write about me any more. Why don't you write about me?

HER FATHER: What will I write about?

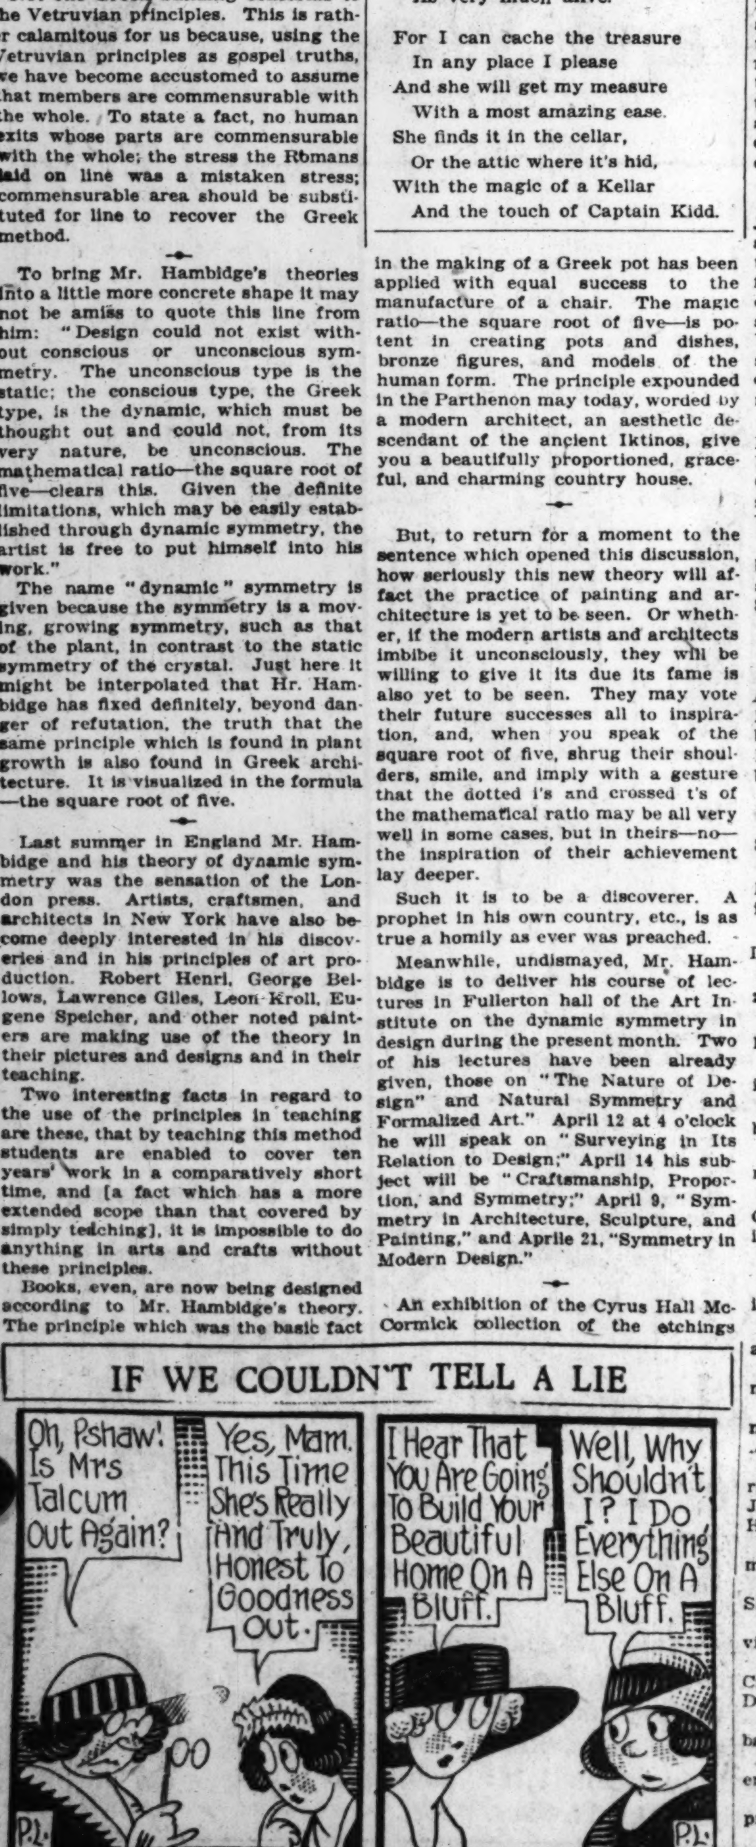
DOROTHY MARY: About how I find candy when you hide it.

To hide forbidden candy
Would seem an easy feat.
The modus operandi
Does not suggest deceit,
Nor boundless erudition
In sly secretive lore,
But not in my position,
For I've a child of four.

I boast parental cunning
Of a rare superior sort,
But Dorothy has me running—
A thing she hadn't ort;
I cannot obfuscate her
No matter how I strive—
And mentally I must rate her
As very much alive.

For I can cache the treasure
In any place I please
And she will get my measure
With a most amazing ease.
She finds it in the cellar,
Or the attic where it's hid,
With the magic of a Kellar
And the touch of Captain Kidd.

IF WE COULDN'T TELL A LIE



Oh, Pshaw! Is Mrs Talcum Out Again?
Yes, Mam. This Time She's Really And Truly, Honest To Goodness Out.
I Hear That You Are Going To Build Your Beautiful Home On A Bluff.
Well, Why Shouldn't I? I Do Everything Else On A Bluff.

ABLE SALESMEN FOR ESTABLISHED BUSINESS.

The addition of several specialties has made it necessary for us to enlarge our sales force. Proposition has been selling with great success for the past seven years. Men have made all the way from $5,000 to $30,000 a year in commissions. It is a proposition that enables a conscientious, hard working man to get the very biggest possible returns on his efforts. Sold to a wide field of prospects in small towns and metropolitan centers. It is a money making proposition—a profitable investment for retail merchants. Neither stocks nor bonds, but a machine now used in many of the highest class retail stores in America, and we have a number of letters on file saying that the proposition pays more per square foot of floor space than anything else the merchants have in their stores. Even without advertising this proposition would be a big success, but we do advertise nationally in trade papers and through the mails. Our system of co-operation has been pronounced by many salesmen to be faultless. Naturally this proposition is not open to everybody, but to men who can qualify we will be glad to give full particulars. If you are over 26 years of age, have a good, clean record, and willing to work, get in touch with J. M. Pearson, Brevoort Hotel, Monday and Tuesday, 9 to 12 a. m. and 2 to 4 p. m. We are frequently asked about exchanges. We sometimes take in, in part payment of farms which we OWN, desirable income producing property not heavily incumbered, taking mortgage back for balance. If you have such a property and want a farm, send full description together with details about mortgage, taxes, insurance, etc.

We will not consider any large properties [larger than $7,500] nor any vacant, or any property requiring operation, such as laundry, garage, etc.

We advise you, if possible, to sell your property and buy on a cash down payment. Get our circular, "How we help you to sell your property on easy terms." You can sell on a moderate down payment, retain the down payment, and we will accept the contract as part payment on the farm.

Our farms are in Taylor, Lincoln, Langlade, Marathon, Price, Clark, and Ashland counties. Write to Commissioner of Immigration, Madison, Wis., for free information about this section. Write TODAY for our FREE LISTS AND LITERATURE.

Our farms range from 40 to 160 acres and range in price from $2,000 up. We also sell live stock on very liberal terms.

HARRIS & RODGERS,

"Dealers in Fine American and Foreign Cars."

Our easiest sales are made to people who have bought one or more cars from us. Their friends become our customers.

Repeat business, we regard as our best asset. Back of every sale this idea is paramount. As it has been so aptly said, "Business goes where invited and stays only where well treated." We endeavor to merit your continued patronage and that of your friends. Among our thousands of owners are many of the wealthiest and most prominent people in Chicago.

Why do these people buy "used cars" is frequently asked of us? Because they realize that the efficient life of a high grade automobile is at least 5 years and that a few thousand miles of careful service has a tendency to improve its running qualities. Also that they can save the first enormous and unwarranted depreciation that occurs after a car is first purchased, even though only driven around the block.

SPECIAL SHOWING FOR THIS WEEK.

1920 Locomobile Sportif 6-48. Special finish and equipment. Bought direct from an out of town dealer. This is the latest model and one of the most beautiful sport models made. Driven only a few hundred miles. Finished in Foch blue. Rolls-Royce lamps, silver radiator, bi-flex bumper, de luxe radiator cap and motometer, 2 spotlights, 2 extra tires, etc.

1920 Locomobile Tour. 6-48, with custom built touring body with special upholstery and superb California top. The few thousand miles of careful driving has only served to improve the smooth action of this smart appearing car that cannot be distinguished from new in any particular.

Convertible 2 to 6 pass. Locomobile roadster with special chassis and patented custom built body. Without exception this is the most remarkable speed car from a standpoint of quality and appearance ever seen in Chicago. Mechanically perfect. Presents the appearance of new. Unusually complete equipment. Special finish. "C'est le dernier mot" in exclusive style and smartness. Every line expresses speed and "class."

Series 7 Locomobile touring in absolutely perfect condition. Finished in Locomobile blue and completely equipped, including tonneau wind-shield. This car can be purchased at an extremely attractive figure and cannot be distinguished from new.

The Locomobile is America's highest priced automobile and is appreciated by those who know the best—and owned by those who can afford it.

With each of the above cars we will furnish a standard new car warranty.

A SAFE PLACE TO BUY A USED CAR BECAUSE

Every used car sold by BIRD-SYKES COMPANY positively must measure up to the BIRD-SYKES COMPANY'S high standard of dependable merchandise.

Immediately as each used car is taken in trade [for a new Paige] it is tested by an expert mechanician, who determines whether or not this car needs any repairing to make it a 100% reliable car. If repairs are necessary no detail is too trivial, no job too large, but what receives intelligent and proper attention.

Great care is given to the appearance of all used cars at BIRD-SYKES COMPANY. Most of them are sent to our expert painter and when they come out are like new cars. This paint work is of such a high standard that the car will look good for an indefinite period if given the proper care.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

Real Facts About Buying Fur Bargains for Cash.

A retail store such as ours, which conducts its business on a cash basis, gives the best values, because of the following facts. Read them over and think about them:

1. The cash store sells for cash, and therefore always has ready money to buy wholesale for cash. In this way the wholesale price paid by the cash store is considerably lower. For example, during the recent money stringency among fur wholesalers in New York the Resale Shop picked up vast amounts of first quality merchandise wholly because we had the ready cash to give for it.

2. The cash store has no heavy bookkeeping charges or credit losses to add to the price of the merchandise.

For the two reasons given above, the Resale Shop buys at a lower wholesale cost and sells with a lower overhead charge. Our overhead is still lower on account of the low rent we pay. All these things are factors entering into the retail price you pay. These are the reasons why the Resale Shop has consistently undersold all other Chicago stores for years. These are the reasons why we have done a larger volume of fur business than any other store of our size in Chicago.

The Resale Shop handles bargains for cash, and bargains in first quality furs is our specialty. We have furs made in our own factory, and a written guarantee goes with every purchase. We do not handle poor quality furs, nor furs that have been worn. We resell manufacturers' samples, which are always of the best quality and fully guaranteed.

The Resale Shop, Inc.,
3429 Michigan-av.
Open 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily.

A WORD OR TWO ABOUT A HOME IN PARK RIDGE

Why Not Trek Northwest This Sunday?

PARK RIDGE, just touching the northwest tip of Chicago, is the fifth Chicago suburb to have its home buying possibilities outlined in a series of articles. Glen Ellyn, River Forest, Riverside, and Wilmette have been given. Another town's home opportunities will be told next Sunday.

BY AL CHASE.

Maple and elm shaded Park Ridge, thirteen miles northwest from the loop on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, is this Sunday's suggestion for the flat jaded and rent-tired city dweller who is wondering what suburb to visit today on a "own your home" exploring expedition.

Answering your first mental question—how do you get there by auto? If you live on the north or south sides go west on Lawrence to Milwaukee avenue, north to the town of Niles on Milwaukee, and then straight west on the Park Ridge road to your destination. According to Automobile Editor Jenkins you'll find another good way by going north one block in Milwaukee avenue from Lawrence, then west on Higgins road to Cumberland avenue and then directly north into Park Ridge. Work will start this summer on the new northwest highway, a concrete road starting at Edison Park, which is part of Chicago, and passing through Park Ridge on its way to Arlington Heights.

What You'll Find.

In Park Ridge you'll find one of Chicago's most attractive suburbs, with quiet, well paved, charmingly shaded streets, a few of them gracefully curved, lined with owned homes, for there are few Park Ridgers who believe in paying rent.

If while Columbusing the town you chance to meet a member of the amateur Park Ridge Boosters' association, you'll at once learn that the population is 3,383, as compared with 2,009 ten years ago; that there are two grade schools and a new $70,000 building planned; that the Maine Township High school is in Desplaines, the next town; that there are churches for nearly every variety of belief; that the Masons plan an imposing temple and there is a Carnegie library of unusual type, the library of Judge Carpenter's father being a part of it.

Sunday Golf? Sure!

There's a movie which is closed on Sundays, but not on account of any Sabbatarian legislation. "It wouldn't pay," explained a citizen. "No one would go on Sunday."

But you can play golf all day Sunday on an eighteen hole course if you're a member of the Park Ridge Golf club, which owns 126 acres.

The town has achieved considerable Cook county distinction by being the home of several well known artists and newspaper people.

Building Boom Now On.

Park Ridge has a good sized building boom already under way. Fifty-five houses are now under construction, some of them to be completed before May 1. This is about ten times as many as were being built last year at this time. Unfortunately only a few of these are to be for sale, but, according to Village Clerk Harold Ward, a member of the real estate firm of Paul L. Gillick, there are about forty modern houses already built now for sale. There's hardly a house to rent in the town.

Among those who are now building houses in Park Ridge for sale are William D. Noble, A. Lubbe, Edward Hansen, and James Rose. Mr. Noble reports one five room frame bungalow is ready May 1.

Plenty of Lots for Sale.

Proof of how Park Ridge is bound to grow is shown in the way the neighboring territory is being subdivided. The 200 acre McIntosh subdivision, northeast of the tracks, was completely sold last year. That means 375 new houses when all the lots are built on. Practically none of these will be for sale.

For the person who merely wants to buy a lot this year and build later there are several subdivisions being marketed or about to be. The old Murphy stock farm has been subdivided and 105 acres will be open May 1 for lot buyers. This is three blocks south of the station. The John R. Robertson subdivision contains forty acres and twenty new houses.

A last word for Park Ridge—there isn't a flat or a factory in the town and won't be if the present attitude of the residents continues.

H. L. Hollister to Build $50,000 Wilmette House

What promises to be one of the most elaborate homes in Wilmette is to be built at the northwest corner of Greenwood avenue and Twelfth street, by H. L. Hollister, real estate dealer. Architects E. J. Ohrenstein & Hild have drawn plans for a house with an eighty-foot front and a depth of thirty-six feet. It stands on a lot 200x99. It will be of tile and white cement, of the Italian renaissance style of architecture, and will cost $50,000.

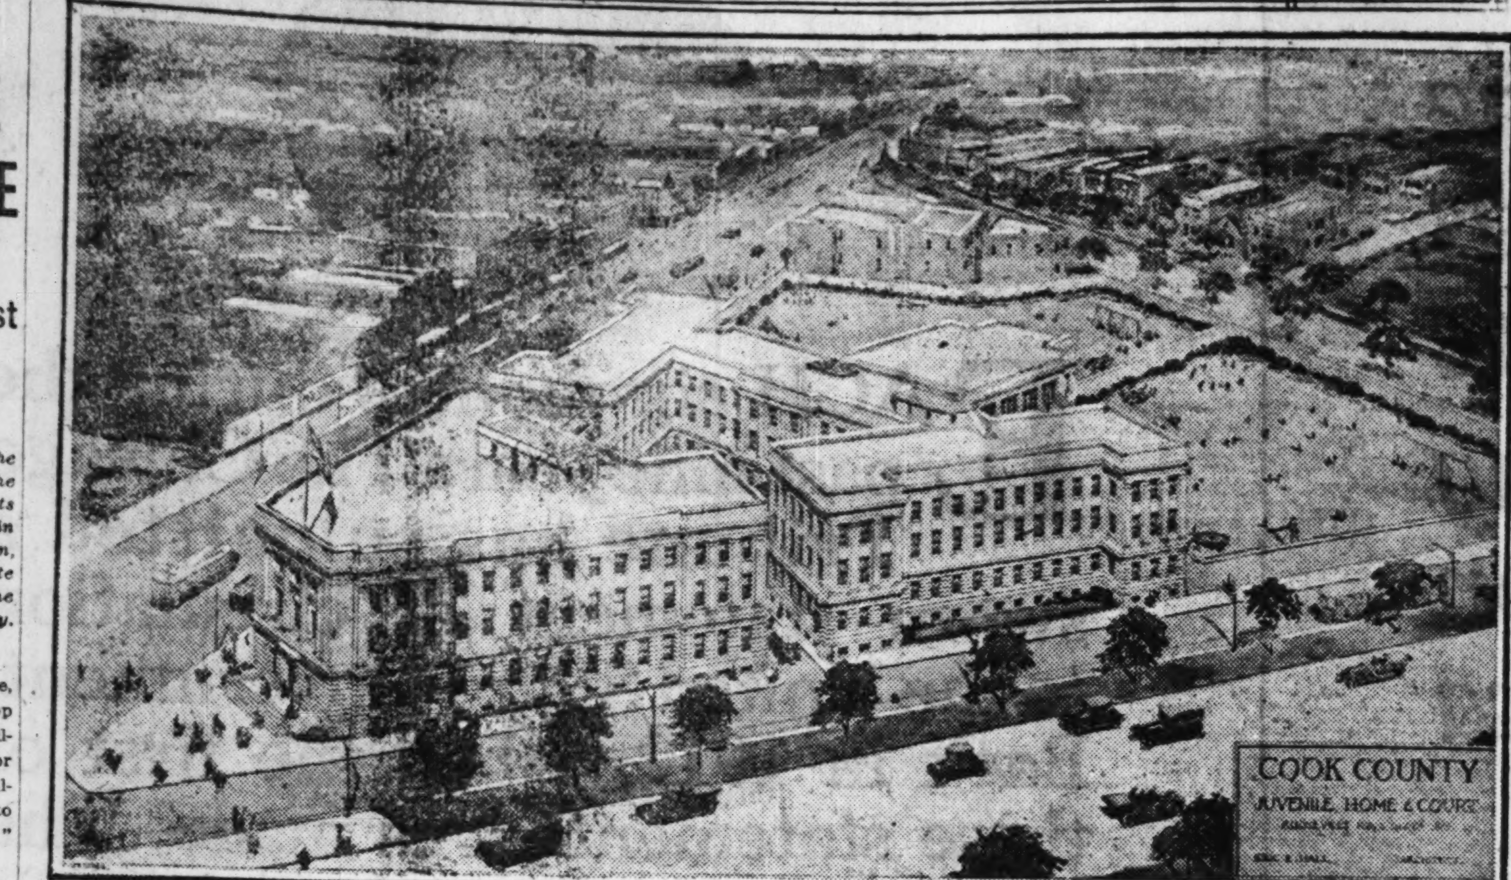
Well Located Business Property
Both Improved and Vacant



Work is expected to start within a few weeks, if present plans are carried out, on the world's finest group of buildings for the delinquent and dependent youth of Cook county, at the northeast corner of Roosevelt road and Ogden avenue and extending back to Leavitt street. The buildings will cost $1,000,000 and will be of stone up to the second floor and the balance of light colored brick. They were designed by County Architect Eric E. Hall.

CHICAGO TO HAVE WORLD'S FINEST COURT FOR KIDS

Chicago will have the finest group of buildings devoted to the dependent and delinquent youngster of any city in the world when the $1,000,000 Cook County Juvenile Home and Court at the northeast corner of Roosevelt road and Ogden avenue is completed. Work will begin shortly.

County Architect Eric E. Hall's plans call for two great structures containing five units. The main building at the intersection of the two streets named above will have two courtrooms and waiting rooms, Circuit court clerks' rooms, and girls' court on the first floor. All probation departments, record rooms, and state's attorney's offices will be on the second floor. The third floor will be left unfinished, for future development.

Administration Unit in Center.

The center unit will be the administration building for the Juvenile home, with offices, dispensary, kitchens, dining rooms, service, and laundry.

The unit back of this will be a school building, with classrooms, gymnasium, manual training departments, etc.

The south wing, on Roosevelt road, will be devoted entirely to boys and the wing on Ogden avenue to girls. The first floor of each building will be given over to the receiving and isolation departments; the second floor of each will be for dependent children, and the third floor for delinquents.

Boys' and Girls' Playgrounds.

There will be large playgrounds for both boys and girls on the Leavitt street side of the big triangular site. The group of buildings will care for 400 junior Chicagoans—more than twice the number now under Juvenile court care—which shows Architect Hall and the county board have planned for future growth.

If a suggestion made by the late president of the county board, Peter Reinberg, is carried out, a large statue of Roosevelt will be placed in front of the main building, overlooking the street named after him.

Sixty-third and Ellis Corner Brings $125,000

Charles Bobinsky has bought the southeast corner of Sixty-third street and Ellis avenue, 132x125, improved with seven stores and eighteen flats, from F. Herman Gade of Rio Janeiro, Brazil, for $125,000. O'Connor, Burke & McDonnell were brokers.

FACTORY FOR NORTHWEST SIDE.

Hartmann Bros., office furniture manufacturers, have bought 50x125 on Tripp avenue, 125 feet south of Bloomingdale road, from Beatrice Sunbart, and will break ground this week for a one story factory to cover the entire lot. Mills & Sons were brokers.

AS outlined in this department several months ago, one of the largest and most complete medical institutions in the city will be erected at the northwest corner of Rhodes avenue and Thirty-second street by the Illinois General Hospital and Cancer Research Foundation from plans by Architect Edmund Grossman. All patients' rooms will have large outside windows to the east, west, and south. There will be a number of three bed wards. There will be a special children's section with fifty beds, open air sleeping and play wards. An entire floor will be devoted to convalescents. The cost will be approximately $500,000.

$300,000 PAID FOR WAREHOUSES BY CURRIER-LEE

The Currier-Lee Warehouse company has bought from the Cribben & Sexton company for $300,000 the two warehouses at 427-43 West Erie street, which the buyers have been occupying for the last eight years under a lease which would have expired in 1933.

The property consists of two heavy mill constructed buildings, 200x109. This is the last of the former holding of the Cribben & Sexton company on the north side. This concern now has a large stove manufacturing plant at 680 Sacramento boulevard. E. J. Norcott of H. O. Stone & Co. handled the deal.

Kenmore and Wilson Ave. Corner Changes Hands

Ambrose J. Krier has purchased the three story building at the northeast corner of Wilson and Kenmore avenues, where he has a men's furnishings shop, for $35,000. The sellers are Adolf Schmidt, president of the Columbian Colortype company, and Joseph L. Strauss, treasurer of the same concern. Mr. Krier has leased the land at $15,000 a year and will be required to erect a building to cost not less than $100,000 within the next fifteen years.

George Neise, vice president of the Foreman Brothers' Banking company, bought the property six years ago for $55,000. Two weeks later he sold it for $85,000 to Mr. Strauss and Mr. Schmidt. The building fronts forty-three feet on Wilson and 125 on Kenmore.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The price paid by George Farnsworth to the widow of Hempstead Washburne for the residence at 1448 Astor street was $70,000, according to the brokers, and not $50,000, as reported in this department on March 17.

REALTOR NOTE

Robert M. McNair, associated with Sam Brown Jr. & Son for the last fifteen years, has opened offices of his own at 19 South La Salle street, and 4820 Lincoln avenue; phones Central 5932 and Ravenswood 4840. He will continue the mortgage and general real estate business.

LEASES

Gus Frank has acquired a lease from Pushman Brothers of the store at 14 South Wabash avenue in the Silversmith's building, for five years at a term rental of $75,000. After alterations the lessee will open a woman's specialty shop. He is now at 12 West Washington street. Warren A. Cahn was broker.

City Hall Official Buys Residence on Gold Coast

Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles E. Peace has purchased the ten room stone residence at 105 Bellevue place from Mrs. Harriette S. Whitmarsh, through Paul Steinbrecher & Co., for $20,000. Ruth H. Peace took title.

STORE BUILDING TO TAKE PLACE OF PROPOSED ARCADE

Following the abandoning of the plan to build an arcade between Wilson and Broadway, announced in this department last December, comes the news that George F. Nixon, of Nixon & Prassas, leased the property from the Northwestern L and then transferred his lease to the Nixon Stores Building corporation, of which he is president. The term rental is $276,000, or an average of $12,000 a year.

The property has a south frontage of 60 feet on Wilson avenue, east of the L structure, at numbers 1114-16 and extends north to Broadway, with a frontage on that street of 157 feet and is at 4646-54. It is 290 feet long on the east and 438 feet on the west.

Work will begin this week on a building to cover the entire property and to cost $120,000, from plans by Architect Arthur U. Gerber. There will be nine stores on Broadway, two stores on Wilson avenue, and the 12,700 sq. ft. of area between will be leased for a cafeteria. W. M. Brinkman and Charles E. Bates were brokers.

MORE ARCHITECTS JOIN ART COLONY ON NORTH SIDE

More additions to Upper Michigan avenue art colony. John Eberson, architect, now in the Steinway Hall building, has bought from John F. Gilchrist, trustee, the 50x125 at 210-212 East Superior street, partly improved with a three story brick and stone residence, for a reported $28,000. Mr. Eberson will take possession on May 1 and remodel for his offices.

Architect Albert S. Hecht, now in the Garrick Theater building, has bought from the Northern Trust company, trustee, the three story stone residence at 225 East Erie street formerly owned and occupied by Frederick Owsley for a reported $12,000. The Bowes Realty company, which handled these deals, reports other loop architects negotiating for north side offices.

Flats to Be Made Into Hollywood Arms Hotel

The three story fifteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Kenmore and Hollywood avenues, 150x150, has been leased by the Hollywood Arms Building corporation from Emil W. Carlson for ninety-nine years from April 1 at a reported annual rental of $28,000, or $2,772,000 for the term. The Hool Realty company was broker.

The lessee will furnish the building at a cost of $165,000 and operate it as an apartment hotel. It will be called the Hollywood Arms. The lessee agrees to erect within twenty-five years a $325,000 structure. The lessee also has an option to buy the fee title at any time during 1924, 1925, and 1926 for $325,000.

EACH six months during the past nine years The Chicago Tribune has submitted a sworn statement of circulation to the United States Government. Back in 1912, when the first of these statements was made, The Tribune had two generations of leadership behind it, and was considered by many to have attained the pinnacle of its development. Yet the current statement shows that since 1912 Tribune circulation has increased 109% Daily and 159% Sunday. Furthermore, The Tribune is still forging ahead, as evidenced by the averages for the month of March, which are substantially higher than those for the last six months period.
